MINERS O. K. OFFER: OWNERS BALK AT U. S. TERMS

LOOP BANKER OUSTED; SHORT NEAR $200,000

Standard Trust and Savings Admits $25,000 Gone.

James M. Miles was dismissed yesterday as vice president and director of the Standard Trust and Savings bank, Clark and Monroe streets.

The clearing house committee, which made an examination of the books, announced the action had been voted by the directors Friday night, after a partial statement from official circles said that $25,000 in peculations by Miles had been uncovered.

May Reach $200,000.

At State's Attorney Hoyne's office last night it was stated that Miles' total shortage is over $100,000 and may reach $200,000. This includes various amounts involving friends and other persons and institutions. All details of the audit have not been completed. Miles, it was said, obtained the money through fraudulent notes pushed at the bank.

Relatives and friends of the missing cashier were brought to the state's attorney's office for questioning.

Caught in Stock Market.

Miles had been an officer of the bank since its organization in September, 1910, serving for the first three years as cashier and the remainder of the time as vice president.

The president, Charles S. Castle, ascribed the shortage to unfortunate ventures in the stock market. Miles is reported to have been caught in the spectacular decline of a week ago Wednesday, when some shares fell 65 points.

Both Mr. Castle and the clearing house committee refused to detail the manner in which the funds and securities are said to have escaped from the bank vaults.

At Miles' residence, 1136 East Forty-eighth street, a man who refused his name, but intimated he was a brother-in-law, said Miles had left his home Friday and had not returned. He professed ignorance of Miles' present whereabouts.

Two men lingered near the residence throughout the evening. At police headquarters, however, it was denied a warrant had been issued.

Mr. Castle's Statement.

Mr. Castle's statement was waiting for a TRIBUNE reporter when he called. It read:

"Until very recently Mr. Miles has had my full confidence, and the irregularities disclosed by the examination of Mr. C. H. Meyer for the Chicago Clearing House association were my first intimation that Mr. Miles was not absolutely honest and reliable in every respect.

"It has, however, developed that he has appropriated to some extent not entirely determined funds and securities of the bank to an amount not exceeding $25,000. It appears that he has defrauded a number of his friends and other institutions. To what extent we have not as yet been able to determine.

"So far as we can ascertain, these losses do not in any way affect the bank. His domestic life has been well known to me during the period of his connection with the bank. It has been exceedingly clean in every respect. His associates have, to the best of my knowledge, always been of the highest grade. It appears that he has been speculating to some extent, and that the recent activity in the stock exchange market has been disastrous to him."

Clearing House Statement.

The statement of the clearing house committee, signed by the vice chairman, E. A. Hamill, had also been prepared in advance. It said:

"During an examination of the Standard Trust and Savings bank, Chicago, commencing on Tuesday morning, Nov. 18, 1919, as at the close of business Nov. 17, 1919, which examination was conducted by C. H. Meyer, examiner for the Chicago Clearing House association, irregularities of the bank's vice president, James M. Miles, were discovered.

"At a meeting of the board of directors held Friday night, the 21st instant, called at the request of the clearing house examiner, Miles was deposed as vice president, and the banks of Chicago were so notified.

"This examination, which lasted five

POET TO SEIZE ALL DALMATIA, SERBIA HEARS

Montenegro Goal, Too; Slavs to Fight D'Annunzio.

BELGRADE, Nov. 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—A semi-official statement just issued says:

"D'Annunzio's troops are spreading terror in Zara. Those of the inhabitants not wearing the armlet of Italian colors inscribed 'Italy or death' are insulted and attacked. The Jugo-Slavs are unprotected and have taken refuge in the houses.

"Italian officers have informed the Jugo-Slavs that D'Annunzio will arrive at Sebenico (seventy miles southeast of Triest) on Nov. 23 as 'Liberator of Dalmatia and protector of Montenegro, which is groaning under the most barbarous slavery.'

Going Into Dalmatia.

"According to a dispatch from Spalato, D'Annunzio intends to occupy the whole of Dalmatia as far as the Narenta and liberate Montenegro, giving it to Cattaro. The operation is being supported by a large part of the fleet and many troops.

"Dalmatia accordingly is awating prompt decisions by the Belgrade government against the Italian rebels."

Poet's Men Talk Sedition.

ROME, Nov. 22.—A semi-official statement issued here today says:

"A minority in D'Annunzio's forces, counting on the support of friends in the interior of Italy, persists in the idea of attempting seditious action against Italy itself."

The statement adds that during the first fortnight of November two of D'Annunzio's officers assured Rear Admiral Milo, commander of the Italian forces of occupation in Dalmatia, that no move against Dalmatia was contemplated. However, no one was allowed to enter or leave Fiume after Nov. 12 when plans for the Zara expedition were completed, the statement points out.

New Raids Are Feared.

A semi-official Stefani communication, detailing D'Annunzio's raid on Zara, says there are indications that expeditions have been planned for other Dalmatian localities and that the government will do its utmost to prevent them.

The government has taken all necessary measures, the communication asserts, and will consider as a crime any disturbance of the peace of the realm.

Complete order, it adds, reigns throughout the country.

Today's dispatches supplement a message received last night, which said the American embassy was actively engaged in watching the situation, which was reported as holding the possibility of serious development from hour to hour, as regards both Italy proper and the Dalmatian coast.

Situation Is Critical.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—The situation on the Adriatic as a result of Gabriele d'Annunzio's campaign has reached a crisis. Private advices leave no doubt that he is determined to annex Dalmatia and attack Montenegro.

The Jugo-Slavs are stated to be prepared to resist aggression.

Another report says a republican undercurrent directed against the Italian monarchy exists among D'Annunzio's forces.

D'Annunzio, it appears, has been stirred to further military efforts by the fact that the Italian elections were unfavorable to his cause. Many adventurers are flocking to his standard, reports state, and among a certain element there seems to be a desire to make him president of Italy.

QUIZ ATTORNEY ON 'TRIANGLE MURDER' STORY

Police Hunt Slayer of Gallagher on Telephone Tip.

Attorney Samuel G. Muffett of 1518 South Turner avenue, a former law partner of Attorney James P. Gallagher, who was shot down by an unidentified assailant Friday night, was taken to the state's attorney's office last night and questioned regarding a long statement he had made to THE TRIBUNE earlier in the day, setting forth that the jealousy of a rival in a love affair as a possible motive for the crime.

Morris Wilson, chief investigator for State's Attorney Hoyne, characterized Mr. Muffett's detention as the "most important pickup" so far made in the investigation and announced his intention of keeping the attorney in custody for the night, in the belief he might be able to throw more light on the murder.

Stirs Brother's Anger.

Muffett talked glibly. He accompanied his story of a love affair in which he says Gallagher was involved with gestures. His memory of trivial incidents appears so vivid he was checked up time and again by Wilson in his statements.

While he was telling his story W. J. Gallagher, cashier of the First National bank of Sterling, Ill., a brother of the slain man, characterized Muffett's story as "a deliberate concoction designed to blacken the character of his dead brother."

Hunt Slayer Suspect.

At the same time four detectives, under the guidance of Detective Sergeant William Kennedy, were scouring the south side in the vicinity of Forty-third street and Prairie avenue for a man whose description tallies with that of the murderer as described by witnesses to the shooting.

Chief of Detectives Mooney dispatched the squad in search of the man as a result of a telephone tip received at the bureau earlier in the evening.

Detail of Muffett Story.

Muffett, who has an office at 105 North Clark stret, first met Gallagher, he says, in 1911, when both were members of the freshman class at the Chicago College of Law. They were graduated together in 1915, were admitted to the bar, and went into partnership, opening an office in room 1309 Marquette building. This partnership continued for over two years. It was dissolved when Gallagher accepted the position with Gardner, Foote & Burns in the Corn Exchange Bank building.

He called up THE TRIBUNE yesterday afternoon, said he had important information to give, and later came to THE TRIBUNE office with a story involving Gallagher, a tall brunette, and a man with a swarthy complexion and "evil, slanting eyes."

Calls Up The Tribune.

He later told Wilson THE TRIBUNE first called him at 11 o'clock in the morning, but later modified this statement by saying he had found a memorandum in the office which he believed to be that of a telephone message from THE TRIBUNE.

THE TRIBUNE never heard of Mr. Muffett until he called the office on the phone and volunteered the information. That was at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

"Being a lawyer and knowing legal practice, why didn't you take this information to the police instead of to a newspaper?" answered Mr. Wilson.

"I didn't attach much importance to it," he said. "Besides, as it was Saturday afternoon, I didn't know whether the police captains would be on duty."

Muffett's story of the brunette woman as first told to THE TRIBUNE was not as complete as that later related to Chief Investigator Wilson.

Sees Mysterious Pair.

"I first saw this woman and this man about two years ago," said Muffett, "when Gallagher and I went a short distance north of Howard avenue on Evanston to look at two lots belonging to the estate of Mrs. Anna Koening which had been contested.

"It was Sunday, and we were walking north on Clark street.

"Suddenly Gallagher turned to me

MEXICAN GAME IS NEAR SHOWDOWN, OFFICIAL STATES

Situation Is Rapidly Nearing Snapping Point, Belief.

BY CAPT. KENT HUNTER.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—President Carranza has brought about a tense situation which may result in the withdrawal by the United States of its recognition of him as president of Mexico. The United States is firm in its belief that Carranza is and has been bluffing, and is now prepared to call his bluff and make the game of international jackpots that has been played between Washington and Mexico City for the last eight years, a showdown with all cards on the table and old hands in the discard.

Should certain phases of the situation now under consideration end in an open rupture with Carranza and the recognition upon which he has built his power be withdrawn, the United States would wait a reasonable time to allow Mexico to set her house in order, and, such a result failing to materialize, would intervene as in Cuba, the Philippines, and Porto Rico and make good government grow where previously have sprouted nothing but weeds of corruption and chaos.

Report Has High Sanction.

This declaration came today from a Secretary Lansing he gave out his inclose touch with the government's Mexican policy and is in a position to speak.

The Jenkins kidnaping and the oil decrees of Carranza have become irrevocably interlocked as a result of recent governmental correspondence, according to this official; and only the sudden adjournment of congress prevented action before that body, which might have caused the situation to get beyond control.

When the first Jenkins note was received in Mexico, Jenkins' release was effected; but the Carranza government refused positively to pay the ransom of the American consular agent.

Lansing Defines Yank Rights.

When this message was taken to Secretary Lansink he gave out his interview that "no American could expect rights in Mexico not granted to Mexicans themselves."

This interview, cabled to Mexico City, was evidently taken by Carranza as a withdrawal from the former American declarations in connection with the oil decrees, because the order went out from Mexico City to make the nationalization decrees effective at once.

Hearings of the subcommittee of the foreign relations committee which was to investigate Mexican affairs have been indefinitely postponed, according to Judge Dan M. Jackson, legal adviser to the committee.

Senator Fall, chairman, is at his home in Three Rivers, N. M., recuperating from the nervous strain of the treaty fight, and Senators Smith, Arizona, and Brandegee, Connecticut, cannot possibly reach the border before Dec. 1, it was stated.

U. S. Watchfully Waiting.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—So far as the state department was advised today, William O. Jenkins, American consular agent at Puebla, was still in the Mexican prison at that place, following his second arrest on charges of having connived at his own kidnaping.

The department was informed that its peremptory note of Nov. 20, demanding the immediate release of Mr. Jenkins and his freedom from further molestation, was delivered to the Mexican foreign office that evening by Charge d'Affairs Summerlin. It was stated that Carranza would be given a reasonable time to reply.

Angeles Executed, Report.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 22.—Gen. Felipe Angeles, reported captured several days ago by Mexican federal troops, was executed without court-martial, according to messages to Marias Garcia, secretary to Pancho Villa. The same report was generally circulated here today in all Mexican circles.

Davies, Beaten in Election, Now Loses His Booze

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Joseph E. Davies of Wisconsin, former chairman of the federal trade commission, and President Wilson's candidate for United States senator in the special election last year, was prepared for the long drought, but his preparations have been undone by robbers.

Mr. Davies, who decided to practice law in Washington when defeated for the senate, had stored in his fine home in the fashionable section of the city a reasonable supply of liquor for prohibition days, but wicked thieves traced the liquor to its lair and removed $1,520 worth.

THE MARCH OF CIVILIZATION

"Pa's down in the cellar makin' home brew, ma's gone to the beauty parlor, sister's in on the parlor floor shootin' craps for nickels, an' brother's out lookin' for a workless job. Say, you hain't got a cigaret, have you?"

MRS. BROOME'S $3,000 BRACELET STOLEN AT OPERA

In the foyer of the Auditorium theater, abutting on the boxes, there has appeared an unbidden guest.

As a result, Mrs. Thornhill Broome of 127 East Chestnut street, who attended the inaugural performance of opera last Tuesday evening, now mourns the loss of a $3,000 platinum bracelet, set with diamonds. Although the police were notified, news of the theft was suppressed until THE TRIBUNE learned of it last night.

During an intermission between the acts of the opera Mrs. Broome, walking with her husband in the foyer, placed her right hand to her throat to safeguard a necklace. The bracelet was on her left wrist. Because of the many promenaders there was much jostling. Mrs. Broome thought little of it when a man in evening clothes stumbled against her, begged her pardon and walked on. A minute later she missed the bracelet. The man could not be found.

Chief of Detectives Mooney was notified. Since then Detective Sergeant John Upton and George De Mar have been detailed as nightly attendants at the opera. Mrs. Broome is the daughter of John A. Spoor.

PULLS WIFE UNDER "L" TRAIN; HE'S DEAD; SHE LIVES

New York, Nov. 22.—Dragging his screaming wife behind him, Louis Greenburg, 32, a bookbinder, today threw himself in front of an elevated train and was crushed to death. Mrs. Greenburg was probably fatally injured.

Mrs. Greenburg was taken to a hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate a foot. Both arms were crushed and physicians said amputation of them likely would be necessary.

The woman told police she had had domestic trouble with her husband. When she was told her husband was dead she said, "I don't care. I didn't like him, anyway."

FIFTEEN DIE IN FIRE PANIC IN LOUISIANA

New Orleans, La., Nov. 22.—Fifteen persons were reported to have lost their lives in a fire at Villa Platte, La., tonight. A dance was in progress on the second floor of a restaurant building where the fire occurred, and most of the casualties were due to the rush to escape.

RADICALS INVITE FIGHT; 3 KILLED

Battle Starts Over Negro Agitator's Acts at Bogalusa, La.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Three alleged agitators were killed and one was perhaps mortally wounded this afternoon in a rifle and pistol battle with members of the Law and Order league at Bogalusa. The Law and Order men suffered only one casualty, Jules Leblanc, an ex-soldier, who was wounded in his right arm. Those killed were:

Williams, Lum E., president of the Central Trades and Labor council of Bogalusa.

Bouchillon, Walter, one of Williams' lieutenants.

Gains, Thomas, another of Williams' lieutenants.

S. J. O'Rourke was shot three times and probably will not survive. He is wounded in the left hand, right arm, and right lung.

Fight Starts Over Negro.

The shooting followed an attempt by Williams to prevent the arrest of Sol. Dakus, a Negro, who had been trying to organize the colored labor of Bogalusa.

City officers spent last night combing the Negro quarter of the city for Dakus. This morning they were informed Williams was hiding the man they wanted. That wasn't quite true. Williams rather was flaunting him. He had turned Dakus out of his hiding place and the Negro was parading Columbia street, one of the busiest thoroughfares of Bogalusa, with Bouchillon and O'Rourke as a guard of honor. Each white man carried a shotgun.

The "parade" was over before the officers reached Columbia street. It had lasted just long enough to serve notice on the townspeople that Dakus was under Williams' protection.

Radicals Are Trapped.

When the police learned the Negro was in Williams' garage, a whistle was sounded as a signal to the Law and Order league members to assemble at the city hall ready for action. About fifty of them, most of them ex-soldiers, responded. They marched on the Williams garage.

Williams was in his office with Bouchillon, O'Rourke, and Jim Williams, his brother.

"Come out, Lum!" called one of the officers.

"All right," agreed Williams. "I'll be right out."

Open Guns on Besiegers.

But he didn't come. After waiting several minutes the officer repeated his demand.

"If you want me, come and get me," was Williams' reply.

As he spoke one of his companions turned loose on the posse with a high powered rifle. It was in this fusillade that Lebianc was wounded.

The fire was returned with rifles and pistols. Perhaps fifty shots were exchanged. Then the battle was over, with three of the agitators dead and another dying.

WILSON TO ACT IF CONFERENCE MONDAY FAILS

Lewis Accepts 31% Raise; Too High, Operators Say.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—It is the government's next move in the coal strike crisis.

The miners today agreed to accept a compromise proposal for an increase of 31.61 per cent in wages, suggested by Secretary of Labor Wilson as meeting the increased cost of living.

The operators, charging that Secretary Wilson's figures were wrongly based and worked to the advantage of the miners, refused to accept the offer and determined to appeal to the government in the emergency, urging that it bring about some form of arbitration of the dispute which threatens calamity to the country unless more coal is speedily produced.

U. S. May Have to Work Pits.

In view of the fact that the miners have flatly refused three specific forms of arbitration, there is no one in official life who can suggest how arbitration can be forced unless the government should agree to operate the mines and to grant the workers a satisfactory increase pending a final agreement.

Acting President Lewis of the miners, when asked tonight if the men would return to work under government operation, said:

"The men will return to work if they are paid a wage on which they can properly support themselves and their families."

Mr. Lewis, after the operators had told him today that they were not ready to meet the miners' scale committee, said that the delay for which the operators were responsible was "criminal," and charged that some of the operators and representatives of other interests were openly attempting to prevent a settlement.

May Sign Separate Peace.

Mr. Lewis also declared that it might be possible for the miners to make settlements with groups of the operators who wanted to come to terms.

"I guess that would have a demoralizing effect upon the operators' organization," he said, chuckling.

The operators charge, in turn, that the miners are deliberately attempting to delay or prevent a settlement and some of them intimate that behind the deadlocked negotiations is a subtle move for a general uprising all over the country in the interest of a political labor party.

This the miners scoff at.

Meet Again Tomorrow.

Another conference between operators and miners has been scheduled for Monday morning. It is probable that both Secretary Wilson and Fuel Administrator Garfield will attend it to make a last desperate effort to bring about an agreement.

If they fail, what the government proposes to do is not known, but all agree that some drastic move must be made.

Production figures of bituminous coal showed that the output Thursday had reached 44 per cent of normal, and experts figured on this basis that the country could get along for fifteen more days without serious difficulty.

"Operators' Stall Criminal."

After the operators had postponed the joint conference set for this afternoon until Monday morning, Mr. Lewis said:

"This is an unjustifiable, a criminal delay. It is just the sort of delay we have been meeting during the weeks we have been attempting to reach a settlement. There are some individuals and interests openly working against a settlement. Men are haunting the corridors of this hotel attempting to prevent any sort of a compromise.

Mr. Lewis was asked whether he meant operators or people outside the coal industry.

"Operators and outsiders," he replied. "But they all want to see the strike continued. I will not identify these men.

Miners' Ultimate Offer.

"We have made three final proposals. We are willing to accept the figures of the secretary of labor as to the amount of increase.

"In addition, we insist on a seven-hour work day, with Saturday half-holiday, which is equivalent to Secretary Wilson's proposal of an eight-hour basis-to-bank day with a Saturday half-holiday.

"Our third proposal is, that internal conditions and questions affecting local districts be referred back to those districts."

Brewster Protests Increase.

The statement authorized by Chairman Brewster of the operators' committee of the central competitive field follows:

"We consider Secretary Wilson's figures as absolutely partisan. They are based on the wrong premise, being founded on the old pick-mining rate, instead of on the modern method of machine mining.

"More than 80 per cent of the coal in the central competitive field is now machine mined. In Ohio, where 50,000,000 tons are produced, 98 per cent is machine mined.

"The secretary's figures show a resort to technicalities to give the miners the best possible advantage.

Eighty Per Cent Boost in H. C. L.

"Secretary Wilson says in figures submitted to us yesterday that the cost of living has increased 80 per cent over 1914.

"If we grant the raises that he proposes, machine miners will receive 118 per cent increase over 1914, and men on day wage an increase of 131.7 per cent.

"Drivers, who, in 1914, received $2.84 a day now receive $5, and to whom we offered $6 a day, will receive 111 per cent increase.

"These figures we regard as impossible.

"We have gone our limit in offering the 20 per cent advance. We can go no further unless the government tells us to do so."

Secretary Explains Terms.

Secretary Wilson's analysis through which he reached his proposal of an increase of 31.61 per cent for the miners was as follows:

"As I view the attitude of the public toward the present dispute between the miners and operators in bituminous coal mining operations, they will not willingly submit to pay a cent more for coal than is necessary to give a just wage to the miners and a fair profit to the operators, but they are willing to pay any rate that is fair to all three. The question to be determined, then, is what that rate should be.

"The figures produced by the bureau of labor statistics for the three bituminous mining towns for which the workingman's family budget has been computed show an increase in the cost of living in these towns since December, 1914, of 79.8 per cent.

How Workingmen Live.

"Following are the computations:

Items of expenditure.	Per cent total expenditure.	Average per cent in prices Dec., 1914, to June, 1919.	Per centage Increase adds to family budgets.
Food	36.9	76.70	28.30
Clothing	16.8	128.30	21.55
Housing	10.3	17.75	1.83
Fuel and light	5.5	45.07	2.48
Furniture and furnishings	6.8	129.62	8.81
Miscellaneous	23.6	71.31	16.83
All items	.....	.....	79.80

"The run of mine pick mining price in the Pittsburgh and Hocking valley fields in 1914 was 64.64 cents a ton. Adding 79.8 per cent to 64.64 cents gives an increase of 51.58 cents a ton. Since December, 1914, the miners in the Pittsburgh and Hocking valley fields have received an increase of 23 cents a ton.

Sum of 28.58 Cents Reached.

"Twenty-three cents deducted from 51.58 cents leaves a balance of 28.58 cents as the increase a ton necessary to make the Pittsburgh and Hocking valley mine run pick mining rates equivalent to the present increase in the cost of living.

"In 1914 the mine run pick mining rate in the Danville district, Illinois, and the Indiana bituminous field was 61 cents a ton. Adding 79.8 per cent to 61 cents makes an increase of 48.67 cents a ton. The increase in the mining rate since December, 1914, has been 23 cents a ton.

"Deducting the 23 cents from 48.67 cents leaves a balance of 25.67 cents as the increase a ton necessary to bring the Danville and Indiana mine run pick mining rates up to the equivalent of the present cost of living.

Basic Price for Negotiations.

"These mining rates have always been accepted as the basic prices upon which flat advances or decreases should be computed in order to avoid changing the differentials between different kinds of mining.

"Assuming that the Pittsburgh and Hocking valley rates and the Danville and Indiana have actual weight, and, taking the average, we arrive at 27.12 cents a ton as the increase that would be necessary to bring the miners to the equivalent of the present increase in the cost of living, which would be fair to the public, fair to the operators, and fair to the miners.

"An increase of 27.12 per ton would be 30.94 per cent increase on the present Pittsburgh and Hocking valley rates and 32.28 per cent increase on the present Danville and Indiana rates, or an average increase of 31.61 per cent.

$1.58 Raise to Day Men.

"Applying this increase to the rate to drivers, which has also always been the basic rate upon which a flat advance to day wage workers has been computed, we get 31.61 per cent of $5, or $1.58 as the advance a day in wages of day men.

"On the same basis yardage and dead work should be increased 31.61 per cent.

"To summarize: There should be a flat increase in mining rates of 27.12 cents per ton, a flat increase in day wages of $1.58, and an increase in yardage and dead work of 31.61."

Pledge Broken, Gompers Says.

In an address before the Central Labor union here tonight President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor reiterated his claim that the injunction ordering United Mine Workers' officials to cancel the coal strike order was a direct violation of a pledge given to labor by high government officials at the time of the passage of the Lever food control act.

He said labor officials were promised that the act would not be applied to workers in the case of strikes or walkouts.

He also quoted telephone conversations between Secretary Wilson and himself, as recorded by his stenographer; and from correspondence with Secretary Wilson regarding the application of the Lever act.

Mr. Gompers read excerpts from the Congressional Record quoting statements by Representative Lever, Democrat, South Carolina, to the effect that the Lever bill was never intended to repeal or amend the labor provisions of the Clayton anti-trust act.

Evelyn, now dependent upon cold charity for her existence, coos and kicks her little pink feet, and doesn't seem to mind it at all.

OFFER TO MINERS MEANS 45 CENTS A TON TO PUBLIC

Effect of Wage Project Upon Consumers Analyzed.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

How much will Secretary Wilson's proposal to the miners boost the price of coal to the consumers?

If the operators, middlemen and retailers will be satisfied with their present profits, then the coal price will only be increased to meet the proposed added cost of production.

The mine owners have heretofore claimed that each time 1 per cent is added to the wage scale, 1¾ cents must be added to cover the cost of producing coal at the mine mouth. Assume self-interest of the operators urged them to make a liberal estimate. Reduce their figure of 1¾ cents to 1½ cents.

45 Cents a Ton Minimum Raise.

That will add between 45 and 50 cents a ton to the cost. That can be reasonably expected as a minimum boost. If the operators and retailers—and the middlemen, where they can squeeze in—add to their profits, the additional cost of coal to the consumer will be advanced accordingly.

The proposed increase of Secretary Wilson—who was once a miner—is larger than anything given the coal diggers in the last seventeen years. Only once in that period, November, 1917, during the war, have the miners approached such an increase. At that time the scale went up approximately 20 per cent.

Wage Raise Over 30 Per Cent.

In the proposition of Secretary Wilson there seems to have been an effort to get the increase above 30 per cent. The shift men are to get 31.61 per cent and the miners 27.12 cents. In the southern part of the state, where the wage scale is 81 cents a ton, the adding of 27.12 cents means an increase of 33.48 per cent. In the Springfield district, where the past rate was 84.7 cents a ton, the percentage of increase is around 32.

In the northern part of the state, where the production cost is high and the discarded scale in some places as much as $1.14, the percentage of increase would be lower for the miners. But these mines ship little coal to Chicago. Of the soft coal from Illinois, Chicago's supply comes principally from Franklin, Williamson, Saline, and other southern counties.

Under the scale effective when the strike was called most of the shift men at "the bottom" received $5 a day. They are such men as the cagers, track layers, timbermen, and blockers. They are on the road to get a raise from 62½ cents an hour to 82 cents, or from $5 to $6.58 a day, if the hours of labor remain at eight.

Pick and Machine Mining.

The scale for miners is primarily based upon the cost of pick mining. In a few mines around Springfield pick mining is still the practice. There the miner will get 84 cents plus the increase. South of Springfield, in the Taylorville district and in the southern Illinois field, machine mining has supplanted pick mining. In those places the miner's wage rate means the amount the operator pays per ton for coal loaded in the pit cars. He subtracts from the wage scale an agreed price per ton for the repair and upkeep of machines and tools. Then the man and helper, who operate the machine which undermines the coal, gets a part of the ton rate. The loader, who shovels the coal into the pit cars, gets the remainder.

To illustrate: A wage scale for 81 cents a ton, gives the mine owner 7 cents for the repair of tools, approximately 10 cents to be divided between the machine runner and helper, and 64 cents to the loader, who is popularly known as the miner.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 22.

MINERS and operators attempting to settle the coal strike appeared in a worse deadlock than ever tonight after the miners had accepted and the operators rejected a compromise proposal of Secretary of Labor Wilson for a 31.61 per cent increase in wages to make up for cost of living advances.

The operators charged that Wilson's figures were falsely based and advantageous to the miners, and the miners charged the operators with criminally delaying negotiations.

The operators announced that they had gone as far as they could and appealed to the government to force some means of arbitrating the difficulty.

PRESIDENT WILSON has denied reports that he seeks to oust Senator Hitchcock from leadership in the treaty fight.

SENATOR WARREN G. HARDING of Ohio is about to come out as a self-confessed aspirant for the Republican presidential nomination. A forerunner of this came today when a statement appeared from Harry M. Daugherty, one of Ohio's Republican leaders, authorized by Senator Harding, declaring that Senator Harding is the man the country wants.

PROSPECTS for ratification of the peace treaty through compromise reservations faded today when some of the mild reservation senators said no progress was being made.

THE state department has had no reply from Gen. Carranza to its ultimatum demanding release from imprisonment of American Consular Agent William O. Jenkins, but has heard that Jenkins is still in jail. Carranza will be given a reasonable time to reply to and act on this government's demands before any further action is taken.

CHICAGO GETS FIRST CHILL OF COAL SHORTAGE

"L" Trains Heatless as Factories Scrape Bins to Run.

While Secretary Wilson, labor leaders, and operators were bickering in Washington yesterday, Chicago went about its important business of coal conservation.

Chicagoans began to feel the real pinch of the shortage when they boarded elevated cars yesterday. There was no heat. The surface lines expect to follow this lead next week. For the present they are saving coal by reducing speed.

The elevated roads will be without heat until the strike is settled, it was said.

Factories Scrape Bins.

Several Chicago factories operated yesterday only by scraping their bins to the bottom.

Among the major plants at the stock yards reported in straits is the Cudahy Packing company. An unofficial report stated that the company had little more than a five days' supply on hand. It may be the first of the packingtown concerns to yield.

The A. H. Andrews Manufacturing company consumed its last day's supply. There are 400 men employed.

The United States Gypsum company, with offices in Chicago, reported that several of its mines outside the city had suspended. Several other mines of the concern will be at a standstill next week unless coal is received.

The James S. Kirk Soap company has been caught short. The Interstate Iron and Steel company has three days' supply. The Studebaker corporation at South Bend, Ind., is in a precarious position, while the American Glue company has closed three plants.

Plants Face Closing.

Other concerns facing a standstill are the Oliver Plow works at South Bend, the Kankakee Tile and Brick company, Leader Iron works at Decatur, Railway Steel Springs company at Chicago Heights, and the county hospital at Edwardsville, Ill.

The blame for the shortage in Chicago is laid to the railroad administration by A. S. Allais, president of the Columbus Mining company.

"Only 71 per cent of the cars needed to haul the products of the nonunion bituminous fields have been supplied," he said. "Of the 140,000 tons mined between Nov. 1 and Nov. 18, 35,000 tons would have been sent to Chicago had the rail facilities been afforded."

Ask Better Car Service.

A protest has been sent to all regional directors in an effort to remedy the situation. A former protest sent to Director General of Railroads Walker D. Hines has received little consideration, Mr. Allais said.

Samuel Insull, head of the Commonwealth Edison company, stated that the company had enough coal for present needs.

"The Edison company is not pressed," he declared. "There is nothing alarming in the situation."

Vice President Louis A. Ferguson of the Edison company said the company was "taking its medicine religiously."

"We realize that a shut down of our company means a shut down of the city, so we are conserving accordingly," he stated.

The Illinois Maintenance company, which provides heat for seventy loop office buildings, warned its patrons to shut down on heat where possible.

George W. Reed and T. W. Proctor of the northwestern regional coal committee, have appealed to mayors of all cities and villages in the region to cooperate in the emergency.

Approximately 20,700 tons from the West Virginia mines were distributed in Chicago yesterday by the fuel committee. Retailers received 41 per cent, public utilities 50 per cent, and manufacturers 9 per cent.

Trains Safe for Time.

W. T. Tyler, director of operations of the United States railroad administration, stated before he left for Washington, that no curtailment of passenger trains would be officially made until every nonessential industry is shut down.

Coal dealers and real estate men in Chicago are agreed that apartment houses will be cold unless a strike settlement is effected soon.

There is enough coal to keep the Chicago public schools open until Jan. 1, according to President Davis of the school board.

OHIO CO-ED SHOT; JEALOUS RIVAL UNDER ARREST

Delaware, O., Nov. 22.—Miss Blanche Davison, a 19 year old freshman at Ohio Wesleyan university, was under arrest here tonight, and Miss Gladys Racey, 19, a sophomore, was in a hospital suffering from a bullet wound, as the aftermath of a love affair involving a student of Ohio State university. Police said Miss Davison had confessed to the shooting, giving jealousy as the cause.

Miss Racey was shot in a hallway of the university here. The .22 caliber revolver was found on the stairway wrapped in a silk stocking. Miss Davison was immediately taken into custody.

After a brief grilling, police stated, Miss Davison said the Ohio university student had forsaken her for Miss Racey. This so angered her that she obtained a revolver and waited for several days before an opportunity to use it presented itself, police said she told them.

Miss Racey's wound is not serious, physicians said. She does not want to prosecute the girl, police were told.

Ohio Strike Officials Seized on Charge of Syndicalism

Youngstown, O., Nov. 22.—Charged with criminal syndicalism, J. E. McCadden, secretary-treasurer of the steel strike committee for the Youngstown district; John Klinski, Washington county, Pa., and Frank Koraski, Scranton, Pa., coal mine organizers, were arrested tonight in East Youngstown as they returned from a strikers' meeting at Coitsville. All were released for hearing Monday morning under $3,000 bond each.

COAL DEALER AND OTHERS INDICTED ON PLOT CHARGE

Months of Inquiry Also Promise to Reopen Allied Cases.

The grand jury returned an indictment yesterday charging J. L. Ray, president of the East Bros. Coal Co., which operates extensively in the city, with conspiracy to defraud.

Similar indictments were returned against John Epgrave, manager of the firm, and Elmer D. Fink, boiler engineer for the Beckley-Ralston company, dealers in automobile accessories at 1401 South Michigan avenue.

The jury acted at the instance of the Retail Coal bureau of Chicago, an organization financed by a number of prominent dealers.

Months of Inquiry.

Several months ago, the bureau, which Robert L. May is secretary, launched an investigation of the entire retail trade through the James H. McQueeny Investigating agency. Subsequently, May and McQueeny caused the arrest of East, Epgrave, and Fink on the charge that the East Bros. Coal company had delivered fuel at Fink's residence gratis in exchange for his promise to sign bogus delivery slips against the automobile firm.

At the same time Mortimer L. Flynn of the Pottinger-Flynn Coal company, holder of numerous city contracts; J. D. Hanrahan, scale clerk for the firm, and William J. Brown, engineer for the Mid-City Bank building, Madison and Halsted streets, were taken in custody on warrants obtained by the bureau, charging a similar offense.

Defendants Released.

Flynn, Hanrahan, and Brown were first arraigned before Judge Hugh R. Stewart in the South Clark street court and released. The East case was then dropped, but later reinstated, and now the indictments are returned.

According to May and McQueeny, who charge that the frauds uncovered by the bureau total several hundred thousand dollars, the case against Flynn, Hanrahan, and Brown will now be reinstated and pressed.

"The clerk," McQueeny said, "confessed to have passed the bogus delivery slips by which the Mid-City fuel was mulcted."

ALLIES PREPARE TO ACT WITHOUT AID OF AMERICA

U. S. Army in Germany Gives a Puzzle to Conference.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Nov. 22.—"Dead, but not buried," is what the American peace headquarters thinks about the German peace treaty status, since the United States senate adjourned without ratifying it.

The American delegation, which consists solely of Henry White and Frank Polk, as Gen. Taskar H. Bliss confines himself solely to military affairs, still is awaiting advices from Secretary of State Lansing regarding what position the American commission should take henceforth in the peace conference relations.

Although Mr. White says that he has received nothing yet from Washington, he believes the treaty will be submitted again to the senate when it reconvenes, and that meanwhile a compromise will be reached.

Other Allies Study Effect.

Other members of the supreme council studiously refrain from mentioning the senate's action before the Americans, but the British, French, Belgians, Italians, and Japanese have had secret meetings since the senate adjourned, discussing the situation as it effects them.

One point which the allies are examining is what will be the United States' position after the exchange of treaties on Dec. 1. At present the armistice exists for the Germans as well as for the allied powers. But on the ratification exchanges the state of peace will succeed the armistice, and since the senate turned down the treaty the state of peace will not exist between the United States and Germany. The allies fear that Germany will insist that the American troops be withdrawn from the German territory on the ground that a state of peace exists. But the United States refused to ratify the treaty under whose terms they should occupy the bridgehead for fifteen years.

THINK WILSON ERRED

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

LONDON, Nov. 22.—It is possible to state on the authority of a man close in touch with 10 Downing street that Premier Lloyd George's view is that the American senate's action on the peace treaty is the greatest possible vindication of the English plan for a coalition government for the war and the following period of negotiation and reconstruction.

The premier believes that if Mr. Wilson had formed a coalition government or even included some responsible Republicans in the peace commission, the present situation would not have arisen. This will be used as a strong argument for the continuance of the British coalition, which is now becoming rather shaky.

Prefer Direct Alliance.

On the whole, responsible politicians here are not deeply disappointed at the senate's action on the league, as British statesmen much prefer an Anglo-Franco-American alliance and hope that the failure of the general treaty will not vitiate the triple alliance entered into tentatively for the defense of France ratified conditionally yesterday by France and England.

There also is hope that the new session of the senate will agree to the treaty with some reservations and modifications which will be possible of acceptance by the allies.

British public opinion outside of political circles frankly is dismayed by the senate action and full of hope that it will be reversed. The British business man looks forward with terror to financing the maintenance of world peace and policing without American aid and genuinely feels it is America's duty to help in the burden of preserving world order, which it has done so much to establish.

England and France United.

Meantime it is likely efforts will be made to hold up further action on the general treaty pending the reassembling of the senate, in the hope of a change of attitude in the new session.

The immediate effects of the senate's action has been to cause a closer rapprochement of England and France, and there is some talk of a general European alliance for the preservation of peace, with America left out. But that has not yet been seriously considered.

LABOR UNIONS IN GERMANY SHOW A BIG INCREASE

BY PARKE BROWN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—Fifty-four labor organizations, which recently formed the General Trades Union Association of Germany, claim on their books a total of 6,400,000 members. Last June their total was only 4,800,000. In other words, organized labor in Germany is conducting an active campaign for membership which is meeting with big success.

Nearly all the unions had about the same experience during the war—a sharp falling off in membership the first year, then a gradual recovery, and since the war a rapid increase.

Princeton Men Honored for Valor During the War

Princeton, N. It also was shown that 142 Princetonians made the supreme sacrifice.

"OUR OWN" MARY GARDEN

Back from France to Join the Ranks of the Chicago Opera Company This Week.

Here is Mary Garden as she appeared when she arrived on board the French liner La France last Wednesday. Now that she has had experience in the movies she doesn't mind having her picture taken.

Miss Garden was expected in Chicago yesterday, but somehow she failed to arrive. It was announced, however, that triumphant entry with her gown of a thousand mirrors would surely take place Tuesday. She will sing Cleopatra Thanksgiving night.

But the Twentieth Century yesterday was not entirely devoid of operatic wizards. An excited delegation of Italians was on hand to welcome Sig. Marinuzzi, the new conductor, and his signora. He is the composer of "Jacqueri," which will be given its first Chicago presentation within a few weeks. He says it is "grandissimo."

BERLIN DIVIDED UPON EFFECT OF SENATE ACTION

Some Germans Fear They Will Lose by Attitude.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—Commenting on the failure of the United States senate to ratify the peace treaty, the Vorwaerts says:

"As Germany has only undertaken to submit to the dictates of commissions made up according to stipulations laid down in the peace treaty, Germany could take the stand that she will not recognize the decrees of commissions otherwise constituted.

"It is questionable, however, whether fresh peace negotiations would bring grist to Germany's mill in view of the prevailing situation of the powers.

May Stop the Gaps.

"Therefore, it is to be expected the German government will cooperate in endeavors to stop the gaps produced by America's retirement. Recognition at any rate is to be expected.

"On the other hand, Germany has the right to be anxious about the consequences of American retirement and to seek protection against its possible effects. Even if an essential alteration of the European situation is not to be expected from America's retirement, it means great alteration in the world situation."

Financial and political circles are confining their speculation with respect to the United States senate's ultimate action on the peace treaty to consideration of the possible effects of ratification of the treaty in which the United States has no participation.

Divided on the Effect.

Opinions are divided. On one hand, it is assumed that independent action on the part of the United States would prove favorable to Germany, in that it would accelerate the resumption of commercial relations on a liberal scale.

In other quarters fears are expressed that peace ratified only by the European entente powers would insure the latter an ascendant sphere of influence in various directions, which would react on Germany, in that it would make her "the playground of an economic free for all fight."

For the moment the government and financial circles are apparently more worried about the declining mark. They seem to realize that they are mere spectators of the senate proceedings.

MUST RETURN TO NIGHTCAPS, SAYS PARIS PHYSICIAN

PARIS, Nov. 22.—We will have to go back to wearing nightcaps, according to Dr. Louis Saint Maurice. Men and women alike, every one will eventually have to wear a woolen covering over his cranium to protect the head from colds and influenza, asserts this savant, who has studied the problem for several years.

The doctor gives these as added reasons for protecting the head:

"The average brain today is larger and heavier than it was 100 years ago. The brain is larger, but not the head.

"The protecting shell of bone is getting thinner to make room for the brain. Eventually, perhaps in another couple of hundred years, we shall have a race with skulls as thin and frail as eggshells, so that every one will have to wear constantly headguards like your American football players."

FOREIGN NEWS NOTES

LONDON.—"The Franco-British agreement with Japan regarding Shantung is held by many as nothing but a prelude to the dismemberment of China, by Japanese," Lord Crewe declared in an article in the Pall Mall Gazette.

In an analysis of the American senate's objections to the peace treaty with the league of nations Lord Crewe concluded that while the senate's action is a hard blow to the treaty the damage is not irreparable.

STRASBOURG—President Poincare is here to attend the reopening of Strasbourg university. He was enthusiastically welcomed at the station by a great crowd.

In his address at the university the president asserted that intrigues against France had failed miserably; the elections of last Sunday had proved this.

VIENNA.—[By the Associated Press.]—Addressing the national assembly on the resumption of the sittings last evening, Chancellor Renner drew a graphic picture of the plight of Vienna and the country and formulated demands upon the entente for relief. He demanded a definite program for provisioning, asking that the supreme council continue relief pending this, and if that were not immediately done Austria should be permitted to seek help herself from whatever source possible.

"WE ADMIRE U. S.," BRITISH EDITOR SAYS OF TREATY

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Shelving the peace treaty causes no consternation among the British press or public except among the radicals and socialists. The most patriotic press hails the senate action, if not joyfully, at least with undisguised satisfaction.

A fair sample of the majority press is the Morning Post, which editorially today says:

"To us the reason seems obvious. There are in America still citizens who have a robust faith in their own nation and a heartfelt pride in the sovereign freedom of the United States. What! The United States to be put under a foreign committee sitting in Switzerland! Shades of Washington and Lincoln! Such is the attitude of the Republican party and we admire that attitude. That is an attitude worthy of free men and of the citizens of a great republic. When we see Englishmen like Lord Robert Cecil laboring to place England under the junta at Berne we would wish to exchange him for such men as Senator Lodge, who is so proud of his country that he refuses to abate one jot of its sovereign rights."

ALFONSO MAY COME NEXT YEAR

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—That King Alfonso of Spain may visit the United States next year was the belief expressed here tonight by Viscount de Eza, representing the Spanish government at the international labor conference.

"The king greatly desires to visit the United States and will probably do so," said the viscount. "Just when it is hard to say. The date would be subject to the political situation in Spain. If things improve the king probably would come next year.

"Spain has forgotten all about the war it had with the United States and in Spain there is no hostility towards this country. On the contrary, there is a sincere admiration in my country for Americans."

COMPROMISE ON TREATY CHANGES SEEMS DUBIOUS

Peace Resolution Appears to Gain Supporters in the Senate.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Prospects of ratification of the peace treaty through compromise reservations became dimmer today, and the movement for the adoption of a peace resolution grew stronger.

Even Senator McCumber of North Dakota, mildest of the mild reservationists, said that no progress was being made in the direction of a compromise, and that not much could be expected in the way of concessions from either side.

"I am quite sure there can be no compromise on the Lodge program," Senator McCumber said, "and if the administration really wants the treaty it would better take it at once on the senate's terms. The only change in prospect in the Lodge program is that they may be made much worse."

Hitchcock Answers Lodge.

Senator Hitchcock, the administration leader, replying to the statement for Senator Lodge, published this morning, admitted that reservations would be necessary to put the treaty through the senate, but insisted that there must be a compromise.

Senator Hitchcock said: "Senator Lodge expressed the ardent wish to carry the treaty and the reservations which the senate defeated into the campaign as an issue. I regret to say that Senator Lodge is evidently thinking more of politics than he is of patriotism. To my mind the highest interests of the United States and of the world demand ratification of the treaty.

"Not Framed for Adoption."

"The reservations to which Senator Lodge refers in his statement did not even receive a majority vote of the senate, although the party which Senator Lodge leads controls the senate. His party is split on ratification in the senate as well as throughout the country.

"The reservations were not framed for the purpose of ratifying the treaty. They were framed for the purpose of making it impossible for many supporters of the treaty to vote for ratification in that form. The reservations were supported by fifteen senators who would not vote for the treaty under any circumstances and who voted against every form of ratification.

"Those senators, after helping Lodge to force those reservations upon the senate, voted 'No' when the resolution containing them came to a vote.

Predicts Agreement in December.

"Reservations in the ratification of the treaty are inevitable, but they must be framed and agreed to by senators who expect to vote for ratification. When the senate meets in December there will be eighty-one senators out of the ninety-six who favor ratification in some form. They are the ones to decide on what the reservations should be. When sixty-four of those senators can agree upon reservations, as I believe they can agree, ratification will take place."

Many senators have left the city to get a brief rest before the regular session begins and to learn what their constituents think of the rejection of the treaty. So far, the correspondence of senators has failed to reveal any sign of the promised earthquake of public disapproval in case the treaty failed. On the contrary, there has been an unexpected number of congratulatory messages.

Wilson Getting Stronger Each Week, Doctor Says

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—The passage of each week finds President Wilson materially stronger, in the opinion of Dr. F. X. Dercum, Philadelphia neurologist, who paid his weekly visit to Wilson's bedside today.

SINN FEIN WILL MODIFY TERMS, ON CONDITIONS

Irish Chiefs Are Ready to Compromise on Home Rule.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

LONDON, Nov. 22.—I have just been talking to a man who describes himself as the Irish ambassador to England, but declares that if his name were known his ambassadorial functions would be stopped by the British government. As a matter of fact, he is an agent of the Sinn Feiners looking after their propaganda and other business in London. He says the Sinn Fein are willing to enter discussions with the British government on the Irish settlement if the British talk officially to it.

"Dail Eireann, the elected representatives of the Irish people, are perfectly willing to talk with England if England recognizes it as a legal representative," he said.

Ready to Modify Terms.

I also gathered from this man that the Sinn Fein will accept less than an independent republic if satisfied that the offer of real dominion home rule is genuine, but it would be difficult for England to give satisfactory guarantees.

This indicates that the Sinn Fein are receding from the position of intransigeance previously held and are recognizing that they will lose the support of the great mass of moderate Irishmen if they refuse a fair compromise. Unofficial approaches have been made on both sides, but so far without definite results.

A new Irish home rule bill probably will be introduced in the commons soon, but the financial arrangements still are causing trouble and it is possible a bill may be passed, setting up a home rule government but leaving the finance issue to be decided later by a joint commission.

Comes to "Warn" Churches.

BELFAST, Nov. 22.—William Coote, member of parliament for South Tyrone, accompanied by a deputation of six prominent clergymen representing various churches in Ireland, is sailing for America today from Liverpool for the purpose of "putting before their churches in America the true position and the dangers which threaten their churches in Ireland by adoption of the Sinn Fein program."

Irish Attack Soldiers.

LONDONDERRY, Ireland, Nov. 22.—Soldiers returning to their barracks last evening were attacked and badly beaten by a crowd.

The police made an effort to assist them, but this proved fruitless and the troops were compelled to take refuge in the Salvation Army hall, from which they sent a telephone message for help.

A company of soldiers came to the rescue of the besieged men, the relief force advancing with fixed bayonets and dispersing the crowds, who shouted: "Up with Dublin! Up with the rebels!"

48 HOURS WEEK LABOR STANDARD FOR THE WORLD

Washington, D. C. Nov. 22.—Recognition of the principle of an eight hour day and 48 hour week was contained in a committee report completed today for submission to the international labor conference next week.

The committee, including delegates representing governments, employers and labor, arrived at an agreement by a series of compromises. The report will recommend endorsement of an international agreement applicable in all countries except Japan, India and other Oriental nations.

For continuous industries it was conceded that a 56 hour week should be authorized, and to make up for short day's such as may occur on Saturdays and holidays, that the time might be distributed through the balance of the week even to the extent of permitting nine hour days until the time was accounted for.

A minimum of "time and a quarter" was fixed for overtime.

JAPANESE IN SHANTUNG SEEK TO KEEP "RIGHTS"

TSING TAO, Shantung Peninsula, China, Nov. 19.—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Japanese residents of Tsing Tao, after a warm debate, have sent a memorial to the government at Tokio declaring that they will not surrender the rights they have acquired in Shantung.

View of Japanese Chief.

TOKIO, Nov. 19.—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—Viscount Kikujiro Ishii, former Japanese ambassador to the United States, commenting today on the reservation adopted by the United States senate on the clause in the German treaty concerning Shantung, said he doubted whether the other powers would approve the reservation.

The senate's action, he declared, probably would revive the drooping spirits of the Chinese, who lately evinced an inclination to open negotiations with the Japanese.

"The reservation will have no practical effect on the validity of the Shantung stipulation, since all the rights are in the hands of Japan and the question can hardly be submitted to the league of nations," Viscount Ishii continued. "The only effect America obtains is the good will of China. However, the reservation may place an obstacle in the way of the Chino-Japanese negotiations, resulting in an unfavorable situation both for China and Japan, as well as for America, in the far east."

Death Does Not Exempt Even High Priced Bulls

Middletown, N. Y., Nov. 22.—The famous Holstein Fresian bull, King Segis Pontiac Alcartra, valued at $50,000, died today. It was owned by John H. Arfmann of Fairmont farm.

ALLIED COUNCIL DECIDES RULE FOR GALICIANS

PARIS, Friday, Nov. 21.—The agreement in the supreme council to grant Poland a mandate over eastern Galicia under the league of nations settles one of the most disturbing questions with which the allies have had to deal concerning Poland.

By the terms of settlement Poland is to be the mandatory for twenty-five years, which is believed to be long enough time to secure immediate peace in the troubled territory.

At the end of twenty-five years the league of nations will have the right to decide how Galicia's future is to be determined, or whether a plebescite shall be held. But, the Poles say, in twenty-five years they will have had time to reconcile the race differences and give an effective administration, which, they believe, will win over the Ruthenian population and reconcile them to Polish sovereignty.

Under the agreement Galicia is to have a certain amount of autonomy, and eastern Galicia will in a way be federated with Poland. Lemburg and several other cities of considerable size in the territory will be affected by the settlement.

SERGT. YORK AND BRIDE LOOK OVER CITY UNMOVED

Chicago's Dirty and Zoo Lacks Rhinoceros, the Hero's Wife Says.

Sunday school teachers of Chicago are warned not to be surprised if a tall, husky man with red hair and a red mustache wanders into class this morning and takes a seat. For Sergt. Alvin C. York, declared to be the world's greatest war hero, is in town, and the sergeant admits a great liking for Sunday schools.

With him at the Hotel Sherman is his bride of five months, who, as Miss Gracie Williams, waited in the mountains of Tennessee while Alvin was officiating at a wholesale conquest of Huns across the Atlantic. Not a word regarding his heroic achievements did he mention in his letters, and Gracie didn't know what a famous man she was engaged to until some one showed her his record as published in a popular weekly magazine.

He Lets the Other Fellow Talk.

"Wall," explained the sergeant yesterday, "we've learned in our country down there that if we do anything worth talkin' about the other fellow can do the talkin'."

And so he refused to talk about his own famous exploit when he advanced through a heavy machine gun fire, killed twenty Germans, and captured 132 more.

"Those are things us boys want to get just as far away from as possible," he said.

The sergeant and his bride refuse to become excited about our town. Mrs. York finds Chicago too dirty and she lost all interest in the Lincoln park zoo when she learned it contained no rhinoceros.

Movies and dancing and jazz music are taboo in the lives of Sergt. York and his wife, for they can't help but feel that such things aren't exactly "right."

No "Reds" in the Hills.

And as for bolsheviks—

"The American Legion boys and the I. W. W. don't seem to agree exactly, do they?" observed the sergeant. "Wall, I've never met a bolshevik face to face. We haven't got any of 'em down in the mountains. The American Legion stands for peace, not unrest, and so far as I can make out the I. W. W. stands for the opposite. But at present I'm not expressin' my opinion any more."

Next Tuesday evening he will lecture in Orchestra hall for the benefit of the York foundation, which he has organized to provide educational facilities for the mountain children of Tennessee and Kentucky. Meanwhile the hunting season is on down home and Gracie and her man yearn to return.

You Must Rush Your Yule Gifts to Men in Siberia

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—Owing to an advance in sailing date, the war department announced today that Christmas packages for soldiers in Siberia must reach Fort Mason, San Francisco, by Nov. 28.

Important Notice!

(to all prospective purchasers of pianos, grands and players)

WE believe it again necessary to inform the public that we do not and will not pay commissions for any reason whatever to purchasers of pianos. Recently we have had an unusual number of calls from individuals bringing in friends and prospective purchasers, thinking that they would receive liberal commissions. This great successful musical instrument house attributes its year after year growth to its honest methods of doing business. Our slogan always has and always will be "one price to everybody, a commission to nobody." The selection of a piano in this store is easy—every instrument is marked in plain figures and that is the only price. Music teachers and professional pianists do not receive commissions for choosing or selecting pianos at this store. A little later we are going to tell you why we are the world's largest music house.

QUIZ ATTORNEY ON 'TRIANGLE MURDER' STORY

Police Hunt for Slayer of Lawyer Gallagher on a Telephone Tip.

and said: 'Wait a minute, Sam. Here's a girl I know.'

"I looked across the street and there was the woman, a beautiful, well dressed, brunette.

"She was accompanied by the swarthy man, whom I saw on a later occasion at closer range, and who made such an impression on me I could pick him out in a thousand.

"The woman was glad to see Gallagher. She rushed half way across the street to meet him. Her hand was extended and there was a pleased smile on her face.

Rival Departs in Anger.

"They talked earnestly for about twenty minutes, while the man, apparently angry, paced nervously up and down on the other side of the street. After about ten minutes he stopped, shot an angry glance at the couple, and strode rapidly away.

"Gallagher talked with the woman a few moments longer, walked about a block down the street with her, then bade her good-bye.

"'There's the only girl I ever had any attachment for, Sam,' he said when he rejoined me. 'If I had $10,000 today I'd try to make her my wife. I've known her since she was a little girl. This man has been after her for four or five years, but she hates him like poison.'

Scorns "Rival Suitor."

"About two months after that the man came to our office in the Marquette building and asked to see Gallagher, who was out. He appeared to be angry, and after waiting a few moments left.

"When I told Gallagher about the visit he said: 'I don't want to see him. That damned fool has been up to see me several times. He wishes me to keep away from that girl.'

"The man is of medium height, with a swarthy skin, dark, almost almond shaped eyes that have an odd, wicked look, and dark hair. I would recognize him anywhere. The woman is about 25 years old."

Brother Assails Muffett.

W. J. Gallagher, the slain man's brother, flared up to the boiling point when informed of Muffet's story of a mysterious woman in his brother's life. He came to Chicago to prepare for the burial.

"That's a cooked up story by a man who is seeking newspaper publicity," he said. "I never heard of Muffet, and if he had been a friend of Jim's he certainly would have told me, as we were as close as brothers could be.

"There was no hidden side to Jim's life. Any one who knew him will testify to his morals and character. Muffett's yarn is a slander, and it hurts me and the folks because Jim is not here to speak in defense."

"Holdup—Nothing More."

"He would have told me if he was in trouble—either with women or in business. It was a plain case of attempted holdup—nothing else."

"I would like to meet Muffett face to face. It seems strange he would volunteer information of this kind when there is no other witness.

"Mr. Morrow or any member of the law firm which employed my brother will tell you he was too big in soul and mind to risk his future in a juvenile's love affair.

"Jim" spent his vacation during August at our home in Sterling. At that time he told me of the extra time he had been working in an effort to reach the top in his profession. That was his hobby—he wanted to be a successful lawyer.

"Mr. Morrow told me that Jim was not mixed in any legal cases which might have brought enemies. Neither was he in the habit of speculating. I am convinced he did not have bonds in his possession at any time Friday.

"He was simply a martyr to a crime ridden city."

Seek Clews in Letters.

While First Deputy Alcock and Chief of Detectives Mooney were searching for a possible clew to the murderer among the private papers and personal correspondence of Attorney Gallagher, obtained at the Walshe home, at 4905 South Michigan avenue, Morris Wilson, chief investigator for State's Attorney Hoyne, sent detectives to the offices of Gardner, Foote & Burns, in the Corn Exchange Bank building, to go over the attorney's legal file there.

It was found Attorney Gallagher had pressed a claim for $127 against John Regina, owner of a private bank at 2027 West Chicago avenue. Regina, an elderly man, was questioned by detectives. Although convinced he knew nothing of the murder, they served him with a subpœna to appear before the state's attorney.

Regina said he had been dunned by Gallagher for $127 which he owed to Amelia Parodi & Co. He declared he had paid the debt in part to A. Copollino, an employé of that firma. Attorney Gallagher's file also showed he had pressed a claim for the money against Copollino and had threatened to turn him over to the state's attorney unless he paid the money.

Search for Copollino at his home, 2735 North Halsted street, developed the fact he had been out of town for some time and therefore could have had no knowledge of the murder. Copollino had returned to the city, however, and when taken to Hoyne's office he convinced the investigators of his innocence. Investigation along this line was dropped.

Say Two Men Dealt Death.

Detective Sergeants Peter Christianson, John Klaus, and Patrick Roche of the state's attorney's office brought in every witness to the murder they could find, to be questioned thoroughly by Chief Investigator Wilson. Two new women witnesses were found, who claim two men were implicated in the slaying.

One of these was Miss Margaret Rupp, 2720 South Michigan avenue, who lives almost directly across the street from the United Motors building, in front of which Attorney Gallagher was shot down.

"I heard the shooting and ran downstairs," she said. "I saw a man lying on the sidewalk, two men bending over him. I ran across to the man and saw he was bleeding.

"I rushed back into the house to telephone for aid.

Boy Sees Suspect Flee.

"As I was going in a white boy stopped me and asked what was the matter. I told him, and he said: 'I guess I just passed the fellow who did it, then. He was running west in Twenty-eighth street.'

"I ran in and telephoned for aid. When I came out again the two men and the boy had disappeared."

The other woman witness was Mrs. George Fredericks of 2710 South Michigan avenue. Both she and her husband declare they ran to the window when they heard the shot and saw two men run toward a "chummy" roadster standing near the curb and drive away.

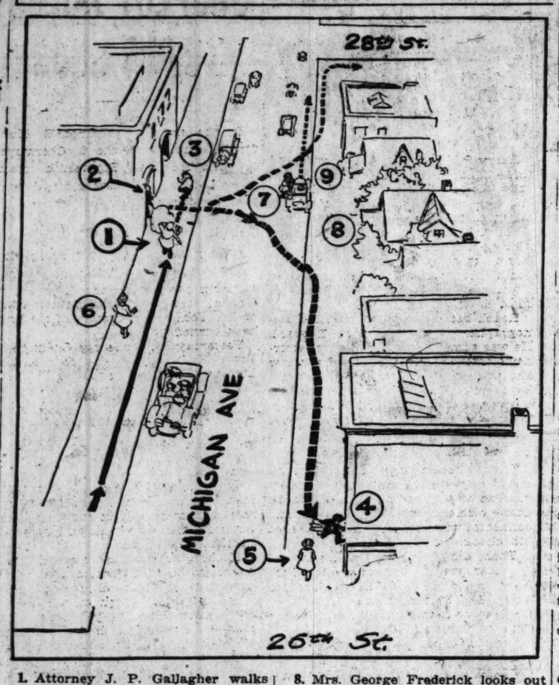
Student Describes Slayer.

But a description which Lieut. J. B. O'Connell of the Cottage Grove avenue station declares will prove the best in identifying the slayer, if captured, was given by D. R. Russell, a student of the Chicago Veterinary college, State and Twenty-fifth streets. The slayer almost ran headlong into Russell, who had just turned the corner of Twenty-sixth street and was walking south on the west side of the street. When the man saw Russell he darted between the building of the Chevrolet Motor company and another building.

"I got a fairly good look at the man," said Russell, "because he was almost directly under an arc light when he turned. He wore a dark suit and a light cap was pulled down over his eyes. He appeared to be about 23 or 24 years old and had almost a week's growth of beard on his face. He was swarthy, probably an Italian. He was rather a small man, about 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighing about 130 pounds. He was carrying an overcoat on his arm."

THE BOULEVARD MURDER MYSTERY

How Attorney J. P. Gallagher Was Assassinated and How Slayer or Slayers Fled from Scene, as Told by Eye Witnesses.



1. Attorney J. P. Gallagher walks south in Michigan avenue.
2. Doorway from which assassin fires at him.
3. Gallagher dying on sidewalk.
4. Assassin turns into passageway between the Chevrolet Motor company building at 2612 Michigan avenue and house north of it.
5. B. A. Russell of 2706 Michigan avenue sees slayer, who turns into the passage way.
6. John Guthman, 2728 Michigan avenue, behind Gallagher 100 feet or so, sees man running across the street.
7. Man gets into automobile and goes south.
8. Mrs. George Frederick looks out of window in her home at 2710 Michigan avenue and sees automobile, one man getting into it and another running away.
9. Home of Miss Margaret Rupp, 2720 Michigan avenue. She emerges and meets a boy, who tells her he saw a man running on Twenty-eighth street.

Dotted lines show the routes taken by men and automobile, as described by various witnesses.

The heavy black line shows route taken by Gallagher in walking to his home at 4905 South Michigan from the loop.

COURT TANGLE ECHOES MURDER OF TAXI DRIVER

MURDERS in Chicago This Year, 296

Court proceedings against Chief of Detectives James L. Mooney were threatened last night by Attorney Thomas D. Nash, former alderman from the Third ward, when his client, John Ganey, a commission broker at the stockyards, was returned to his cell after having been admitted to bail in connection with the killing of Leonard Tripple, a Yellow Taxicab company chauffeur.

Ganey and two other men, bartenders, had been held as material witnesses. They were in the saloon at 2138 South Wabash avenue early yesterday morning when Gene Geary, friend of Peter Gentleman, is alleged to have slain Tripple following a disagreement over a woman.

Nash entered into the case at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, when he appeared before Judge John J. Sullivan of the Superior court and applied for a writ of habeas corpus. Lieut. John Martin was summoned by the judge to explain Ganey's status. He said Ganey had been arrested as a material witness. The judge ordered him remanded to the custody of the police, fixing his bond at $5,000.

Nash next appeared before Judge Arnold Heap of the Municipal court with a man named Jordan, who scheduled property valued at $125,000 as surety for Ganey. The judge accepted the surety.

Liberty seemed close at hand for Nash's client as he returned to the detective bureau with the accepted bond. He learned that Ganey was undergoing interrogation by Assistant State's Attorney John M. Lowery.

Nash left and returned at 6 a. m. Nash was back in his cell. He asked Chief Mooney what the trouble was. The chief told him complications had ensued that changed Ganey's status. Nash telephoned Judge Heap, whom he quotes as saying, "I cannot now accept the bond."

Nash then appealed again to Chief Mooney. He was told this time that a charge of murder had been filed against his client.

PATIENTS HERE CLAIM CURES BY HEALER HICKSON

Two Clergymen Keep Up Work; Hundreds Visit Their Missions.

While two Episcopal clergymen of Chicago—the Rev. Frederick J. Budlong of St. Peter's and the Rev. Norman Hutton of St. Chrysostom's—are continuing the work begun here by James Moore Hickeon, the English layman healer, a number of persons who visited Mr. Hickson have made statements that his ministrations have benefited or cured them, it became known yesterday.

The Rev. Mr. Budlong, with Dr. Hutton's assistance, is continuing prayer and the laying on of hands for healing purposes each Thursday morning at St. Peter's, and the Rev. Mr. Hutton holds his sessions Tuesday afternoon at St. Chrysostom's. Both were associated with Mr. Hickson and in addition to the meetings at their respective churches visit a number of bedridden persons.

Neither makes any promise of healing, but both ask the patient to come in the simple faith that the power to heal still exists through the church. Nearly 100 persons have been visiting St. Peter's each Thursday.

Tell of Being Healed.

Some of the testimonials regarding Mr. Hickson's work cited by the two clergymen as an argument for continuing it, are as follows:

One woman of St. Timothy's parish says she was affected with nervous prostration and medicine, psychopathology, and travel failed to benefit her. She went to Mr. Hickson, she says, and now is well.

Little Gladys, 14, for a number of years wore a steel brace on one of her ankles. She could hardly walk, and running and playing were impossible. Her mother brought her to Mr. Hickson, and later to the Rev. Mr. Budlong. One of the secretaries received a telephone call the other day from the overjoyed mother. She said the girl was playing tennis, the brace discarded.

Cough Gone, Woman Says.

One person writes to the Rev. Mr. Hutton as follows under date of Nov. 14:

"On Thursday last I attended one of the healing through prayer meetings and went to the altar for prayer, my trouble being bronchial, nervous, and rheumatic. I am feeling so much better that I feel it is my duty to say so.

"The cough has about gone, which has troubled me ever since last spring, brought on by influenza. I feel the stiffness in my knees gradually leaving me. The cough seems to be drying up, as it were, with no more cause for coughing. I am forgetting my rheumatism, and, furthermore, I have a certain conviction that I am on the road to recovery. I have almost reached it, and am better than I have been since last February.

"To me this seems marvelous, and I am very thankful that I made the effort to go to St. Chrysostom's last Tuesday morning. I can assure you it was difficult for me to walk from the car to the church, but it would not be so now. This healing has come steadily from the day I went to church; I did not feel much change until yesterday, but today I feel that a great change has taken place."

Mother and Son Aided.

Another woman writes to Dr. Hutton:

"I feel that I must write you of the wonderful help I received at St. Peter's healing mission.

"I am the lady who came to you with a weak spine, a serious misplacement of the vertebrae, caused by carrying my crippled boy for seven years. For him also we asked help. You may remember that I told you he was in a school. I left a card for prayers for him.

"I came home without any discomfort and slept well, a very unusual thing. I waited three days, then went to an osteopath, from whom I was receiving treatments, and he said, 'There is a wonderful improvement. In a couple of days more, at this rate, the spine will have straightened itself.'

"I did not tell him anything, but I know it is straight now, and I am able to do all my household duties without pain.

"God has been wonderfully kind, and I believe my boy will get his healing in time."

Meantime the reply of a prominent ecclesiastic who was asked to explain the healings is declared to reflect the views of a majority of the members of the Episcopal church in Chicago. He said:

"What matter how it was accomplished? As a matter of fact, results are obtained."

Some in the church openly oppose the entire movement; others enthusiastically indorse it, and the majority seem to agree a measure of good is accomplished.

MONKEYS SPEAK, BUT I DON'T KISS 'EM; PROF. SUES

New York, Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Prof. Richard L. Garner, scientist, who announced upon his return last summer from the French Congo, West Africa, that he had found a species of chimpanzee which speaks a languge understood by the natives, has brought suit in the Supreme court of New York county against Underwood & Underwood because of a picture which appeared in a number of newspapers in the country credited to them.

In this picture a man described as Prof. Garner is represented as kissing a chimpanzee, which is chained and seated in a chair. Damages to his name, reputation, and credit in the sum of $100,000 is sought in the complaint, which will be filed Monday.

An officer of Underwood & Underwood said tonight that the picture was not sent out by that firm.

ZION BOYS ACT AS 'POURERS' OF SMUGGLED BEER

Waukegan, Ill., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—The Zion city authorities have so much confidence in the ability of twenty high school boys to refrain from temptation that they put the boys on duty today as official "beer spillers," to empty some of the contraband beer seized by the Zion City police and ordered destroyed by the Lake County Circuit court.

The five men who started the "pouring" Friday morning kept on the job until 9 o'clock last night, destroying 53,000 bottles. Ten thousand more bottles were destroyed today, and then the men were relieved by the high school boys.

U. P. IN WATCHFUL WAITING ROLE AS CARLISLE ROAMS

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 22.—The Union Pacific secret service department tonight announced it was "marking time" waiting for definite word from William L. Carlisle, the train robber, who celebrated his week of freedom from the penitentiary by robbing the Los Angeles Limited.

From Chadron, Neb., a message came to railroad headquarters reporting Carlisle in that city, with the added information, "I am on my way."

Later R. E. Stapleton, editor of the Casper Herald, interviewed in his office last Wednesday night by a man resembling Carlisle, received a telegram from Omaha, Neb., signed "Carlisle," reading:

"Your police force n. g. Why did you tell on me? Am coming back after you."

Carlisle's confederates, working to throw officers off Carlisle's trail, may have sent the telegram, the railroad authorities believe.

CHILD, AGED MAN, SLAIN BY AUTOS; 5 HURT IN CRASH

Street Car Hits Funeral Machine; Mourners Are Injured.

Deaths in Chicago by Automobiles in 1919 to date: 369

George France, 11 years old, of 2715 West Twenty-second place, saw an empty truck passing down the street yesterday morning, and, without glancing backward, ran out to catch it.

He died in St. Anthony's hospital last night from a broken thigh bone and internal injuries. He was hit by an automobile driven by Dr. A. N. Hoyne. Witnesses absolved the physician of blame.

Aged Man Meets Death.

Edwin Kent, 73 years old, married, and living at 3839 West Jackson boulevard, started across the street at Independence boulevard and Harrison street shortly after 6 o'clock Friday evening. It was raining and there was a heavy fog.

Mr. Kent died last night at St. Anthony's hospital. He was struck by an automobile owned by N. E. Ruderman of 711 Independence boulevard. The inquest will be held this morning.

Funeral Car Hit; Five Hurt.

Narrowly missing a collision with a hearse, a Thirty-first street car crashed into the first automobile of a funeral procession at Wood street yesterday afternoon, injuring Frank Wasilinski, 3343 Wallace street; his wife, two daughters and a son.

Miss Vianct Wasilinski, 25 years old, sustained an injury to her spine, and several of her ribs were broken. She was taken to St. Anthony's hospital. The others received minor cuts and bruises.

TRIANGLE TRAPS $10,000 MAN ON 'CON' CHARGES

Parents of Eloping Girl Cause Nation Wide Hunt and Arrest.

Harry P. Reach, who has a wife and three children in Long Island, N. Y., and who, until Aug. 1 last, held a $10,000 a year position as a traveling salesman for an eastern concern, was brought back from Detroit yesterday by Detective Sergeant John Upton to face a charge of operating a confidence game. He is accused of having cashed a worthless check for $341 at Marshall Field & Co.

Reach became infatuated with a stenographer named Gertrude Leonard. He was summoned to the district attorney's office in New York last summer and warned he must support his family or go to jail. He gave up his job, abandoned his wife and children, it is alleged, and came to Chicago with Miss Leonard.

Trades on Old Connection.

While here he visited Marshall Field's, where he was well known because of previous trips to sell goods. Store officials, believing he was still connected with the eastern firm, cashed his check.

Then, according to the police, he and the stenographer disappeared. They were traced to New Orleans, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Oakland. In Oakland he cashed a bogus draft at the firm of Taft & Pennoyer on Oct. 1. He was next heard of in Seattle, where he succeeded in cashing three bogus checks totaling $465 at the Frederick & Nelson company, according to the police.

Detectives Find Trail.

Then private detectives, employed by Miss Leonard's parents, picked up the couple's trail, and traced them to Toronto, Canada, where Miss Leonard was taken into custody, and escorted back to New York. Operating a confidence game is not an extraditable offense in Canada, and Reach refused to waive extradition proceedings and return to New York. He did consent, however, to come to Chicago and face trial here.

He was brought to Windsor by the Canadian authorities and turned over to Upton aboard a ferry in the middle of the Detroit river, the international line.

Publisher Gets Out Book by Brand New Process

New York, Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Disregarding the strike vacation in the printing trades, D. Appleton & Co., publishers, have brought out a novel by Eleanor Gates, "Piggie," by a process similar to that used by several magazines, but using an entirely new printing operation. The typing was done on a typewriter. The pages, including illustrations, which were pasted in, were photographed on zinc, attached, and then stamped on a gelatine roll, from which impressions were made on a slow moving "art press," affording perfectly sharp type delineation.

$5,000 FORGER SUSPECT JAILED; 2 GIRLS SOUGHT

In the arrest of Nimrod E. Hurt, former employé of the S. Obermeyer foundry, 256 West Eighteenth street, police believe they have a forger who has netted more than $5,000 in loot in the last five weeks.

Hurt, the police say, quit the Obermeyer company Oct. 4, taking the firm's check book with him. Since then forty-six checks, ranging from $75 to $150, all bearing the forged signature of S. T. Johnston, secretary of the firm, have turned up.

Yesterday Sergt. George Cudmore of Town Hall station was sent to the Lindsten Clothing company, 3211 North Clark street, on information that a man was trying to pass a bad check in return for a suit of clothes. Cudmore arrested the man, who later was identified as Hurt through a description printed in the police bulletin yesterday.

Hurt had been living at 942 Sheridan road. Reports of bad checks had been received not only from outlying stores but from many well known loop establishments as well.

Clothing and jewelry, most of which was later pawned, formed the greater part of the loot, according to the police.

In the patrol wagon on the way to the station Hurt begged Sergt. Cudmore to allow him a chance to commit suicide. He said he came to Chicago three months ago from Atlanta, Ga., and that his father had killed himself early last summer. His mother still lives in Atlanta.

Police are now looking for two girls, said to be sweethearts of Hurt, upon whom he is alleged to have spent the money received from the checks.

BRITISH TROOPS ON RUSSIAN LINE HAVE A MUTINY

Returned Men Talk of Army Revolt in the Far North.

BY GEORGE SELDES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

LONDON, Nov. 22.—A Castle liner with some 2,000 British troops aboard recently arrived in Plymouth. Other transports bringing contingents from the North Russia expeditionary force are still on their way. Many English and colonial homes have been made happy by this withdrawal from Russia, but the nation has discovered suddenly that the returned warriors are excellent agents for the bolshevist idea.

Tommies you meet on the Strand, in the restaurants, in the Y. M. C. A. huts, everywhere, do not hesitate to tell you about the mutinies in the frozen north, and they give you the causes. Officers frown, but admit there was no help for it. And those who fear that the bolshevist ideas which the soldiers spread may bring about serious troubles are hastening to disband the regiments and scatter the men to the four corners of the globe.

Had no Answer.

"The real reason bolshevism spread among the British, French, and American troops in Russia was because the officers had no valid answer to the men's asking what they were fighting for," a young Australian soldier, a bright chap who had been through the public schools and had worked in America several years, told me today. "The bolshevists kept on sending over notes asking us why we were on their soil. At first we ignored them.

"Then came a day when some of our prisoners came back. They were set free on condition that they asked their officers the same question. Another day some of our wounded of a previous day's encounter were returned to us under a white flag in charge of a young Russian lieutenant who spoke English perfectly.

Fighting King's Enemies.

"'Ask your officers why they are fighting us,' the bolshevik advised us, and departed.

"Well, that made us think. Up to then we had sent one or two replies, just pulling the bolos' legs. This time we asked our officers.

"'You are fighting the king's enemies—just as you swore to when you enlisted,' our officers replied.

"So we sent that reply to the bolos.

"A day later we got some more notes from them. I do not remember the wording, but the idea was that they, the bolos, were not the enemy of King George and that the real reason the allied troops were on Russian soil was to restore the old czaristic government so that the millions of pounds worth of Russian notes, held chiefly by French and British interests and canceled by the bolos, would be honored and paid.

Kept Quiet.

"The Frenchies got all upset by this note and by similar notes from the bolos professing the brotherhood of man and similar socialistic stuff. We kept quiet. One day we had another fight with the bolsheviks and lost some dead and wounded. The next day came the usual notes from the bolos.

"This time we answered: 'We are fighting to save our skins.'

"The Bolos replied: 'So are we. Let's all go home.'

"That sounded good. Conditions were awful up there. We really had no reason to be there, we figured, despite the officers' saying it was to fight the king's enemies. Hell, I did enough fighting of the king's enemies. I mean the Germans. I was wounded at Croiselles, on the Bapaume-Cambrai road. I fought in Gallipoli. I knew why I was fighting then. But there was no sense in fighting the Russians, who were treating us damn white and only beggin' us to clear out and let them settle their own pudding.

Kept Up Bluff.

"I guess the lieutenants and captains thought the same way about it, although outwardly they kept up the bluff of the Bolos being worse than the Germans. We thought so at first, too, and, say, the atrocities we committed against them were worse than any German atrocities against the Australians and Canadians. Yes, we killed bolshevik prisoners, we tortured them, we bayoneted wounded and left them to freeze to death. After they replied by sending our wounded back well cared for we changed our tactics. We couldn't believe our officers then.

"I don't know much about the Americans, but I guess it was the same with them—and likewise the French. We all changed our minds. Now about this mutiny: we don't call it a mutiny. We just call it a cessation of hostilities. We figured we had fought the real war and won the real war, and this was just bloody murder, pardon the word."

Has His Medals.

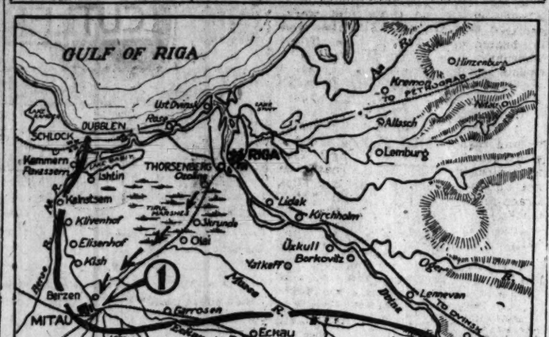
I asked the Australian when he was going home.

"'Toot sweet,'" he replied. "And when I get home I won't have to keep my mouth shut, either. I've got four ribbons and a couple of medals and one wound stripe, and I am glad the Germans are licked. When the next war comes around they'll have to prove to me that I'm not fighting to restore payment to French and British interests of some czar's rotten old bonds."

The Australian soldier's buddy, a lad wearing the South African heavy artillery insignia, the Mons 1914 star, and two other decorations and a wound stripe, agreed with everything said. In addition he volunteered the information that:

"Every one who comes in real contact with the Bolos comes back spreading the Bolo idea."

ANOTHER GERMAN DEFEAT



1—Lettish troops have taken Mitau, twenty-five miles from Riga. Mitau was the headquarters of the Russo-German troops in the recent attack on Riga.

LETTISH TROOPS CAPTURE MITAU, BASE OF GERMANS

Gen. Eberhardt Said to Have Asked for a Truce.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—Lettish forces yesterday captured Mitau, capital of Courland, Letvia, according to the Lettish delegation here. The Letts continued their victorious advance.

[Mitau was the headquarters of Gen. von Eberhardt, who was sent by the German government to relieve Col. Bermond of command of the German Baltic forces and supervise their orderly return to Germany.]

Eberhardt Seeks Lett Truce.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 22.—[By the Associated Press.] — Gen. von Eberhardt, who has assumed command of the west Russian army, has asked the Lettish commander in chief to accept a truce, pending the conclusion of an armistice, according to a Riga dispatch.

No reply has been sent by the commander of the Lettish troops, who, however, points out that Gen. von Eberhardt's action makes the aggressive campaign of Col. Bermond against Riga a German affair.

"Red" Line Is Broken.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. Denikine, commander of anti-bolshevist troops on the southern Russian front, asserts he has broken through the Red line between Oren and Tambov, southeast of Moscow, and to have annihilated 50,000 bolshevist troops.

[Reports recently received from the southern Russian front have appeared to incidate that Gen. Denikine was being driven southward by the bolsheviki.]

Gen. Yudenitch, anti-bolshevist commander on the northwest Russian front, has arrived at Reval, capital of Esthonia, with his staff, according to a dispatch to the Svenska Dagbladet.

[Dispatches from Reval under date of Nov. 16 reported the forces of Gen. Yudenitch to be crowded into a small space of tcirtory near Yamburg, sixty-eight miles southwest of Petrograd, and in a serious state of disorganization.]

U. S. DESTROYER AT BEIRUT TO PROTECT YANKS

Trouble Feared Between Syrians and French Colonials.

BY LADISLAS CZAPSKI.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 11.—[Delayed.]—At the urgent request of the American consul at Beirut, this morning the destroyer Biddle has been dispatched to that port by Rear Admiral Bristol, the United States high commissioner to Turkey, the object being to protect American lives, in the event of fighting between the Arab population and French troops. Although no incident has yet been reported indicating trouble between the natives and the new occupants, it is deemed a wise move that an American destroyer be on the spot, so that in the event of clashes Americans in Beirut can quickly be removed from the danger zone. It isn't a secret that the Arabs are in an ugly mood over the transfer of Syria to the French.

Trying to Avoid Trouble.

It has been the policy of the American naval authorities here to avoid entangling the fleet in different occupations in Ottoman territory since the armistice. One reason is the United States is not at war with Turkey, and the other is a decision not to tie the hands of the American delegation by any interference or undertakings of any kind. The Biddle has gone to Beirut purely on a passive mission, as far as the landing of French troops is concerned, and Assistant Secretary of State Polk has given his full approval of the move.

About 30,000 troops have been assigned by the French for the occupation of Syria. I am informed that the bulk of them is Senegalese and Moroccans, both of Moslem faith. While the French military authorities may have chosen these troops to win as much sympathy as possible among the natives, the latter seem to regard the selection as a particularly bitter humiliation.

Fears Trouble Is Brewing.

"They are sending armed men of our own race and religion to crush us if necessary," an Arab notable said to me. "I met one of them on the street today. I asked him where he and his comrades were going. All he knew was that they were being sent to a Moslem country.

"When I told him ye Syrians were Arabs like himself he swore by the prophet that it was not so. When I convinced him he just laughed hysterically and left me."

Turkey Asks for Early Decision of Her Fate

PARIS, France, Nov. 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—The sublime porte has applied directly to the peace conference for an early solution of the Turkish question, giving serious reasons necessitating the rapid conclusion of peace. The Serbian delegation here has received notice from its home government that after an examination of the St. Germain treaty the government no longer has reason to oppose the signing of the document.

PHYSICIAN ABSOLVED BY INQUEST.

A coroner's inquest into the death of Miss Ella Goodman, 40 years old, 4947 Prairie avenue, who died at the Presbyterian hospital yesterday, failed to disclose any justification for a report that Mrs. Goodman's death was due to an overdose of medicine administered by a south side physician. Death was due to kidney trouble, the verdict stated.

JAMES SIMPSON URGES MEMORIAL TO OPERA HERE

Plenty of Wealthy Men to Swing the Venture, He Declares.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Nov. 22.—An American business man was sitting near a window this morning in the American Express company's office. He was awaiting a motor to take him to the airdrome from which he was to fly to London. The gentleman was James Simpson of Marshall Field & Co. of Chicago. He looked long and silently at the marble stairways, the bronze statuary, and the gilded dome of the Paris opera house, and then said:

"The business men back home should not look in each other's faces until Chicago has a building like that. The Paris opera house is a great monument by a great people.

Chicago Must Enlarge Vision.

"Chicago has done well with the progress it has made in the Chicago beautiful plan, but the great need is to extend the horizon to a large vision. We must see bigger. In a worldly sense, we have been doing only little things.

"There are half a dozen Chicagoans who could produce for Chicago just such another great monument without sensibly impoverishing themselves. The heritage to their children would be greater than ten times the cost.

Enough Rich Men Here.

"If no one great rich man can be found with sufficient vision to do this individually, I know Chicago can produce twenty men who could give a million dollars apiece toward the project."

There was a certain twinkle in the speaker's eye, indicating that the name of Simpson might not be missing in such a list.

"It would require ten years for plans and ten years for building. If this generation expects to see it, it must get busy," he said.

Praises "Tribune" Energy.

Mr. Simpson expressed great enthusiasm over the European edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE published in Paris, and said it was a great advertisement for Chicago and America. He was delighted to learn that the European edition was permanent.

Concerning the publication of the Paris Tribune in spite of the strikes which are suppressing all other publications, Mr. Simpson declared the achievement is a big boost to American prestige.

BRUISES ON ARMS OF AGED WOMAN START INQUIRY

Humane Society Acting; Owner of Sanitarium Says 'Spitework.'

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

The Illinois Humane society is investigating the Bethia sanitarium at 4732 Dorchester avenue, on complaint of Mrs. Ray Glickman of 3234 Douglas boulevard. Mrs. Glickman claims that her mother, a withered old lady past 76, who is senile, and who was placed in the institution for care, was abused, and that when she returned home after four days in the sanitarium her arms were black and blue, and there were marks on her neck.

Charles H. Brayne, chief investigator for the society, visited the institution, which is run by Mrs. Bethia Abernathy.

"I saw the bruises on Mrs. Glickman's mother," he said, "but I can get no one at the institution to admit they know what caused them. The woman went home, and when she was being undressed by Mrs. Glickman the bruises were discovered. On Monday we will go into the matter further, because of the report that another woman, whom Mrs. Glickman could not name, is said to have been mistreated by this nurse she mentions. We did find that, while there are fourteen patients in the sanitarium, four of them men, there are no male attendants, but Mrs. Abernathy, her daughter, and one nurse handle all of them."

Paid $15 a Week.

Mrs. Glickman wept when she told of her mother's condition.

"I took her to this place because it wasn't far from my home, and I could take her dainties to eat," she said. "I was to pay $15 a week, and I paid for the first week in advance. I told them my mother's mind is a blank. She is such a slim, wasted little figure, that she is a pitiful sight, and I wouldn't have her harmed for the world. I could not get help, or I wouldn't have let her leave my home.

"I took her to the Bethia home last Saturday, and was promised that she would receive the best of care. My mother speaks Hebrew, and I wanted her in the ward where there was another Jewish woman who could understand her. On Sunday, when my brother called to see her, he was not satisfied with the surroundings. I went to see her, and was told by Mrs. Abernathy and her daughter, Grace, who is just a young woman about 16, that my mother couldn't stay.

Examined by Physician.

"I brought her home. When I undressed her, her little arms showed finger marks where she had been pinched or grabbed hold of roughly. I immediately summoned Dr. B. Freilich, our physician, and had her examined."

Dr. Freilich, whose offices are at 3234 Douglas boulevard, said: "I examined Mrs. Glickman's mother and I found that her arms and neck were bruised and her arms bore what looked like finger marks."

Mrs. Abernathy assured the Humane society agent that the whole thing was spite work. Mrs. Abernathy's sister, who says she is associated with Mrs. Abernathy in the sanitarium work, declared Mrs. Glickman's mother was not beaten while she was there. Grace Abernathy, the young daughter, who assists her mother, grew violent when she heard the charges, and declared she was going at once to Mrs. Glickman's home.

"I took a lot of pains with that old woman myself," she declared, "and I won't stand this kind of thing." Her aunt pleaded with Miss Abernathy to get off the extension line, but Miss Grace refused. She continued: "Mrs. Glickman came and got her and changed her waist before she left. Why didn't she see the bruises then?"

THANKSGIVING FOR VISITORS.

A nonsectarian Thanksgiving service, planned especially for the strangers within the loop, will be held in the Cort theater Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The president's proclamation will be read by the Rev. R. Scott Hyde, while Rabbi Coffee and Dr. Preston Bradley will give addresses.

affect the body in many different ways. The feet SWELL, BURN, ACHE and have SHARP PAINS under the HEELS. The BALL of the FOOT is SORE and FEELS AS IF WALKING on MARBLES. WHY DR. PINKSTON'S COMBINATION LAST SHOES ARE BETTER than the standard shoes is because they are TWO WIDTHS NARROWER IN THE HEEL, ONE WIDTH NARROWER IN THE ARCH, AND TWO WIDTHS WIDER THROUGH THE BALL OF THE FOOT than any shoe that has ever been made. The narrow heel PREVENTS THE SHOE FROM SLIPPING UP AND DOWN. The narrow arch KEEPS THE FOOT FROM SLIDING FORWARD. The broad ball gives PERFECT FREEDOM OF THE TOES. The entire comfort and grace of walking depend entirely upon the proper articulation of the ball of the foot.

SEARCH CITY FOR CRETE BANKER IN $400,000 CASE

President of the Concern Says Depositors Will Be Paid.

At a late hour last night Chicago police were still searching Chicago hotels and lodging houses for traces of Gustave H. Kracke, missing cashier of the Illinois State bank at Crete, from which state bank examiners say approximately $400,000 has been embezzled. Kracke is believed to be hiding in this city.

Yesterday four bank examiners, aided by the bank officials, worked all day checking up the books of the institution.

Stockholders Meet.

A stockholders' meeting, held during the afternoon, was informed that a shortage ranging from $200,000 to $300,000 had already been discovered.

Louis Rathje, president of the Chicago City Bank and Trust company, said last night that the exact loss would not be known for a number of days. "It is a serious situation, far more serious than our first reports," he said. "I was given information at first that led me to believe that the loss would not exceed $75,000. The preliminary report of the bank examiners shows that it may run to $300,000. Whether or not it is over that amount would be hard to say right now."

Promise to Pay in Full.

A warrant charging larceny was sworn out Friday night by John G. Seggebruch, vice president of the bank. H. E. Meier, president of the bank, who collapsed when he learned of the embezzlement, issued a statement yesterday that "depositors will be paid dollar for dollar."

days, and was conducted by the examiner of the Chicago Clearing House association and his full corps of assistants, reasonably indicates that Miles' peculations from the bank do not exceed $25,000, which is partly covered by a surety bond, and that the bank stands to lose little, if anything.

"The examiner, however, found that Miles has involved his friends and other persons and institutions considerably in connection with outside transactions. The amount of loss in these other matters is not known at this time."

Refuses Detailed Statement.

Mr. Meyer, who received a reporter, was asked to explain how the alleged shortage escaped detection and whether by "other institutions" the committee had meant banks.

"If a more detailed statement were to be attempted," he said, "it would only lead to undesirable complications. In consequence Mr. Hamill has determined to confine the committee's remarks to the formal announcement of its findings."

The same questions were propounded to Mr. Castle.

"You'll have to see Mr. Meyer," he said. "I prefer that any statement of what the bank's books revealed should come from him."

Directors in Dark.

The directors of the bank professed to have little knowledge of the subject.

W. J. Carney said he had been present at Friday night's meeting and that some figures had been presented by the auditor. "The proceedings were very brief," he continued, "and I didn't understand very much about it.

"I believe, however, that other banks are affected, though the total amount is small."

Fred F. Bullen was surprised to learn that Miles had been ousted. "A meeting was to have been held Thursday," he said, "but my stenographer was informed that it had been deferred for a week. I received no notice of the meeting Friday night, notwithstanding I was in reach of a telephone."

Mr. Miles' connection with the bank had been severed became known yesterday when the bank circulated a card among all the financial institutions of the city.

KNIFE OF FLAME CUTS INTO VAULT; $100,000 IS STOLEN

Celina, O., Nov. 22.—More than $100,000 in government bonds, mostly Liberty issues, were stolen by men who early this morning cut their way with an oxy-acetlyne torch into the vault of the Farmers' Savings Bank at Rockford, ten miles north. They looted eighteen of sixty deposit boxes of the vault.

Admits $58,600 Mail Theft?

Dunkirk, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Milo Elwell, 28, of this city, confessed tonight, it was said by the police, that he stole a registered mail pouch containing $58,600 in Liberty bonds and $35 in cash at the Erie station here last Wednesday night.

Elwell, who has a contract to carry mail between the postoffice and railway stations, broke down after several hours' examination, according to the police, who declare the stolen bonds and money were found concealed under Elwell's house.

AVERS DISTRICT OF 20,000 LACKS SEWER SYSTEM

Mrs. Ophelia Lawrence Blair of 5120 South Keeler avenue, founder and honorary president of the Southern Women's club and secretary of the Archer Avenue Civic league, gave voice last night to a complaint regarding insanitary conditions in the district in which she lives.

"In that part of Chicago south from the drainage canal to Seventy-first street and between Mobile and Cicero avenues," she said, "there is not a sewer, although about 20,000 persons live in the district. Puddles and cesspools in the streets are a menace to the public health.

"There is only one public school for this whole region, and it consists of eight portable huts and a two story schoolhouse, surrounded most of the time by a sea of mud and sometimes by a lake. Between 500 and 600 pupils attend this school. Many parents would not send their children there if the law did not compel them to. Conditions are so insanitary the principal told me she cannot even keep teachers.

"There should be another school in the district."

MYSTERY BOMB IN WHOLESALE DRY GOODS HOUSE

A bomb was found yesterday in a small room of the C. A. Mather Wholesale Dry Goods company house at 141 South Wells street. The janitor stumbled over it while sweeping. He notified the police and it was turned over to Detective Sergeants Gabriel Longobardi and Charles Egan of Chief Garrity's bomb squad for investigation.

Mr. Mather at his home in La Grange late last night said he had no idea how the bomb came to be placed in his establishment. He said he had had no labor troubles.

"I don't understand it," he said. "I can't imagine what caused it."

"BILLY" DANSEY DEATH MYSTERY STILL UNSOLVED

Hammonton, N. J., Nov. 22.—Detectives worked all day without being able to solve the mystery surrounding the death of 3 year old "Billy" Dansey, who disappeared Oct. 8 and whose body was found yesterday. The county prosecutor and others adhere to the theory that the child was lured from his home and murdered.

The authorities believe death was due to strangulation, but said this could not be verified because of the condition of the body.

"The motive remains a secret," the county prosecutor said, "because there appears to be no means now of ascertaining it."

Police Arrive in Nick of Time to Catch 3 Holdups

At 11 o'clock last night, as the clerk in the United Cigar company's store at Twelfth street and Blue Island avenue prepared to close up, three men walked into the place and, displaying revolvers, ordered him to throw up his hands.

Next door Dick Nash and Pete McElrue, policemen detailed from Maxwell street station, were just entering a saloon. A passerby informed them of the holdup.

They drew revolvers and entered the store. The trio surrendered. At the station the names of the men were withheld.

NEW YORK NOISY TO THE FINISH AS PRINCE SAILS

Climbs Rigging to Wave Good-By to Cheering Thousands.

New York, Nov. 22.—The Prince of Wales said good-by to America today and sailed for his own land. The cheers of hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers, whose friendship he had won during his brief visit, rang in his ears as the great battle cruiser Renown, one of the mightiest vessels in the British navy, weighed anchor and steamed majestically down the North river.

Edward Albert waved his farewell from the fighting top to the great crowd gathered on the banks of the Hudson to bid him godspeed.

Airplanes dipped and circled overhead and salutes bombed from the American warships in the river as the Renown got under way. The prince remained at his post in the fighting top waving his hat in answer to the cheers, which reached him faintly across the water, until the shadows had finally hidden the shores

United States Escort to Halifax.

The cruiser Constance, seven American destroyers, and the American battleship Delaware will escort the royal ship to the vicinity of Halifax, where it is due Monday morning.

Virtually up to the moment of sailing the prince was the center of picturesque functions. An early ceremony was the conferring of decorations on more than 100 American soldiers, sailors, and nurses. Among these was one woman doctor, Dr. Caroline Finley of the American Women's Overseas hospitals, who was made a member of the Order of the British Empire.

Judge Mack Presents Emblem.

During the day a silver and garnet studded Menorah, the traditional candelabra used in the ceremony commemorating the liberation of ancient Judea by the Maccabees, was presented to the prince by a Zionist delegation headed by Judge Julian W. Mack of Chicago. British friendship for the Jews was emphasized by Judge Mack in making the presentation.

When the prince received on board the warship representatives of the city and state government, the press and those who had been his hosts and hostesses during his stay in New York, he again and again reiterated his gratitude at the welcome he had received and his regret at parting.

"But I am coming back," he said. "I want to see more of America and the Americans."

Reviews Boy Scouts.

The last official ceremony of the day was a review of 5,000 Boy Scouts who were massed along the beach facing the Renown. The prince made a special trip ashore to meet the youngsters and it gave him an occasion to prove that he also is numbered among the phrasemakers.

"Never hunt with yourselves, hunt with the pack," was the prince's advice to the scouts.

He left a written message with Colin H. Livingstone, president of the national organization, addressed jointly to the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides of America.

MARCH FOR ARMY OF 260,000 WITH TRAINED RESERVE

Chief of Staff Holds No One in the World Can Whip Us Then.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—A standing army of about 260,000 men, backed by a universal military training system to supply reserves, would meet the peace time requirements of the United States, Gen. Payton C. March, chief of staff, declared in his annual report.

Gen. March founded his judgment on lessons of the world war. That proved conclusively, he said, that ability to be self sustaining for an indefinite period, provided the army was adequately prepared, was the nation's greatest military asset.

Will Scale Down Number.

So far as purely naval operations are concerned, he added, the United States has nothing to fear from "any conceivable combination" of naval powers; but must be prepared to prevent seizure of bases by an enemy controlling the sea and intent on landing troops.

Gen. March recommended fixing the strength of the regular army at five army corps, maintained at half strength in peace times. The proposals the department presented tentatively to congress during the special session called for 509,000 men and the statement of the chief of staff was taken to indicate that this would be scaled down to 260,000.

The report defended the present staff system with authority centralized in the chief of staff.

Must Guard Shores.

Military experts are agreed, Gen. March said, that the bulwark of American power is its ability for self-sustenance.

With a peace army of five corps backed up by a system of universal military training, "no foreign country could, in view of our performance in this war, disregard our rights," Gen. March said.

HUMANE SOCIETY PLANS DRIVE FOR FUND OF $20,000

A campaign for a fund of $20,000 will be begun in Cook county tomorrow by the Chicago Anti-Cruelty society, for the purpose of financing the activities of the society which was established by Mrs Theodore Thomas, widow of the orchestra leader, some twenty years ago, and to provide for the maintenance of the animal hospital and dispensary at 155 West Grand avenue.

The society desires the erection of a fully equipped animal hospital similar to those in New York and Boston, the present equipment with one animal ambulance and five paid officers being inadequate.

The monthly report of the society for October shows:

Dogs received, 165. Cats received 259.

Dogs humanely destroyed, 147.

Cats humanely destroyed, 259.

Homes found for dogs, 16.

Calls received, 227; calls answered, 224.

Dogs and cats cared for during the month, 648.

Inspected condition of 82 horses and handled eighty-eight cases in its free dispensary at a cost of 17 cents a case.

PRESS FRANCE TO RETURN U. S. DEAD

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—The American embassy at Paris has been instructed by the state department to make "the strongest representations possible" to the French government for the removal of bodies of American soldiers in France.

The hope was expressed that an understanding would be reached to enable the war department to undertake as speedily as possible the return of the bodies where it is desired by relatives. Requests have been made for the return of 40,000 of the 65,000 bodies of American dead buried in France.

The French government has been told that its continued delays would have an "unfavorable impression" upon the American people.

25 Children Gathering Scraps Held; Quiz Parents

The Central Detail station looked and sounded like an orphan asylum yesterday morning, when twenty-five ragged boys and girls, ranging from 6 to 14 years old, who were taken into custody while gathering scraps in the South Water street district, were assembled to await the arrival of their parents. Each case will be investigated by Juvenile probation officers and action taken by the Juvenile court in cases where the parents are found to have been criminally negligent of their children's welfare.

COUNTRY IS NOW CORN FED, NOT CORN LIQUORED

Iowa Drink Cure Closed and One Jail Holds Watermelons.

BY EYE WITNESS.

In Iowa the authorities have had to close the state drink cure at Knoxville for lack of patients, and at the little town of Steele, in Missouri, the corporation rented the jail as a watermelon storehouse for lack of prisoners.

At the employment agencies in Chicago they will tell you that one reason why it is difficult to get a washerwoman, or a woman for a day's charing, is that the forlorn beings—and very forlorn and patient they mostly were—are knowing now, for the first time since they began combining charing with child bearing, the joy of receiving an unviolated pay envelope from sober husbands on Saturday night.

Hence—and they thank you very much for nothing—they no longer feel the urge of dragging themselves half way across town three days a week to wipe up your floors or hang your laundry in the dryer.

School Teachers' Report.

There is another ramification of this matter. School teachers who feel an interest in the physical wellbeing of their pupils told me that in recent weeks children from the poorer sections of town came to school better fed, and they thought that must be because the mothers of those children have time for their household affairs, instead of yours.

Thus some of the incidents come upon in the preparation of these articles, like the closing of the drink cure for lack of drunkards, and the Missouri jail and the watermelons, and the charwoman with time to do a little charring in her own interest, presented a sufficiently comic aspect to engage the blithe paragrapher and the cartoonist, when you considered those incidents baldly.

But the more you looked into their ramifications the larger grew their economic and social aspects—I mean social in the big sense of community ethics. Sociological if you like, though the word is shopworn.

Example in Iowa.

The Iowa state school for children at Glenwood, for example, contains 1,400 children and there are 400 on the waiting lists. Now the Iowa drink cure at Knoxville that has shut up shop comprises a demesne of 340 acres and has accommodations for 325 adults or 400 children. It was in operation for nearly thirteen years, but after Iowa went dry in 1916 the number of its patients began dropping. Last summer it had only twelve inmates and they were under treatment for drugs, not drink.

Now the ramification in this case is this: Two plans for the future of the plant are under consideration by the state authorities. One is turn it into a normal school; the other to make it a school for feeble minded children, thus supplementing the good work done at Glenwood. In either case the Knoxville plant will henceforth be devoted to some kind of positive and constructive work, instead of merely a work of rehabilitation not warranted permanent.

Prohibitionists' View.

The foregoing epitomizes the general strain of the reply of prohibition zealots to the charge that their purpose is just to take the joy out of life, and that, like Macauley's puritan, they don't so much resent the pain of the bear as the pleasure of the spectator.

It was interesting to browse along the countryside for data on the effects of wartime prohibition, because, in the country, drinking was less a humanizing social rite than a desperately concentrated business—spasmodic, to be sure, but terribly intensive while it lasted.

It wasn't "drinking," but "getting drunk."

Effect on Country Fairs.

Reports of managers of the autumn county fairs in Illinois were of value, therefore, even though some of those reports concerned fairs held in districts long under local option, because even in those areas liquor leaked in at fair time. Under wartime prohibition the grounds were less porous, with results as follows:

Iroquois county fair, Watseka—Attendance largest by half in fifty-one years. Best behaved crowd. No drunkenness. No arrests. Also on Barnum & Bailey circus day no drunks. No rowdyism. Fair lasted five days.

Kewanee fair—Five days. Attendance bigger than ever before. One arrest for drunkenness.

Sandwich fair—Four days. Largest attendance. Plenty money. Orderly. No arrests. Chicago detective found no crooks.

Peoria district fair—Attendance doubled. Expenditures greater. Good order.

Fulton county fair—Increase in attendance of 102 per cent. No drinks, "but much good fellowship," said the secretary.

Wyoming fair—Attendance best ever. One drunk.

Springfield state fair—Attendance best ever. No drunks. No disorder. In town, good nature in spite of numerous traffic jams.

But there was one extremely diminished great man by all this. It put the town constable in the Othello class.

W.C.T.U. Plans Big Wake for J. Barleycorn Jan. 16

Anna Gordon, national president of the W. C. T. U., returned last night to Evanston after attending a convention of the W. C. T. U. in St. Louis.

"The United States is going dry on Jan. 16 despite every move that can be made by the liquor interests," Miss Gordon said, "and the law will be enforced in every state, although popular sentiment is against it in New Jersey and Ohio."

"The W. C. T. U. is planning big demonstrations on Jan. 16 to be held in 20,000 towns in the United States in celebration of the victory of prohibition."

JUNKIN DUE HERE MONDAY TO MEET LIQUOR CHARGES

After three weeks of inactivity the wheels of the federal government in Chicago are about to move in the prosecution of Lieut. Col. Francis T. A. Junkin.

"He's coming all the way from Washington," said Andrew R. Sheriff, the colonel's legal representative, yesterday, "to call on District Attorney Clyne and give him all the information he may wish about the trivial circumstances that have made so much entertainment in the last three weeks."

The "trivial circumstances" surround the discovery by government agents of five gallons of de luxe liquor, marked "Victrola Records," in the colonel's household goods shipment, and a federal warrant charging him with violating the interstate shipping laws in mislabeling freight and possibly five other fractures of prohibition regulations.

"He'll be arraigned Monday when he arrives before Commissioner Mark A. Foote," promised Mr. Clyne.

RULES BEER STILL PRISONER OF WAR IN WISCONSIN

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 22.—The prohibition enforcement act is constitutional, Judge Geiger of the United States District court held today.

He enjoined the J. P. Kissinger company, wholesale liquor dealers, from using its premises for the sale of liquor until the civil suit against the company is tried.

Judge Geiger's decision was based principally on the contention of H. A. Sawyer, United States district attorney, that the war has not ended.

Again Make "Mild" in Missouri.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 22.—The majority of breweries here will resume the manufacture of beer of 2.75 per cent alcoholic content Monday, it was announced today, following notification from Kansas City, Kas., that Federal Judge John C. Pollock had signed the order making effective the temporary injunction issued yesterday, restraining federal officials from interfering with the manufacture or sale of this beer. The beer was sold freely here today.

ADD 6 TO LIST OF CHICAGO "REDS" TO BE DEPORTED

42 Warrants Issued for Radicals Suspected of Anti-U. S. Plot.

Six alien agitators were added yesterday to the list of 114 men held for deportation in the past year by immigration officials in Chicago. They include John Shumovich, Marion Biezak, Joseph Kowalski, Joseph Falkner, Engelbert Preis, and William Kristenz, the latter of Detroit. Kowalski is a Polish radical, said to be somewhat of an orator, and is secretary of the "Polish Federation," a branch of the "Communist" party.

The prisoners, picked up in various raids some time ago, were ordered held under $10,000 bonds yesterday when their first hearing was completed by Harry A. Landis, immigration inspector. Evidence gathered in the hearing was sent directly to Secretary of Labor W. B. Wilson, who is expected to order their prompt deportation.

Forty-Two More Warrants Issued.

Forty-two warrants for the arrest of radicals suspected of plotting the overthrow of the government have been issued by Secretary Wilson covering the Chicago district, it was learned yesterday.

Immigration agents are searching for thirty-five men not yet arrested in the drive made by the department of justice in the last two months to rid the district of dangerous aliens.

Attorneys Isaac E. Ferguson and Benjamin Bachrach, who defended the last squad of red prisoners, contended that they were not alien anarchists and that they did not advocate violence as Communists favored rule by the community. They denied that the men had plotted to destroy public buildings or to spread Nihilist doctrines.

Italian to Be Deported.

A dozen additional prisoners are in custody awaiting deportation hearings. Most of them are said to be members of the Union of Russian Workmen, an ultra-radical society pledged to Nihilist doctrines.

Andrew M. Fretesie, an Italian arrested in 1916 in connection with the bomb explosion in Milwaukee in which six policemen were killed, was sent to New York by Chicago immigration authorities yesterday for immediate deportation. He was not convicted of guilt in connection with the bomb outrage, but was ordered deported after officials heard evidence of his radical activities.

IDENTIFY DEAD MAN.

The body of an unidentified man who died dead Friday night at Iowa and Fifth Ashley streets was identified yesterday as that of Frank Blaszlewicz, 35 years old, 1864 North Wood street, a butcher. Death was caused by heart disease.

ROOSEVELT COIN

As a national tribute to the memory of Theodore Roosevelt, the reissue of a 2 cent coin bearing his likeness will be urged upon congress by the Woman's Roosevelt Memorial association.

REDS URGED TO MUTINY AT SEA, SEIZE U. S. SHIPS

New York, Nov. 22.—Mutinies at sea and the capture of American ships for the Russian soviet government were advocated in a newspaper printed in the Russian language, which was seized today at one of the headquarters here of the Communist party. To carry out this plan, members of the party were advised to obtain jobs as sailors.

Radicals awaiting deportation on Ellis island were quizzed today by members of the house immigration committee which is seeking to determine legislation necessary to speed undesirable aliens back to their native shores.

Sixty Reds of various beliefs, the majority of them held pending an appeal, reiterated their allegiance to radical movements. One boldly informed Representative Albert Johnson, chairman of the committee, that the day would come when he would wish he "had not meddled with the anarchists in this country."

The men held have organized a communist colony on the island, one radical told the committee and, in face of deportation proceedings, carry out the golden rule principles of communism, even to dividing tobacco, candy and money.

Mr. Johnson read into the record statistics to show that, of 697 arrests in this country on anarchistic charges from Feb. 7, 1917, to Nov. 1 of this year, only sixty deportation warrants were fully executed.

Urge Drastic Laws to Check Power of Reds

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 22.—Increased production to reduce the living cost and drastic laws to allay radicalism and labor troubles were advocated in resolutions adopted by the American mining congress, which ended its twenty-second annual convention here.

ART FURS for the Opera

The furrier's art is subtle. Out of materials as unlovely as the artist's pigments he cuts, shapes and matches pelt after pelt until a masterpiece is achieved.

And as much as rare jewels and rich gowns these masterpieces of fur make the splendor of the opera.

Many of the rich and beautiful furs that attracted attention at the opera last week were Shayne furs. Others equally beautiful are here to grace the remainder of the season.

Do You Know?

¶ That in 1915 Chicago was overbuilt, while in 1919 it is much underbuilt?

¶ That this condition is the result of absorption of population which has come here in the last 4 years?

¶ That the Loop congestion is getting worse every day?

¶ That every hotel in the Loop is overcrowded?

¶ That every outlying hotel is 100% rented all the time?

¶ That we have built—or remodeled flats and business blocks into—large hotels to the number of over one hundred in the last eighteen months?

¶ That Chicago cannot catch up on her building in ten years? And why?

¶ That, since 1914, our permanent, resident population has increased over 25%?

¶ That our transient population today is greater than that of any two other American cities combined (with a single exception)?

¶ That saloon corner vacancies are practically nil—and why?

¶ That one outlying moving picture theatre that runs a single picture a week exhibits to over 50,000 patrons every week? That another one that changes pictures during the week exhibits to over 60,000?

¶ That our theatres are being built much larger?

¶ That our hotels and apartment houses are being erected on a bigger scale?

¶ That our streets must be widened to accommodate our increased traffic requirements?

¶ That we have been compelled to increase our banking facilities to meet the requirements of the Chicago of 1920?

¶ That we have outgrown our postoffice and our city and county buildings?

¶ That we have over 100 outlying banks under state or national supervision today where ten years ago we had only four?

¶ That automobile traffic in Chicago today has increased 100% in density in the last two years?

¶ That next year promises to be the biggest year in the history of the building business in Chicago?

¶ That Chicago is in reality

"The Heart of the U. S. A.?"

The sweeping tide of the world's enterprise has borne down upon Chicago and is inundating it. From the farthermost parts of the earth comes the call for what we produce, for the material which we control and for the fruits of our labor. Hundreds of trains roll into Chicago each day laden with humanity. A part of these people come to remain with us permanently. Others come to take what we have to sell, and others to sell to us their goods that we may supply domestic and foreign needs. Like the old Roman Forum, this city is a very important and definite market place of the world. Chicago is the Food Forum, the Central Commodity Market, of the rich American Prairies.

All these facts mean something to you and you should know them and their relation to one another and to the growth of Chicago and its predominating importance as one of the World's Greatest Cities.

The story in the booklet which we are preparing is the real story of

"The Heart of the U. S. A."

What these facts mean to you depends altogether on how progressive you are and whether you care to improve your own financial and social condition by taking advantage of the progress of this great city. Never in the history of the world were conditions so favorable as they are today in Chicago.

'BABY REDS' FIND SANTA HASN'T QUIT, AFTER ALL

Callers at St. Vincent's to Add "Merry" to Waifs' Christmas.

Perhaps you have read about the baby bolshevik uprising at St. Vincent's Orphan asylum caused by the prospect of a no Santa Claus Christmas.

Perhaps you worried a bit about what might happen if someone didn't come to the rescue and guarantee to add the merry to Christmas for the orphans who haven't been "adopted" by somebody.

There is great glad news! Callers are arriving nearly as fast as the good sisters can open the doors and promises of Christmas cheer are coming in plentiful quantities.

The babies' mad meeting as a result was followed by one yesterday in which the president, four year old Bobby, told his fellow kickers that perhaps, after all, they are wrong, and there are a lot of kind hearts in the world for kids who can't be given away and yet haven't any homes.

Today's the Big Day.

Sunday is visitors' day at the institution, and if the callers keep coming today and promising to whisper to Santa Claus,—well, Bobby proposed last night that they call another meeting, and announce that they are almost ashamed of themselves for ever doubting that they would be remembered.

All the time the members of the bolshevik society is now taken up trying to think of things to ask for when the next nice lady calls.

And in the big wards upstairs, where the members are too young to care whether or not there is a Santa, more babies are coming into the situation every day.

Christmas Trees Coming.

Louis O. MacLoon wires THE TRIBUNE from Escanaba, Mich., as follows:

"Christmas tree ship sails Monday for Clark street bridge and will have enough trees for baby bolsheviks of St. Vincent Orphan asylum that I would like to donate, and will also carry fifty great big trees for other charitable institutions if desired."

Railroad Settles Tanner Death Claims for $7,500

"Finis" was written upon the records of the Probate court yesterday in the case of Mary and William Tanner, whose tragic death occurred early in September at the Hubbard Woods station of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad. The administrator of their estate accepted a compromise settlement of the claims against the railroad company, which was approved by Judge Henry Horner. Four thousand dollars will be paid for the death of William F. Tanner, and $3,500 for that of Mary Tanner.

15 HELD IN QUEST FOR N. Y. GUNMEN HERE ARE FREED

'Get Warrants!' Mooney Told, After Roundup of Police Characters.

"The underworld still thrives in the old Twenty-second street district and the old First ward influences still work in a mysterious way their wonders to perform."

So remarked a detective sergeant yesterday after fifteen notorious police characters, rounded up after weeks of painstaking effort by the police, trickled through the fingers of the law and went back to their old haunts to chuckle covertly over their latest victory.

For weeks the rumor has gone through the underworld that Chicago is being made the headquarters for a number of New York gunmen, pickpockets, and burglars. Chief of Detectives Mooney heard the rumor and assigned Detective Sergeants Charles Gratton, Charles Engle, William Crot, and Frank Smith to locate the rendezvous of the suspects.

After weeks of shadowing they located the meeting place, the H. & H. cigar store and poolroom at 50 East Twenty-second street, formerly owned by Joseph Hogarty, a police character, killed some time ago in a gun battle.

Recalls Rosenthal Murder.

Early yesterday morning the detectives swooped down on the place and rounded up fifteen men. Among them was Max Williams, 2124 South Michigan avenue, the "Maxie" Williams who figured with "Gyp the Blood" in the Rosenthal murder case in New York. "Maxie," who had a long police record in New York before he turned state's evidence in the Becker case, was driven out of New York by District Attorney Jerome. Recently, it is said, he has become a leader in the affairs of the Twenty-second street underworld.

The others arrested were John Reed, convicted pander; Matthew Wallace, convicted of burglary and larceny, and Stephen Cramer, Joseph Donnelly, Joseph McGraw, Samuel Salerno, Alfred Orlando, Percy Haller, Louis Stacey, James Flanigan, Fred Monroe, Peter Karkages, Ralph Amin, and George Randall, all of whom have been taken as suspects in various cases. All of the men admitted they had no regular employment.

Men Brought Into Court.

As soon as the detective bureau was reached, the news had spread through the Twenty-second street district and wires were pulled to get the men out. Attorney Aaron Andrews was on hand in Judge David's court early in the morning and applied for writs of habeas corpus. Judge David made the writs returnable at 12:30 o'clock and notified the police department to have the men in court. Lieut. John Naughton argued against the release of the suspects.

At 12:30 Judge David's bailiff called up to find out where the men were. Lieut. John Loftus explained the records at the bureau of indentification had not been checked up yet. However, he got the men together and hurried to court, arriving after 1 o'clock.

"Where were these men arrested?" asked Judge David.

"In the H. & H. poolroom in Twenty-second street," he was told.

"What were they doing?"

"Playing pool and loafing."

"These illegal arrests have got to stop," Judge David said. "These men are discharged." Then, turning to Loftus, he added, according to the lieutenant, "You tell that man over in La Salle street [evidently meaning Chief of Detectives Mooney] he'd better discontinue this method of making arrests without warrants."

"The next time we'll have warrants, you can bet your bottom dollar on that," said Chief Mooney.

9 Arrested in Gambling Raid in Loop; Seize Dice

Nine men were arrested, dice, money and cards were confiscated, and an electric buzzer, with which a lookout vainly tried to warn the players of the approach of the police, was torn from the wall in a raid on an alleged gambling resort on the third floor of the Imperial building, 314 South Clark street, yesterday afternoon. A card table on which a game was in progress when the police entered the room was broken in the scuffle.

FARMERS URGE U.S.-OWNED SHIPS AS WELL AS RAILS

Federal Development of Minerals Advocated in Meeting Here.

Government ownership and operation without profit of all railroads and ships and government development of all mineral resources now in public ownership were included in the legislative program which was indorsed after a two hour debate yesterday by the farm labor joint conference, in session at the Morrison hotel.

It was the second day of the meeting of farmers and labor representatives to bring about closer relations between industrial and agricultural workers.

The program embodies support of the Kenyon-Anderson bill to control the meat packing industry.

Legislation to compel the "financial beneficiaries of the war" to pay the cost of the war through the imposition of still higher rates of taxation on incomes, estates, and war profits was urged.

Seek Coöperative Credit.

A scheme for coöperative credit through legislation designed to "end the present concentration and control of the credit and financial resources of the country in the hands of a few private interests," and opposition to the Sabath oleomargarine bill were also included in the program.

C. H. Gustafson, president of the Nebraska Farmers' union, and Oscar McGill of Seattle were speakers at the meeting.

Solution of the problem of the high cost of living will mean speedy adjustment of industrial unrest, Warren S. Stone of Cleveland, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, declared.

He suggested that the farmers unite to form well organized systems of chain stores which might handle farm produce by selling directly to the consumer. He proposed that a committee be elected when the time arrives, which would put the plan, after it has been completely drafted, before the labor commission in Washington.

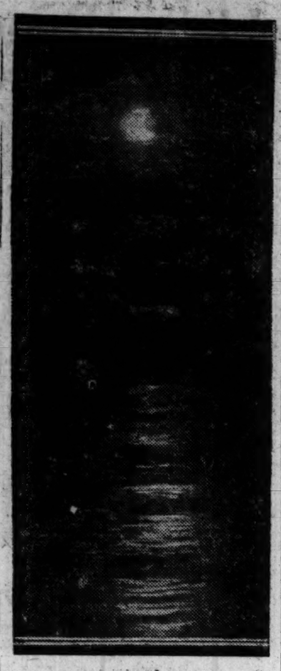
He also advocated a banking system controlled by the farmers, pointing out that the farmers are one of the most dependent of all classes of workers in regard to financial matters, although they are among the most powerful from the point of view of production.

Name Special Committee.

The conference closed last night. Herbert F. Baker, president of the council; Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; George P. Hampton, managing director of the council; Dalton D. Clarke, president of the National Coöperative association; William Bouck, master of the Washington State Grange; E. A. Curtis, vice president of the Order of Railway Conductors, and Benjamin C. Marsh, secretary of the council, were appointed as a committee to attend the A. F. of L. and Railway Brotherhood conference to be held in Washington Dec. 15.

THE PARTIAL ECLIPSE

Tribune Staff Photographer Obtains Rare Picture as Chicagoans View Phenomenon.



The partial eclipse of the sun took place as advertised yesterday morning. Thousands watched it through smoked glasses. It began at sunrise, when the moon, passing in front, obscured a segment of the southern part. The maximum of the eclipse was attained at 9:06 a. m., when six-tenths of the sun's face was covered.

LABOR ENVOYS MEET TO LAUNCH NATIONAL PARTY

Defy Wishes of Gompers; Many Radicals Among Delegates Here.

"Once we get the workers together, there is no question as to what we can do, but the difficult part is to get them together."

John H. Walker, downstate labor leader, made this statement yesterday in a speech at the opening session of a convention called to form a national labor party, which is meeting in Carmen's hall at Ashland avenue and Van Buren street.

"If we enroll all the workers and adopt a program calculated to obtain their rights we will strike fear into the hearts of all those who are trying to crush us," he continued. "They have given us the opportunity, and we wish to take advantage of it."

Walker's speech came toward the close of the first day's session of the convention, the object of which, as outlined, is "to down the Democratic party first, the Republican party next, and then try to elect a president and governors next year."

All Shades of Belief.

The delegates, numbering about 1,200, of whom sixty were women, included radicals, former Socialists, I. W. W., coöperative socities, syndicalists, representatives of radical farmer organizations and labor leaders in every kind of trade union. They had been summoned together by John Fitzpatrick and his associates in the recent Cook county Labor party, started early this year with the intention of electing Fitzpatrick mayor. It is declared the launching of a Labor party is contrary to the wishes of Samuel Gompers and may lead to a split with the American Federation of Labor.

The convention was called to order at 10 o'clock yesterday morning by Max Hayes of Cleveland, editor of a labor paper, who was elected permanent chairman.

The morning session was taken up with passing on the credentials of the delegates and appointing a committee on committees, which in turn appointed a committee to draw up resolutions, and other committees.

Fitzpatrick gave the address of welcome to the delegates, of whom a large number were Chicagoans.

Radical Program Urged.

Chairman Hayes announced the program of the party calls for nearly everything that radicals throughout the country are seeking, from taking over the railroads, so the workers can share in the profits, to the release of "class war" prisoners.

During the afternoon Walker was elected vice chairman and Frank J. Esper, secretary of the Illinois Labor party, was made secretary of the convention. Walker, Esper and Hayes outlined the aims of the party amid cheers.

Nonpartisan Men Withdraw.

Three Minnesota delegates representing the Nonpartisan league withdrew their credentials at night, saying they were not willing to sacrifice the league to the interests of the new party. They reserved the right to ask reinstatement however, and it is expected that Gov. Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota, their leader, who will be one of the principal speakers, will patch up their differences.

Sessions will be held throughout the week.

Jewish Pogrom Protest Stirs Poles' Opposition

Demonstrations planned for tomorrow by Chicago Jews against alleged pogroms in Ukrainia were deprecated in a resolution adopted Friday night by the Chicago branch of the Polish National Alliance. The resolution decries all such demonstrations as an effort "of professional foreign agitators to transplant to American soil European racial quarrels and to inject them into politics of this country".

TOMORROW DAY OF MOURNING FOR SLAIN JEWS

Tomorrow will be a day of mourning for the thousands of Jews of western Europe who have been massacred for their faith. Chicago will observe the day by holding a meeting at Orchestra hall and by a funeral procession in the morning. Former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Bishop Samuel Fallows, Judge Marcus Kavanagh and Jane Addams will speak.

The procession will form at Roosevelt road and Robey street, marching east to Halsted street, north on Halsted to Jackson boulevard, east on Jackson to Michigan boulevard and south to Orchestra hall. The marchers will sew black bands on their coat sleeves and the musical instruments will be draped in black. No banners other than the American flag will be carried.

More than 1,000 Jewish soldiers, sailors and marines will lead the procession. They will be followed by all the rabbis of Chicago, and following them thousands of marchers, four abreast. At 12 o'clock all Jewish laborers will stop work and stores and offices will close.

A similar demonstration will take place in New York, where Senator Medill McCormick, Jacob Schiff and Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis will speak.

THE FRANKLIN SEDAN

That enclosed cars offer most among automobiles, and the Franklin Sedan most among enclosed cars, is becoming apparent to more people every day.

Franklin Sedan performance is continually proving that a light, flexible enclosed car can travel unusually long distances in a day without exhausting rider or driver. And more motorists are seeing daily that this car can go where heavy, rigid ones can not. This explains the rapid increase in Franklin Sedan ownership.

Then, too, the general advertising tendency toward light weight and flexibility—Franklin principles for seventeen years—is teaching people what gives economy, comfort, usability and long life to a car. And the value of year-round usefulness, only possible with Direct Air Cooling (no water to boil or freeze) has become apparent through owner comparisons. No one disputes today the advantages of the proved economy resulting from

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation

Wide Observation Windows giving unobstructed outlook, and two Wide Doors increasing vision and making access easy, combine with the Slanting V-shaped Windshield and the Sloping French-style Hood to distinguish the Franklin Sedan from commonplace designs. They also identify it as the car of unequaled performance.

Let us prove the Franklin Car to you. Whatever preconceptions you have of what a car should do, or whatever recollections you have of what your Cars have done, will be exceeded by Franklin performance, over roads of your choice.

OTHER FRANKLIN TYPES

TOURING CAR—Franklin performance embodied in a Full Size, Five-Passenger Open Car. It is the most economical car of its type.

RUNABOUT—All the advantages of Franklin Light Weight Flexible Construction in a Two-Passenger Open Car.

FOUR-PASSENGER ROADSTER—A convenient, attractive car. Compact, yet having ample room for four.

BROUGHAM—A personal, enclosed Franklin Car, intimate when used by two, commodious when carrying four.

G. O. P. MUST END ORGY OF WASTE, COLLEGIAN SAYS

Nicholas Murray Butler Attacks Administration and League.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 22.—Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, in an address here tonight before the Union League declared that "upon the Republican party rests the responsibility of bringing to an end the veritable orgy of waste, extravagance, and administrative incompetence that has marked the course of the present administration."

The speaker, analyzing the history of the Republican party, said that in its making there had gone four sets of influences—viz.: "the strong and constructive nationalism of the American government's founders, the passionate American zeal of Henry Clay, the moral idealism of Abraham Lincoln, and the broad, human sympathy of Theodore Roosevelt."

"Meet People Face to Face."

If the party remained true to its principles and ideals, he said, and exerted itself "to meet face to face the people of the United States who may be troubled or in doubt, the future of this country will be secure future of this country will be secure."

Dr. Butler asserted that once the American people "understood the issue" they would "rise in their might to overwhelm the enemies of America." The issue, he said, was "the preservation of the American form of government, with its incomparable blessing of liberty under law, and its fundamental principles of equality of citizenship, equality of opportunity and the right to hold and dispose of one's own gains."

Attacks Administration.

The Democratic administration he charged with "trifling" with that issue by giving "posts of honor and authority to those who hold and teach doctrines in flat antagonism to the principles on which our government rests." He said the administration had "even commissioned men of that type to carry on more or less authoritative negotiations with revolutionaries in other lands."

Evanston Will Fill Its Red Cross Qaota This Time

Evanston's campaign for $20,000 for the Red Cross, which has been directed by Mrs. James A. Patten from her sick bed for the last two weeks, was assured of a successful completion yesterday when Miss Ada Murray, Mrs. Patten's secretary, announced that the quota would be reached and probably exceeded by several hundred dollars.

HARDING MAKES ENTRY IN RACE FOR PRESIDENCY

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—The hat of Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio was tossed into the ring today for the presidential contest next year by Harry M. Daugherty of Columbus in a statement issued with the approval of Senator Harding.

In an explanatory note accompanying the Daugherty statement it was mentioned that Senator Harding and Mr. Daugherty had had a conference and had carefully surveyed the political situation throughout the country. Harding pledged candidates for delegate to the Republican national convention are to be put up in every Ohio congressional district at the primaries on April 27, 1920, and efforts will be made to capture delegates in other states.

"The next campaign," Mr. Daugherty said in his statement, "will have two issues—one, Americanism; the other, the welfare of our industries and commerce. If I am right on this theory, then the man to be chosen as the candidate of the party should be safe and sane on both propositions."

DARK HORSES OF G. O. P. GO TO POLE AT DEC. 10 MEET

Lowden and Wood Are Groomed for Speed in Preliminary.

Blankets will be removed from half a dozen prospective dark horses for the Republican presidential nomination and the two entries who are already on the track, Gov. Lowden and Gen. Wood, will show some of their best speed at the Republican national committee session at Washington, Dec. 10.

The Lowden and the Wood headquarters forces that are now on the job in Chicago will devote the intervening two weeks to shaping up their preliminary work for delegates from the western states and will move to Washington about Dec. 5.

Gov. Lowden's managers expect to have full fledged campaign headquarters in operation during the Washington session and it is confidently expected by well posted politicians that an important and decisive pronouncement will come in behalf of Gen. Wood that will be tantamount to a declaration of his candidacy.

Look for Wood's Resignation.

The impression prevails in Chicago that this statement, when made, will be coincident with an announcement that Gen. Wood is about to resign from the army. The contingency is suggested, however, that a fresh outbreak of industrial disturbance in the central department, of which Gen. Wood is the commanding general, would tend to postpone such announcement.

Gen. Wood is quoted, within the last forty-eight hours, as having said: "I have nothing to say regarding my possible resignation from the army. Just at this present time, I have a job to do and I am engaged to the best of my ability in doing it. My main business today is to support the government of the United States with all my power to protect life and property and to maintain the law whenever the federal forces in this department are called for such purposes."

Jan. 1 to Be "Zero Hour."

The "zero hour" popularly established for all of the presidential starters to get into the going is Jan. 1, when candidates are required to file their official papers in South Dakota for the presidential primaries. It is the understanding that South Dakota is a fair field for all comers and is not tied in, at this time, to any individual, and, consequently seems likely to produce the first formal list of national convention entrants.

It is certain that Gov. Lowden's name will be on the South Dakota ballots and it has been indicated substantially that Gen. Wood's forces already are organized there. The Washington round-up next month, however, will have all of the trimmings of a preliminary national convention.

Chicago's Ward Battle.

In Illinois immediate political interest centers around the contests in the thirty-five wards of Chicago for ward committeemen, who will be elected for four years on April 13, and who will constitute the regular party organization during that period. Flying stories have it one day that Mayor Thompson proposes to make trouble for Gov. Lowden, and the next day such reports are discounted 100 per cent by city hall authorities.

It is deemed possible that the mayor himself will have something quite definite to say about this when he gets to Washington, at the head of the delegation of 150 city hall Republicans that will accompany him to the national committee session. The calm judgment of influential Republicans now is that Gov. Lowden will have a solid delegation from Illinois, and that there will be no candidate against him for the popular presidential preference vote on April 13.

Conferences are to proceed during the coming week having to do with the organization of the constitutional convention that assembles at Springfield Jan. 6. Eastern and central Illinois delegates have been asked to meet at Urbana next week. Another conference is to be held later in southern Illinois and a general conference of Chicago and downstate delegates is being planned to be held in Chicago.

Robertson Today Seeks Women's Aid in Smoke War

Health Commissioner Robertson hopes to enlist 2,000 women as active workers in the anti-smoke campaign at a meeting to be held this morning at the Woods theater.

The women are graduates and undergraduates of the training course in home nursing conducted under the auspices of the health department. An alumni organization will be formed at today's meeting.

Dr. Robertson will preside and Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, will address the nurses.

BOY SCOUT DRIVE IN CHICAGO TO BE ROUGH ON RATS

Eight thousand Chicago Boy Scouts are about to become modern Pied Pipers and have declared a war on rats and ground squirrels.

The Illinois state board of health has asked coöperation in a drive to exterminate the disease carrying rodents. The bubonic plague, as it is known, is spread by infected rats and ground squirrels. The media of infection are the flies with which these rats and squirrels are infested. The flea feeds on the body of the infected rat and thus becomes an infected carrier.

According to the health department, the disease has formerly been confined west of the Rocky mountains, but in the last three months it has appeared in several other parts of the United States. It is to prevent it from spreading to Chicago that the Boy Scouts will next week launch their coöperative campaign. The scouts will employ hundreds of rat terriers and cats.

PUZZLED ABOUT NOMINATION OF MILITARY MAN

Politicians Study Wood's Growing Strength and Talk of Prejudice.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—The continuously growing strength of Gen. Leonard Wood as a presidential possibility has set the politicians of both parties to discussing the political advantages and disadvantages of the nomination of a military man for civilian office.

The opponents of Gen. Wood in the Republican party are loudly protesting that it would be a mistake to nominate him because, in their professed judgment, the country would not take kindly to the idea of a military man in the White House. The Democrats profess to hope that the Republicans will nominate the general, asserting that "anybody could beat a military man."

Popular at Gary.

Supporters of Gen. Wood contend that while his military training and views on preparedness are an asset his real strength lies in his qualifications as a civil administrator, his progressive republicanism, has manifested vigor in dealing with lawlessness and bolshevism and his conceptions of a stalwart nationalism.

They cite the popularity won by Gen. Wood by his resourceful, effective and yet fair measures by which he restored and preserved order at Omaha and Gary. He became so popular at Gary that folks were saying he could be elected mayor of the city unanimously. John Fitzpatrick, leader of the steel strikers, is quoted as asserting that Gen. Wood is the squarest man he ever dealt with.

Twenty-six Were Elected.

Whether soldier candidates are popular or unpopular with the people is a question upon which there is much theorizing but little demonstration. There were sixty-six soldier candidates in the state and municipal elections this month, according to the information available here, and of these twenty-six were elected.

Those politicians who are eager to demonstrate that military men are unpopular as candidates have been quick to seize upon this showing as proof of their contention. Detailed analysis reveals, however, that most of the forty defeated soldiers were the candidates of minority parties and however popular were unable to overcome the normal pluralities of majority parties in the various states and communities. Likewise the twenty-six who won were as a rule the candidates of majority parties and however unpopular might justifiably be held indebted to local party strength for their success. In some cases soldiers ran ahead, in others behind their tickets.

Are Many Elements.

The only definite conclusion apparently possible is that the military factor is not necessarily decisive in the candidacies of soldiers. Each case is complicated with a multitude of other elements which generally overshadow the military factor.

The case of Maj. La Guardia, who was elected president of the board of aldermen in Democratic New York City has been much discussed. There is no doubt that the candidate's service in the late war added to his strength, but it is not unlikely he would have won in any event. He was a member of congress, well known in the city and extremely popular before he went to war. In addition it was not the first time a Republican had been elected to this position and in this election there was a great uprising against Tammany from which he benefited.

Not a Good Test.

Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt overwhelmingly defeated Elias Raff, a draft private, for the New York assembly. But the district is Republican and Roosevelt well known and extremely popular. Unquestionably the result would have been no different had neither candidate seen service. The Democrats deemed it necessary to put up a soldier against Roosevelt, but it would be unfair to hold that in this case there was a test of the theory that privates are more popular than officers as candidates.

Testimony of the popularity of soldier candidates comes from Mississippi, where sixty of the 230 members of the new legislature are world war veterans, the soldier candidates defeating civilians in nearly every case in the Democratic primaries.

On the other hand there were a number of soldier candidates in the Philadelphia primaries, all of whom were defeated.

5 GOVERNORS TO VISIT LIVE STOCK EXPOSITION HERE

South Dakota will be largely represented at the opening of the International Live Stock exposition next Saturday at the International amphitheater, according to Charles McCaffree, who is in charge of that state's exhibit here. The delegation of more than 100 will be led by Gov. P. Norbeck.

Manya of the young stockmen in the party, owners of vast tracts of land and enormous herds of pure blooded cattle, are bachelors, and will come on in hopes of finding wives here.*

Tuesday, Dec. 2, will be known as "Governor's day." Among the state governors who have signified their intention of being present are F. O. Lowden of Illinois, E. L. Philipp of Wisconsin, Samuel R. McKelvie of Nebraska, W. L. Harding of Iowa, and R. D. Carey of Wyoming.

One of the leading attractions of the Live Stock exposition will be the hay and grain show, which has not been staged since the war started back in 1914. The Grain Dealers' National association has offered a handsome trophy, which will be presented to the entrant exhibiting the best ear of corn. Cash prizes have also been offered for specimens of corn, and the Chicago Board of Trade has given a large amount of money to be used as prizes.

BADGERS DOWN MAROONS, 10 TO 3

ELUSIVE CASEY AND YALE SLIPS WIN FOR HARVARD

Forty Yard Dash and Kick by R. Horween Net a 10 to 3 Victory.

BY HENRY CROSS.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Phantomlike Eddie Casey, Harvard's pale faced half back, brought his football career to a glorious finish in the stadium this afternoon, when he snatched the pigskin from the air and zigzagged his way through the Yale eleven on a serpentine dash of forty yards, which carried him over the Eli goal line and won the time honored gridiron battle for the Crimson, 10 to 3.

Casey's thrilling gallop came in the second period, when the Eli men thought they had the Crimson streak completely covered. Up to this time Yale had two or more players watching the elusive sprinter, and had buried him in the turf time and again. Yale's final warning had been, "Watch Casey."

Trick Play Fools Yale.

Toward the end of the second period, when the Crimson was leading by the slight margin of a field goal, Casey sailed off the play which sent the 40,000 spectators into a spasm of excitement. Harvard had carried the ball to Yale's forty-five yard mark, and Price Casey had attempted to slip through the blue jerseyed wall with cartlike thrusts. The line battering yielded only a few yards, and Ralph Horween, Crimson full back, dropped back as if to punt the ball.

And Casey Grabs Ball.

The players were fooled by the play, for instead of kicking, Horween went back with the ball in his extended right hand. As the Yale forwards rushed down on him, he made a short quick pass over one end of the line, and from the melee of players leaped Casey. He pulled down the oval and set out upon his journey.

Eddie held the ball out in front of him, with his hands clutched on the ends of the leather oval. The Harvard crowds on the west side of the stadium were up on their feet. Casey was on a rampage. Here was the moment which every Harvard undergraduate and every old timer had been looking for. The Harvard stand blazed in a riot of Crimson colors.

The thousand of Yale followers also rose up as Casey began to whirl his way through the maze of Blue players like a dancing dervish. They waved their clinched fists in the air as they screamed for some Blue tacklers to wrap steel-like arms around the Crimson streak.

Eludes Eli Tackles.

The Yale players dove for his legs, and, with an elusive twist, he edged away from them and left them sprawling on the cleat torn sod. The crowd was now in a frenzy, for the mighty Casey had wormed his way past all the Yale players but Kempton.

Little Kempton, the Yale quarter back, stood between Casey and the goal line. One after one the white chalk marks seemed to draw backward under Casey's feet. He dodged along in his dash of glory, and, as Kempton got set to spring at him, Eddie gracefully glided off to one side and the Yale quarter back's hands slipped from him. On and on he galloped until he gaily leaped over the goal line.

Escapes from Kempton.

Casey and Kempton, teammates on a great Phillips Exeter eleven of a few years ago, had met each other in what proved to be the crisis of a gridiron classic. Now each was the recognized star of a varsity eleven. On this occasion one had to bow to the other, and it was Kempton who bowed. The Yale pack finally caught him, but too late. They were on him and buried him before he could get the ball over in the middle of the goal posts.

Casey's face was white when he got to his feet, but he was smiling. His day had come, and the feeling of a lifetime came over the football star. The long afternoons of hard, gruelling work on Soldiers' field in preparation for this game were forgotten. The painful bruises and the hard knocks passed from Casey's mind forever. Above the roar and the tumult which came from all parts of the great crowd the name of Casey, Casey, Casey could be heard.

Braden Kicks Long Goal.

Spectators will long remember the field goal kicked by Braden for Yale's only score in the last period. The ball carried fifty-three yards with a twenty-five mile wind through the center of the Harvard goal, after Braden had rested it with his line bending under the strong Crimson attack.

Harvard won because it knew more football. Yale clung to the old tactics, the hard line smashing drives, which made the Elis great on the gridiron in years gone by. The bulldogs fought as hard as they could fight, but they didn't know the right kind of football. It was the new game with its forward pass which won.

It looked as if Yale's old fashioned tactics were going to win out by sheer strength in the third period, for the

MICHIGAN FALLS BEFORE GOPHER ATTACK, 34-7

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Minnesota's line-ripping offense stove holes into Michigan's eleven today, and the Gophers smothered the Wolverines, 34 to 7, in the first meeting of the two teams since 1910.

Before a throng of 30,000 spectators Minnesota proved its superiority in every department, with the one exception of punting. Here Sparks demonstrated his right to be awarded premier honors of the western conference in this branch of the game.

Gophers Start Early.

Minnesota started action in the very first moments of play. Using Coach Williams' far famed shift, Minnesota was enabled to keep its plays well covered, and Lampi, Rubin, Oss and Arntson plowed steadily through the Michigan line for gain after gain. After three minutes of straight attack Lampi went over for Minnesota's first count. He then kicked goal. Michigan seemed to strengthen, but it proved to be only temporary, for Minnesota again counted a touchdown before the first period ended.

It was during the second quarter that Coach Yost's protégés held and fought Minnesota on equal terms. Sparks' punting proved, as always, the biggest feature of Michigan5s plays. One of his kicks traveled the entire distance of the field, being the longest ever witnessed in Ann Arbor.

Victors' Attack Varied.

Minnesota's attack was varied and aggressive throughout the game. Michigan was unable to fathom the Minnesota's shift and when it did it found it difficult to stop the terrific onslaughts of the flying Minnesota back.

Lampi and Oss were the outstanding features in the Minnesota attack. Both men did brilliant open field running. Goetz and Vick bore the brunt of the offensive work for Michigan. Fromke, who was substituted for Weston in the second quarter, played a consistent game.

In the last period Michigan weakened and Minnesota made large gains at will. Oss broke away twice in the last minutes of play, once making 68 yards gain and next for 45 yards. The three longest gains of the game were made by this fleet footed Minnesota back.

Illinois Alumni Go Wild as Team Beats Buckeyes

Three hundred enthusiastic Illinois alumni ascended almost to the Hotel Morrison chandliers when Bob Fletcher's place kick turned defeat into victory in the final two minutes yesterday. The Orange and Blue followers followed play by play on a special wire installed by the Illini club.

POLICE RUSHED TO STOP BATTLE AT PITT COMBAT

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 22.—One policeman was seriously hurt and many persons sustained minor injuries in disorders which marked the University of Pittsburgh-Carnegie Tech game at Forbes field today. Students clashed during the rest period between the first and second halves of the game, when, according to the police, members of the Pitt body made an effort to remove a Tech flag from a staff in center field.

Police reserves, stationed about the field, charged into the students, but it was some time before quiet was restored. A man who had climbed the staff was placed under arrest, but a crowd from the Pitt side of the field rushed the police, and another fight started. Finally the police fought their way from the field, taking with them five men, who registered at the station as Pitt students.

SCRAPPER WILDE SPENDS 3 HOURS VISITING IN CITY

Jimmy Wilde, the British flyweight champion, accompanied by his wife, Manager David Hughes, Trainer Benny Williams, and Otto Borchert of Milwaukee, spent three hours in Chicago yesterday and left at 6 o'clock for Milwaukee.

The little Britisher called at Bloom & Mayer's, where he weighed 108 pounds in his street clothes. He was anxious to get located in Milwaukee and will stop there until the Dundee-White fight is over and then expects to return to Chicago and finish training for his bout with Jack Sharkey at Milwaukee on Dec. 6.

Wilde announced that, while he had met British fighters at as high as 118 pounds, he would not meet any one in this country weighing more than 116 ringside.

The diminutive Welshman has few of the characteristics of a fighter. He made a hit with the local fans who met him.

RUTGERS TEAM SPILLS PURPLE IN 28-0 COMBAT

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

New York, Nov. 23.—[Special.]—Employing a driving attack, supported by a powerful line, Rutgers defeated Northwestern today at the old Federal league baseball park in Newark, 28 to 0.

The Purple eleven was outweighed considerably, and this advantage, combined with the driving power of the backs, enabled the eastern aggregation to make consistent gains through the line and off the tackles. This attack was varied occasionally by an end run from a double or delayed pass.

Shortly after the kickoff Rutgers made its first score. After the Purple had advanced four yards in two plays, a forward pass, Koehler to Chester Bernard, was intercepted by French, who ran to the Purple forty yard mark.

Visitors' Line Collapses.

It was on the next play that the strength of the Rutgers line showed itself. French, the Rutgers full back, was given the ball for a plunge through center. It seemed as if the whole Northwestern line was shoved back and suddenly French emerged from the mass and sprinted to the Purple five yard line.

Northwestern put up a stubborn defense and held Rutgers on two line plunges, but on the third attempt Gardner bucked straight through for a touchdown. Nothing happened until the second period.

Tear Into Purple Forwards.

A Rutgers punt which crossed the Purple goal line for a touchback put Northwestern in the hole shortly after the opening of the second period. The ball was put in play on the westerners' twenty yard line, but was surrendered to Rutgers by the punt route in midfield.

The driving Rutgers backs then tore the Purple line to pieces by rushing straight through, sometimes for ten or fifteen yards. When the Rutgers backs were about to be tackled, they revolved in such a manner that they either broke loose or lunged forward two and three yards. This system of attack carried the ball over the Purple line for the second score, Gardner again carrying the ball. He also kicked goal, making the count 14 to 0.

Eighty Yards for Score.

Rutgers' third marker came shortly afterward when French smashed through the Purple line and, aided by perfect interference, ran eighty yards for a touchdown. Gardner kicked goal, making the count 21 to 0.

In the third period Rutgers started another successful march from its forty yard line, which resulted in another touchdown, French carrying the oval over the counting mark. Gardner again kicked the goal. Lineup:

BOB FLETCHER'S PLACE KICK WINS TITLE FOR ILLINI

Score Near End of Game Beats Ohio, 9 to 7, in Great Battle.

Walter Eckersall's selections for the All-Conference football elevens of 1919 will appear in next Sunday's "Tribune."

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Columbus, O., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—In one of the most spectacular games played in a decade, Illinois downed Ohio State today, 9 to 7. A beauty place kick by Bob Fletcher from the thirty-two yard line in the last two minutes of play turned defeat into victory and broke the heart of the State of Ohio.

With the count 7 to 6 against them when Chick Harley scored for the Buckeyes in the third period and kicked goal, it looked as if the men of Bob Zuppke were doomed to defeat. Displaying a fighting spirit that commanded admiration, the Illini, with at least three stars lying injured on the side lines, braced and hurled a succession of forward passes that twice brought them within striking distance of Ohio's goal in the final period.

Illinois Place Kick Fails.

In the first instance, Reichle attempted a place kick and failed. It was growing dark and all seemed lost. But once more the Illini got the ball way back on their own fifteen yard line, and in desperation opened up again with the passing game. One beauty pass by Sternaman put the ball in midfield after Chick Harley himself had touched but failed to hold the ball. It flew out of his arms into the anxious hands of an Illinois man and was safe.

Three more in rapid succession were tried and all failed, but regardless of that the Illini tried another and it worked and the ball was on Ohio's thirty-five yard line. Once more three passes were attempted and all three failed, but once again a fourth try made it first down on Ohio's twenty-two yard line.

Bob Fletcher Enters Battle.

Not much time was left. Ralph Fletcher, the expert place kicker of the Illini, was on the side lines, crippled. Some time before he had been helped from the battlefield, too badly injured to return. It looked like the hope of Illini was over; but Brother Bob, a smaller but just as spirited a lad, immediately took his brother's place as the hope of the Illini.

Bob had performed brilliantly at quarter back all through the game. He dropped back to the thirty-two yard line. He gauged the distance carefully, although the whistle was liable to blow at any moment. Sternaman held the ball for him. He signaled for the pass, planted the oval on the grass and little Bob made his kick.

The ball sailed low over the scrimmage line. It looked as if some tall rival leaped up just far enough to tag it and start it spinning end over end. But the ball went tumbling on and finally carried over the cross bar and fell behind.

Visiting Team Goes Wild.

Illinois players and substitutes went mad. There was one tremendous groan from the horde of Ohio rooters. Chick Harley, gallant captain of the Ohio outfit, playing his last college game, crumbled to earth beneath the goal posts and cried. There was only a few seconds left to play; barely enough time for the kickoff and a couple of plays and the combat ended with Illinois having the best claim of all for the championship of the west.

Previous to that stirring bit of play the Ohio team had set the throng wild with delight. Illinois had scored a touchdown in the first period when Dutch Sternaman broke loose on a play off tackle and ran fifty yards for a touchdown. Reichle failed to kick an easy goal. That was the only score of the first half.

Decide on Forward Pass.

In the third period Ohio took a decisive brace. Harley and his men battled in Illinois' territory the greater part of the period. Finally they had the ball on Illinois' twenty-seven yard line. It was fourth down with six yards to gain.

Harley took a chance on a forward pass instead of trying a field goal, which wouldn't have tied the score. He dropped back and from a punt formation carried the ball well over to the right side of the field. By that time MacDonald was over in the far corner to the left. Harley hurled the ball away over there and MacDonald leaped and got it. He was downed one yard from the goal line.

Harley Scores Touchdown.

The Ohio rooters went mad. The old wooden grand stand shook and quivered as it reflected the emotion of the crowd. A moment later Harley himself plunged the one yard for a touchdown and the score was tied. Then it seemed as if the old stand surely would fall. Never was there such a scene on a ball field. In another moment Harley kicked the goal that gave Ohio a 7 to 6 margin and there was another demonstration. For some unaccountable reason the old stand stood the strain.

It looked like a sure victory for Ohio and a wonderful finish for Chick Harley. Minutes were required for the throng to recover. The period was nearly over. Then came the fourth, and Illinois began its desperate battle to win.

Illinois Blocks Ball.

Ohio seemed confident. The Buckeyes got the ball and carried it as they hadn't all afternoon. Chick Harley got loose for a twenty-five yard run, his only stirring part of the day. It brought the ball within striking distance of the Illinois goal. There was a chance for a field goal from a spot beyond the forty yard line.

Instead of playing safe by punting, Harley called upon Pixley, his 230 pound guard, to try a place kick. It probably was too far for Chick himself. The big guard attempted it, but an Illinois man dashed up and blocked it. The ball went spinning away down the field. Two Illinois men and one Ohio man were after it. An Illinois man fell on it on about the thirty yard line, and again Illinois had a chance. However, it didn't work.

Sternaman Stars on Passes.

Harley kicked the ball back into apparently safe territory. But Illinois at once began its desperate passing game. Sternaman did the passing, and it was wonderful. Soon there was another chance for a field goal. Reichle was called upon, but his kick was wide, and again the Ohioans breathed easily.

Harley kicked the ball away back near the Illinois goal, and then the forward passing began again. Darkness was coming on. The end was near. Lights were blinking in the press-stand. The distant windows were lighted. No one could believe that Ohio was in danger, but a couple of forward passes put the ball back in Ohio's territory again. A third one put it within striking distance.

The Illinois rooters, 300 strong, yelled for Ralph Fletcher. But the star kicker was lying injured on the side lines. Then brother Bob came to the rescue, and Illinois won a championship and Ohio was heartbroken. Lineup:

ILLINI-OHIO NOTES

Columbus, O., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Fully 16,000 were at the game. There might have been twice that many had there been room.

Harley broke down completely at the finish and was carried off the field, not because of injury but because of grief. It was the only time in his college career he had been licked.

Early in the game a mob broke down a portion of the fence and swarmed upon the field. The heavy sticks of police turned some of them back, but most of them found some place to look at the battle.

A lot of money was evident in the morning, so much of it that odds of 8 to 10 were offered. The 300 or more Illinois rooters took what they could of it, but after paying car fare here, not many of them had enough to make an impression.

A bunch of Columbus business men covered a bundle of cash said to be $3,500 which came here from Madison, Wis., to be placed on Illinois. This same bunch cleaned up more than that a week ago in Madison, so are still ahead.

BY ALBON HOLDEN.

In the graying shadows of dusk, while the field judge watched the seconds tick on his watch as the game ebbed to a finish, a substitute, fresh from the sidelines, broke loose and dashed sixty-two yards through eleven fagged Chicago players for a touchdown that gave Wisconsin a 10 to 3 victory on Stagg field.

It was Allan Davey of Aurora, Ill., who, with the curtain lowering for the end of the 1919 season, burst into a streak of Cardinal as he raced over the chalkmarks to the winning score. There were just forty seconds remaining as he slid between the goal posts, turning what seemed a certain tie into a victory for the Badgers.

Runs Through Whole Team.

Just how he did it can be told in two words. He ran. He dodged little, he sidestepped not at all, and he broke only one tackle, that when Capt. Charlie Higgins of Chicago made a frantic dive at him. Davey's feat was a burst of pure speed, not around an unprotected flank, but straight down the center of the field where the Maroons were thickest.

Chicago's sorrow last night was more for Higgins than for any other athlete or even for Coach Stagg. "Hig," the giant captain, standing six feet three inches from the turf and weighing 213 pounds, feels that he lost the game. But the chance that he had to bring the fleeting little Badger substitute to earth was a slim one.

Effort to Play Safe Fails.

Chicago intercepted a forward pass on its own fifteen yard line and asked how much time remained. Less than two minutes, was the answer, and after failing to make more than six yards in three thrusts Capt. Higgins kicked up the field. It was a long boot, high and spinning, with a half spiral and half tumble.

Davey, who had been in the game less than two minutes, caught the floating ball sixty-two yards from his goal line and cut loose. He got by Halladay and McDonald, the Maroon ends, and passed half a dozen Chicago linemen. Once it seemed that he was penned in, but he slipped through, and only Higgins, who had kicked the ball, was in his path.

Manages to Touch Davey.

To expect the towering giant of the Chicago line, who was weary after one hour of hard battling, to corner the fleeing jack rabbit would have been asking too much. "Hig" made a frantic dive, and with one arm slapped the Badger quarter back across the chest. Davey quivered in his tracks, staggered for five yards as though about to fall, but regathered momentum, and, protected by gathering interference, swept on to a touchdown. Bobbie Cole hit him as he flashed between the posts, but too late.

It was far from a great football game. Without the victorious sprint of Davey it would have been a 3 to 3 tie, which was about what both deserved, and it would have given the rival rooters little to crow about.

Game Bitterly Contested.

At times the battle was almost sluggish, and there was a minimum of color to the fray. It was a fiercely fought affair, representing about as tough an exhibition as both teams have had this year, replete with bits of vicious tackling and hard smashing, but for the average spectator it held little of the thrill of the battle of last week between Chicago and Iowa, except for Davey's spurt.

Each team had a chance for a field goal and made good. Each had an opportunity for a touchdown and failed. Chicago completed three forward passes and Wisconsin two, and the first downs were slightly in favor of the Badgers, but the punting of Cole was sufficiently superior to that of Gould to make things even.

Red Graham Knocked Out.

It looked dark for the Maroons in the first quarter. Before the men knew they were in a battle, Percy Graham, Chicago quarterback, was knocked out for the day. On the first punt of the game he made a beautiful dodging return of twenty yards, but was thrown, out of bounds. As he rolled into the hay, Chuck Carpenter, the big Badger leader, landed on him. That finished Red.

He took the full two minutes of time to recover, but when he tried to continue he was helpless. He continued two or three plays in a daze, but before the game was five minutes old Coach Stagg withdrew him. Last night it was found that the muscles of one side were torn from the ribs and that his back was strained, but there were no broken bones.

Shifts Weaken Chicago.

The injury to Stagg's pilot made it necessary to throw "Tot" Tatge into the fray, and, while he performed well, he did not know the signals as well as Graham, and often was at a loss as to his part in the complicated shift and spread plays.

The loss of Graham made it imperative that Stagg rush a punter into the fray, and Cole replaced Hutchinson. Little Bobbie, who had spent most of his afternoons in the last two weeks making up a deficiency in his studies, did not fit smoothly into the backfield. Individually Cole did more than any other man in the Chicago attack, and his punting was the best of the year, but the precision and deception of the Chicago offense was lost in the changes.

Badger Wings Are Stars.

No pair of ends have stood out on Stagg field in recent years as did Paul Meyers and Red Weston of the Badgers. They covered punts like hawks, throwing the Maroon backs all over the field, and when a Chicago athlete attempted to run inside or outside of this pair of sturdy defenders, he was sorry he had made the effort.

Carpenter, the Wisconsin captain, and Elliott did great work, while Capt. Higgins of Chicago finished his conference football career with a splendid exhibition. Elton, also playing his last game; Cole, Hanisch, Jackson, and McGuire put up a good article of football.

The details of the affair are brief. With the ball in midfield after Graham's injury in the first period, Meyers slipped down the sideline and by a beautiful jump grabbed a forward pass over his shoulder, thrown by Elliott, and raced to the five yard line before Cole downed him.

Here Chicago rallied as it did last week, and in four smashes at McGuire, Reber, and Pheney, Wisconsin could not score, although Coach Richards said that he was sure the runner was over on the fourth play, before he was pulled back by the Maroons. Cole punted out, but Wisconsin was close enough for Barr to boot a drop kick from the twenty-eight yard line.

Cole Boots Drop Kick.

In the second period a similar pass to the one worked by Wisconsin was completed by Cole and Hinkle. The men of Richards held, so Cole tied the score with a drop kick from his twenty-three yard line.

Only once in the second half was either team close to a score until the run by Davey. Chicago recovered a fumble on its thirty-five yard line. A long pass, Cole to Elton, put the oval on the eight yard line, but Wisconsin rallied, and held for downs with two yards needed after the fourth smash.

Then, with forty seconds to play, Allan Davey wrote history. Lineup:

MAROON NOTES

A crowd of 26,000 witnessed the game, filling every inch of space. It was larger by 2,000 than th throng at the Chicago-Michigan game two weeks ago.

Both teams were hit in the first period. Chicago lost Graham, and then Crisler, end, and the Badger punter, Sundt, was forced out with injuries.

After the game several hundreds bugs swarmed about the press coop howling for returns from Columbus. A great shout went up when Illinois was announced winner.

A flock of 2,200 pilgrims came down from Madison with their band. Between the halves Reed Parker, historic Wisconsin cheer leader, led them in a locomotive.

For Chicago seven men finished their conference football: Capt. Higgins, Graham, Elton, Hutchison, Hinkle, Stegeman, and MacDonald, while Capt. Carpenter, Fladoes, Meyers, and probably Jacobi can lay aside their Cardinal jerseys.

Charlie Higgins brought back the kickoff at the start of the second half for a long run. He caught it near the corner of the field and ran clear to his forty-five yard line before he was downed. A tackler from behind overtook him, or the Maroon leader might have gone all the way for a touchdown.

STAGG AWARDS FIFTEEN "C'S"

Coach Stagg last night announced the winners of the "C" for the football season after the Chicago-Wisconsin game. Fifteen letters were awarded, the largest number since the season of 1916.

The men who won letters were Capt. Higgins, Elton, Graham, Hinkle, Hutchinson, McDonald, and Stegeman, seniors; Cole, Crisler, Hanisch, Jackson, and Reber, juniors, and Halladay, McGuire, and Pheney, sophomores.

Several men, including Annan, Swenson, Fouche, Tatge, Palmer, Brunhart, Barker, and Neff, took part in several conference games, but did not play long enough to win their letters this year.

INDIANA UPSETS SYRACUSE, 12-6, AT HOMECOMING

Touchdown and Two Field Goals Net Unexpected Victory.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Playing a better brand of football than it had shown at any previous time this season, Indiana defeated the Syracuse eleven, 12 to 6, today, and held the near champions of the east scoreless until the final quarter.

The touchdown of the easterners was made possible when Pierce, the Hoosier center, made a wild pass to Leonard on a punt formation. The ball rolled over the latter's head and was stopped by him on his own eight yard line just as the whistle sounded at the end of the third quarter.

When the final period opened Syracuse tried two line plays which failed. Malone then ran around right end and just as he stepped over the Hoosier goal line he received a pass from Ackley which gave his team its score.

Touchdown on Forward Pass.

Indiana's touchdown came after only five minutes of play, when Donovan received a pass from Faust in the center of the field and raced through the entire Syracuse team for the marker. In five minutes more Indiana had the ball to the Orange twenty-five yard line, where Risley booted it between the bars on a place kick. He also scored from placement in the next period, standing on the visitors' twenty-five yard line.

Indiana clearly deserved to win, as Coach Stiehm's team had the oval in Syracuse territory all the time except in the first part of the final session, when the easterners made their score. Before the contest started Syracuse was easily the favorite because of its great record this season in defeating Penn State, Pittsburgh, Colgate, Army and Brown.

Result Proves Big Surprise.

The victory for Indiana may be said to be the one big surprise of the western season because of the Hoosiers' poor record in the season's previous games. The game was played in the presence of a crowd of 10,000, a large number of whom were alumni here for the annual homecoming.

CARNEGIE GIVES PITT MEN SCRAP IN 17 TO 7 GAME

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 22.—The University of Pittsburgh football team defeated Carnegie Tech today, 17 to 7. Coach Glenn Warner of the Panther eleven used several substitutes in the first half, but Tech's fine play forced him to rush in all the regulars for the second and third periods. Phil Marshall, captain of Tech, intercepted Laughran's try for a field goal in the second period on Tech's eight yard line and ran the length of the field for a touchdown.

Northwestern College Beats Beloit Eleven 7 to 3

Naperville, Ill., Nov. 22.—Northwestern college won from Beloit in a hard game, 7 to 3. The victory gave Northwestern the Little Five conference title. Crawford made a drop kick from the twenty yard line in the opening of the second half. Keiser intercepted a forward pass in the same period and ran sixty yards to a touchdown. Beloit made most of its gains on short forward passes.

Washington, Pa., Nov. 22.—The Washington and Jefferson team defeated West Virginia Wesleyan, 33 to 0, in the final home game of the season. The game was marked by a fifty-six yard run for a touchdown by Ellson in the third period. It was a fine exhibition of broken field running.

Harvard and Yale Teams in Scoreless Soccer Tilt

Harvard's forwards missed many splendid opportunities to score in the first half. Good openings were lost through poor judgment in front of the goal.

LOOKS LIKE THIS IS A GOOD SPOT

New York, Nov. 22.—[Special.]—The Santa Marta of the United States Fruit company line sailed today for Havana, Cuba, with a list of ninety passengers, which included a number of followers of the races who will arrive in Havana for the beginning of the season Thanksgiving day.

According to Cuban laws, gambling is legalized and guaranteed for thirty years, and prohibition measures cannot be brought before the lawmaking body within the next thirty-five years. With such a state of affairs existing, Havana promises to become the Monte Carlo of North America.

Among the passengers were John J. McGraw and Charles A. Stoneham, owners of the Giants, who recently purchased the Havana race course from H. B. Brown of St. Louis.

FREBERG IN DRAW WITH JACK LINOW

A large crowd of fans saw the weekly mat show at the Chicago A. A. last night. The matches were all one fall affairs, the preliminaries and a feature match being held.

In the first preliminary Young Shea defeated Kid Gardner in 15:10 with a crotch hold. In the second preliminary Steve Lechski could not stand the scissors hold Ted Danks of Canada clamped on his left arm, and surrendered after fifteen minutes of torture.

John Freberg and Jack Linow went thirty minutes to a draw in the feature match. The two went at it hard, but neither could get a grip on his opponent strong enough to hold.

PURDUE BATTLES NOTRE DAME, BUT LOSES OUT, 33-13

Boilermakers Throw a Scare Into South Benders by Scoring Early.

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Purdue gave Notre Dame a hard fight today on Stuart field, but the Irish eleven finally won by 33 to 13. Purdue gave the visitors a bad scare in the opening period by registering a touchdown almost before Notre Dame had warmed up.

After the kickoff by Gypp, Purdue punted and Bergman tore off a spectacular twenty-five yard run around Purdue's right end. Purdue braced and the Irish punted. Maddigan, the Notre Dame center, was hurt and had to leave the game. Purdue plowed through the line and skirted the ends for steady gains, Huffine, Meeker, Wagner, and Macklin all having a part in the advance. Meeker finally went over for the touchdown from the Notre Dame three yard line, and Stanwood kicked goal. Purdue, 7; Notre Dame, 0.

Notre Dame Scores.

Huffine punted when the second quarter opened and then the visitors resumed their aerial attack, Gipp, Kirk, and Bergman having a hand in the work. Bergman dashed over the line for Notre Dame's first score. Gipp missed goal. Purdue, 7; Notre Dame, 6.

Gipp kicked off to Macklin, who was downed on Purdue's fifteen yard line. Huffine punted and a forward pass, Gipp to Coughlin, put the ball on the Purdue ten yard line. Notre Dame was penalized, but Bergman made up the loss and a pass, Gipp to Kirk, netted another touchdown. Gipp kicked goal. Notre Dame, 13; Purdue, 7.

Notre Dame Keeps Up Aerial Attack.

Notre Dame scored a third touchdown early in the third quarter, the Boilermakers being unable to check the visitors' aerial attack. Gipp, Kirk, Bahan, and E. Anderson all figured in the advances. Slackford went through the line for twelve yards and a pass, Gipp to Kirk, netted the score. Bahan missed goal. Score: Notre Dame, 19; Purdue, 7.

On the second play after the final period opened Huffine went over for Purdue's second touchdown from the one foot line. Miller missed goal. Score: Notre Dame, 19; Purdue, 13. The Catholics scored twice more before the half ended.

ELUSIVE CASEY AND YALE SLIPS WIN FOR HARVARD

Forty Yard Dash and R. Horween's Kick Net 10-3 Game.

Ellis gained sixty-eight yards in this period by rushing. Harvard made four.

Fumbles Costly to Yale.

There was much more fumbling by the Yale men than is usually seen in a big game. They handled the ball badly at times, and the game was only a few minutes under way when Braden fumbled and Steele of Harvard fell on the ball. This placed Harvard in a position to make a try for a field goal, and Ralph Horween tried to score from the thirty yard line, but it failed in the teeth of a strong wind.

Shortly after the game started Harvard uncorked a forward pass. Casey tossed it to Capt. Murray, and in the mad scramble for the ball Jack Desmond plucked it from the air for a substantial gain. It was this successful bit of aerial attack which gave Harvard its opportunity to score, for shortly after this Ralph Horween dropped back to his forty yard line and drop kicked the ball between the goal posts in spite of the wind.

HAWKEYE SQUAD GIVEN A BATTLE BY AMES, 10 TO

Touchdown and a Dro Kick by A. Devine Score Tough Victory.

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Aubrey Devine and ten other Hawkeye players downed Ames this afternoon, 10 to 0, in one of the fiercest games ever played on Iowa field. More than thirteen thousand spectators saw the contest. Mayser's team put up the best game of the year and at no time during the tilt was the outcome certain.

Iowa scored in the first quarter when a series of smashes and end runs by Aubrey Devine, Parker, and Lohman took the ball inside Ames' fifteen yard line. Here Aubrey Devine passed to Parker, who went over for a touchdown. A. Devine kicked goal.

The Aggies came back strong and in the second quarter were inside the Iowa twenty yard line when a fumble gave Iowa the ball. Ames once took the ball inside the Hawkeye five yard line but lost on downs. In the last few minutes of play, Lohman, the Devine Brothers, and Belding carried the ball to the Ames twenty yard line, when Aubrey Devine made a drop kick.

PROVISO LIGHTS TAKE SUBURBAN LEAGUE HONORS

BY PREP.

Proviso won its second consecutive lightweight football championship of the Suburban league yesterday, defeating Oak Park, 12 to 6, on La Grange high school field. The battle was a post-season replay of a 0 to 0 tie played by the same teams at Maywood several weeks ago. The game was hotly contested, both elevens exhausting their bags of tricks.

The teams were padded with players from the heavyweight squads of the same schools, who could make the weight limit of 130 pounds. This tended to slow play, rather than strengthen the teams, as the drafted heavies often missed signals and balled up the plays. The game drew 4,000 lusty cheerers from the west suburban schools.

Score in Second Period.

The first period was scoreless, each team trying to size up its opponent's attack and defense. In the second quarter, after working the ball down the field on end runs and off-tackle drives, Dunk went over the line on a one yard cross buck. Oak Park held the Proviso eleven for three downs before Dunk could worm his way over. Evans missed goal. The rest of the half was spent in exchanging punts and opening up trick plays.

In the third quarter, Oak Park team came back with a lightning attack, after Savage of the heavyweight team had been substituted for Gilman. The onslaught took the Proviso team off of its feet long enough for the Oak Parkers to advance the ball to Proviso's five yard line. Here the Maywood team summoned all of its energy and held for two downs. On the third attempt Savage smashed the line for three yards and on the fourth down put the ball over the goal.

Proviso Star Breaks Ankle.

Proviso solved the smashing attack in the third period and got under the Oak Park plays for four downs, getting the ball on their forty yard line. Then they started a straight march for the Oak Park goal. Joyaux started on a wide end run toward the side line, Savage ran him down, and in making the tackle broke the little Proviso star's right ankle. Warren was substituted for Joyaux, and Proviso continued toward the Oak Park goal.

On its thirty yard line Oak Park braced and held for two downs. On the third down Evans stepped back and booted a neat drop over the bar. Evans repeated this performance in the fourth quarter from the forty yard line, and the Proviso rooters went wild over the doubling of the Oak Park score.

Last Efforts Fail.

With forty seconds to play Oak Park team opened up on a rain of forward passes in a vain attempt to score, but the Proviso backs either broke up the attempts or let the ball fall harmlessly on the ground.

SENN, 13; CRANE, 0.

Senn removed Crane's last remote hope of tying Englewood for the city championship by defeating the Tech heavyweights, 13 to 0, at Proti field. Senn scored twice in the first half, but the Tech team tightened in the second half and ended the Senn advances. Schellenberger, 120 pound half back, ripped off end runs of thirty and forty yards and went through the Crane line for Senn's second touchdown. Mueller made the first score after Schellenberger took the ball to the four yard line on a wide end run. Crane was unable to get within scoring distance except late in the third quarter, when Cullerton's thirty-five yard drop kick went wide. Lineup:

Waukegan High heavyweights won an easy 27 to 0 victory over Lindblom at the Normal park. Both teams played straight football, no fancy trick plays were attempted. The Waukegan team made one touchdown each period, Berristow kicking three goals in three attempts.

Prep Football Games

LAKE VIEW lightweights kept their record unblemished as Division 1 title contenders by trouncing Harrison, 29 to 0, on the techs' field. The game was half a double bill which resulted in divided honors, Harrison taking the unlimited weight contest, 13 to 0. The latter game was somewhat rough, taking a toll of five injured Harrison players.

Harrison was unable to hold Lake View in the midget contest, it taking several tacklers to down the men carrying the ball. Lake View showed good interference and the backs banged into the line with gusto, making their own holes. Peterson, Lake View, got off several showy forwards, and Sweeney scored one of the six touchdowns with an eighty yard run.

Lake View will play Hyde Park lights next Saturday in a playoff of their 0 to 0 tie, which will decide the divisional lightweight title. Lineups:

Morgan Park Cadets Win Annual Clash from H. S.

Morgan Park academy won the annual game with Morgan Park High for the village championship on the cadets' gridiron, 13 to 0. The game was as game an exhibition of football as was ever seen on the academy field. Although odds were against them, high school fought to the last whistle, and kept down the count.

Gorham scored early in the first quarter on an off tackle play, after the ball had been advanced to the high school's six yard line by a series of end runs. Amsler scored the second touchdown in the fourth quarter by grabbing a long forward pass from Cottrell. Gorham and Nichols were stellar performers for the academy. Lineup:

LANE, 7; PARKER, 6.

In the lightweight half of the Lane Tech double header at Logan Square Lane defeated Parker, 7 to 6, by the hard hitting ability of its back field quartet and Bowles' skill at goal kicking. Twenty-five hundred witnessed this and the Lane-Englewood heavyweight games. After leading, 7 to 0, into the final quarter, Parker rallied with a rush and Full Back Tasker went over. Failure to kick goal lost a tie. Lane's forward passes provided some timely gains, while alert work of the linesmen spilled every toss which Parker tried. Lineup:

LANE ELEVEN HOLDS ENGLEWOOD HEAVIES TO A TIE SCORE, 7-7

Lane give the champion Englewood heavyweights a bad scare at Logan Square ball park, leading the city league topnotchers for one quarter, 7 to 0, and holding them to a tie verdict, 7 to 7. For fighting spirit and dashing play Lane took honors. After scoring in the first period, Lane crossed the Englewood goal a second time, in the final quarter, but Referee Malloy called the ball back, stating Lane was pushing.

The techs surprised Englewood in the first period, carrying the fight to the Purple team, and making gains through the line. Wachendorf varied his plays well, and in a trice Lane was deep into Englewood territory. Hitting off center, where Capt. Mathis of Englewood was bothered by an injured right arm, and where Tackle Robinson of Lane opened holes, Lane finally scored, Wachendorf going through the middle of the line.

Englewood braced in the second quarter, and, with Bryson peeling off gains around end, and Metz and Folz cutting into the line, pressed Lane toward its goal. Reynolds scored. Folz fumbled a punt after the touchdown was made, and Lane advanced again, but was repulsed when within striking distance.

Th second half was a fairly even fight. At the close of the game Baradell's boys were putting full steam into the attack. Meisner, Ferrarini and Robinson were pinnacles of the tech defense, which forced Englewood to punt frequently. Metz, the Englewood plunger, and Bryson in the broken field, gained most of that team's ground.

Fenger lightweights defeated Waller, 14 to 0, in another Division II game at Whitman & Barnes field. The game was close until the fourth period, when the breaks favored Fenger, paving the way to two touchdowns. The first came early in the final quarter, when Metcka caught Hjerte's forward pass and ran sixty-five yards to the goal. Late in the same period Rosinski made a forty yard end run to Waller's five yard line, and Hjerte plunged through on the next play.

CALUMET NEARS MEMBER LIMIT; ONLY 45 REMAIN

Judging by the way members are coming in, the Calumet Country club will almost reach its limit by the time the new clubhouse is opened May 1 next year. Recent additions leave only forty-five unsold memberships, and in view of this limited number it has been decided to increase the membership fee to $400 after Jan. 1.

At a meeting of the officials the building committee was instructed to proceed with the erection of a club house to cost approximately $125,000. The architect has promised to have the building sufficiently advanced to house the members comfortably by May 1. The construction of a dormitory to be ready March 1 also was authorized. A. P. Titus was made chairman of the building committee.

Work on the course is progressing and if the weather in the spring is favorable it will be in fairly good shape by the time the season opens.

New members admitted last week were T. J. McGeoy, Dr. Austin A. Hayden, George B. Walker, Norbert Hackett, Carl E. Ingram, L. E. Dunker, W. A. Blaesing, H. L. Lonsdale, H. C. Herschman, W. P. Jones, G. A. Moore and F. P. Allen.

LEFT HOOK BOUT WHEN WHITE AND DUNDEE BATTLE

Boxers with Old Scores to Settle Will Meet at Milwaukee.

BY RAY PEARSON.

It's going to be left hook vs. left hook when Johnny Dundee of New York and Charley White tear loose in the ring of the Cream City next Wednesday night. This event is easily the big event on the fistic calendar for this week.

It should be a fight with plenty of punching of the K. O. brand, and it would not be surprising if some one buried his face in the rosin for an impromptu nap. Just what type of wallop might end the battle isn't hard to figure in this case, for both Dundee and White simply dote on sloughing with the left. Both use their rights, but it's the old sou-paw that does the damage.

Both Hope for Knockout.

A bit of feeling will have much to do with the force behind the punches, but after scribbling lines about a grudge scrap at Racine recently, the writer isn't going to say any more about grudge scraps. It is sufficient to say that Dundee would like nothing better than to see his opponent flattened on the canvas. As for "Left Hook Charley," he'd be tickled half to death to view the same sort of a picture, with Dundee, of course, doing the sleeping act.

There's considerable reason for this feeling. It dates back to the time a few years ago when Dundee and White clashed in New Orleans. That bout was made memorable by the lights going out in the second round, shortly after Dundee had left hooked White to the canvas. The lights were out for thirty-eight minutes. After the illumination returned they finished the other eight rounds, Dundee being credited with a shade victory.

Enmity Born in Gymnasium.

The "Ecotch Wop" didn't like the "lights out" business at all, for he never will get over the idea that he didn't win by a knockout in the second round, which argument White naturally disputes.

One reason why Dundee desired to score a knockout on White in that encounter was that Johnny was particularly anxious to make good a promise he had made to White. Scotty Monteith, then manager of Dundee, tells the story about that promise.

According to Monteith, Dundee and White were training in the same gymnasium. Dundee was working 2 to 3 o'clock; White 3 to 4 o'clock. One day Dundee, after his workout, was leaving the gym and passed White, who was swatting the punching bag. Just previous to this bout White had scored three knockouts with his left hook. He saw Dundee passing, banged the bag with a terrific left hook, and shouted to Dundee:

"See that wallop. I've knocked three fellows stiff with it and you are going to be the fourth, Johnny."

Dundee Uses White's Hook.

"Don't you believe you are ever going to knock me out with a left hook," answered the Italian. "You aren't going to knock out anybody. You are going to be knocked out yourself, and to make it good I'm going to knock you out with your own punch, a left hook."

Monteith says it was a left hook that floored White in the second round of that New Orleans battle.

There is no getting around the fact that Dundee is fighting in great form right now. He showed that by left hooking Willie Jackson's nose to one side of his face at Milwaukee recently. As for White, Charley hasn't fought in this neck of the woods for a time and the fans want to see him go. Charley takes exception to the stories which have reached print that he has gone back.

"Why, I haven't gone anywhere," said White yesterday. "So just put it down that I don't have to 'come back.'"

Wednesday night will answer that question.

LESSONS FROM THE DUCK CLUBS.

DISTASTEFUL as it may be to the general run of duck hunters, the club idea is growing in popularity and in addition to the so called rich men's clubs, with their thousands of acres and fine club houses, there are springing up throughout the country hundreds of small clubs—poor men's clubs, you might call them.

Such a club may consist of only a half dozen or so hunters owning or controlling a small prairie "slew," a marshy backwater of a river, a small duck hole or two in the timber or even a good point jutting out into a lake or bay.

In the latter case the shooting will usually consist mostly of open water ducks and little restraint will be necessary, but where marsh ducks predominate the success of the club will depend a great deal on the management.

Members of one of these small clubs can glean many a valuable lesson from the systems in force among the older, larger clubs with their years of experience.

We know a number of small clubs that enjoy as good if not better shooting than the big clubs, but they get it through practicing a reasonable amount of restraint based upon a working knowledge of duck ways. Without some such arrangement a small ducking place, no matter how good it may be, can be "burned out" in a few days' shooting.

The first thing to be done in organizing a small duck club is to locate some suitable place and get control of it, either by purchase or long time lease. We would venture to assert that there is not a county in the middle west where such spots are not available, either all ready to use or easily made so by a little damming, clearing of brush and building of blinds.

Sometimes the owner of such land is a sportsman and can be induced to take a membership in the club—very handy if he lives in the vicinity, as he can save the expense of hiring a watchman. Very often low, swampy ground suitable for hunting can be leased for 50 cents or $1 an acre per year.

An inaccessible place has one advantage—the danger of poachers is reduced, and while poachers do little damage on big preserves they can quickly ruin a small one.

As to rules, here is a set that governs one small club which controls twenty-five acres of overflowed timber and has a membership limited to ten. Each man "chipped" in $50 and they always have a surplus in the treasury:

Shooting is confined to the hours of 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. on Wednesdays, Saturdays, and Sundays.

Members must notify the secretary at least three days in advance of intention to shoot on certain days. Dates may be changed only by mutual agreement with members scheduled to shoot on such day or days.

Shooting at ducks scared out when going into blind strictly prohibited.

The following practices also prohibited: Scratch shooting; firing more than three shots from one gun, except at cripples; shooting at flocks of more than fifteen birds; jump shooting; shooting at ducks on the water, except cripples; shooting at geese with shot smaller than No. 2.

Guests invited only by unanimous vote of the club.

Any member guilty of violation of club rules or state laws forfeits membership in club.

Perhaps the reasons for some of the above rules warrant explanations. The club feeds or baits its grounds. The cheapest feed they can get is scattered around every evening during the season. For this reason shooting does not start in the morning until the birds have had a chance to get out. Ducks that are scared out in the morning are not fired at, because then they will come back later and often will bring other birds with them. Shooting in the afternoon stops early enough to let the birds come in to feed.

GIBBONS QUITS FISTICUFFS ON ADVICE OF WIFE

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 22.—Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul Phantom, today announced he has decided to retire permanently from the ring. Gibbons, who is considered quite wealthy and who has a family, said he today gave his promise to Mrs. Gibbons that he will never again participate in a ring battle.

Gibbons gave the following statement to the Associated Press:

"For a long time Mrs. Gibbons has urged me to give up boxing. I realize, of course, that I might stay in the game for a little while longer, but I have decided that such a course would not be practical. This is to announce my permanent retirement."

North Fond du Lac, Wis.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Kindly let us know if the National and American leagues have grass or skinned diamonds and if all are the same. O. E. W.

Answer.—There are no skinned diamonds in the National or American leagues. All have grass on them, but they are far from being the same in the quality and smoothness of the turf. Their only uniformity is in size.

BASKETBALL NOTES.

The Davis Square 106 pound team defeated the Hamilton Bullets, 18 to 16, at Hamilton park.

The Ogden Park Sharks lightweight team defeated Elkhorn A. C., 44 to 9, at Ogden Park. The Ogden heavyweights trimmed the Maxwell Eighth regiment team, 14 to 2.

St. James defeated St. Andrews, 19 to 8, at McKinley park last night.

SOCCER HONORS TO ENGLEWOOD; LANE LOSES, 2-0

South Side School Wins the Championship Fifth Time.

Englewood High school won the heavyweight championship of the Chicago High school Soccer league for the fifth time, defeating Lane, winner of the north side championship, 2 to 0, at Bricklayers' field.

Following this match Lane's other hope of a title was blasted when its lightweight eleven was defeated, 3 to 1, by Calumet, twenty minutes' extra time being played to break a tie at the end of the regular period.

Englewood, with the wind behind it in the first half, pressed the Lane defense hard, but could not score from the field. Fifteen minutes from time the south siders got a penalty kick and Brignall counted.

Lane Players Tire.

After change of ends Lane showed a spirited attack for ten minutes, and then appeared to tire. Englewood made a number of attacks and ten minutes before time Kopp scored.

The play on the whole was not as good as that of some previous years. Englewood was the better trained team, Lane having no regular coach.

Coach Archibald Patterson said Englewood is willing to play Oak Park, the suburban champions, provided the match is for the Peel shield and the Doeb medals. Lineup:

Englewood [2].		Lane [0].
Tinus	Goal	Kline
Geise	Right back	Ortlepp [C.]
Brown	Right half	Nieman
Jack	Center half	Mahr
Reiner	Left half	Peterson
Blum	Outside right	Praybriski
Bedeen	Inside right	Krause
Tobin	Center	Al. Koch

Goals—Brignall, Kopp.

Brinkman Scores Last Goal.

The lightweight clash produced better football. It was a close game all through and each goalkeeper was called into action a number of times. Lane showed the better combination in the opening period, and Carlson scored. Feeney tied the count in the second period, and when the whistle blew the score was 1 and 1. Twenty minutes of extra play followed, and Brinkman finally got an opening and booted the ball past Christman for the winning goal. Lineup:

Calumet [2].		Lane [1].
Mordell	Goal	Christman
Beatty [c]	Right Back	Kindy
Searcy	Right Half Bk.	Szimico
Houlihan	Center Half Bk.	Johnson [c]
McArdle	Left Half Back	Cordman, Kipp]
R. Fulford	Outside Right	Budach
Bennett	Inside Right	Becker
Brinkman	Center	Carlson
Feeney	Inside Left	Hartung
R. Fulford	Outside Left	Hanindf

Goals—Feeney, Brinkman, Carlson.

For PLAYERS of WHIST

by A. R. METCALFE

NO TRUMP declarations are the best game getters—that is, original no trump declarations and not those that occur after several previous bids.

When there is a choice between a good bid in a major suit and a good no trump, the latter is nearly always better except from a two suit hand. It is always easier to switch to a lower declaration than to a higher.

Here is a good case in point:

THE HANDS.

S—A, K, 9, 5, 2.
H—K, Q, J.
C—K, C.
D—7, 6, 4.

S—10, 8.
H—A, 10, 4.
C—A, Q, J, 10, 5.
D—10, 5, 2.

S—Q, J, 7, 4.
H—9, 7.
C—9, 8, 7, 4, 2.
D—K, 9.

S—6, 3.
H—8, 6, 5, 3, 2.
C—8.
D—A, Q, 8, 7, 3.

North dealt and bid one no-trump, east passed and south bid two diamonds. The final bid was four diamonds and south easily made five odd and game. There was no play to the deal except the lead of a small diamond from dummy instead of the jack. The jack would have been a poor lead because the declarer did not have the ten in either hand.

A play of unusual merit is featured in the deal which follows:

THE HANDS.

S—Q, 10, 8, 7.
H—Q, 10, 6, 5, 2.
C—A, J, 2.
D—10.

S—6, 4, 3.
H—A, J.
C—K, 10, 9, 8, 6, 5.
D—A, 7.

S—A, K, 5, 3.
H—K, 9, 4.
C—Q.
D—K, 9, 8, 3, 2.

S—J, 9.
H—8, 7, 3.
C—7, 5, 4.
D—Q, J, 6, 6, 4.

West dealt and bid one no trump, which closed the bidding. North had the initial lead.

THE PLAY.

2	AC	QC	4C	KC

10	8S	D8	JS	3C
11	10S	D9	D8	D7
12	QS	AS	DJ	4S
13	HQ	KS	DQ	6S

West secured eleven tricks.

Had west played a small club at trick two north would have allowed the queen to win and west never would have secured another trick in clubs. He realized that the game might be lost in such manner and made a beautiful play in putting up the king of clubs, although he did not have the jack. With every other suit stopped twice, west could be certain that the clubs would be cleared before any other suit. This play eventually earned three tricks and the rubber.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Lake Forest, Ill.—[To the Editor.]—The final bid was three hearts doubled. The deal was played out until only three hearts remained, when it was noticed that dummy was one card short. This card was afterwards found on the floor.

The dealer would have made one trick more than his contract. Nobody knew what to do and two or three well known players were telephoned, but they also were unable to give a decision and the deal was thrown out. What should have been done? M. J.

Ans.—The deal was valid and the missing card should have been restored to dummy. Any player except dummy would have been responsible for any revoke that might have occurred. The deal should have been counted precisely as though the card had been continuously in dummy.

TOO BUSY, REPLY FROM WILLARD ON FIGHT PLANS

Lawrence, Kas., Nov. 22.—Arriving today from his farm in Shawnee county, where he had completed putting in 300 acres of wheat, Jess Willard denied he had wired or written to Tex Rickard about reentering the fighting game.

He said he wanted to see Rickard about oil and moving picture interests which they had in common and expected him to come west in December.

"I am too busy to fight" was the only answer Willard would make to a direct question whether he planned to enter the ring again.

W. A. SHAW HALTS CAR FARE ACTION TO STUDY RECORD

Rate Decision of 6 1-4 Cents Now Expected on Monday.

The fixing of a new fare for the surface lines was delayed yesterday while Commissioner Walter A. Shaw, who had not been present at most of the hearings, scrutinized the voluminous record.

The delay was unexpected and occasioned considerable comment. Mr. Shaw is a Democrat, so is Commissioner P. J. Lucey. Chairman Thomas E. Dempcy is a Republican, but has been precluded by illness from taking an active part in the commission's affairs for several weeks. Commissioner Frank H. Funk, also a Republican, left Chicago for Bloomington Friday night. And Commissioner James H. Wilkerson, the only member of the normally Republican majority who remained here, refused to discuss the significance of the delay.

Expect Order Monday.

From other quarters, however, it was intimated that an order probably would be forthcoming on Monday which would fix the fare at approximately 6 cents by the installation of a ticket selling arrangement. A return to a straight 5 cent fare, as urged by the city administration, or even to a 6 cent cash fare, which an analysis of the companies' earnings by Attorney General Brundage indicated might be possible, was said last night to be unlikely.

Testimony adduced before the commission during the last three days indicated a $2,000,000 deficit, if the attorney general's figures were adhered to. The compromise most favorably discussed yesterday was the sale of sixteen tickets for $1, or 6¼ cents a ride. Despite the 5 cent agitation by the city, the commission intends, it is said, to stand inflexible on the premise it defined last April in refusing to permit the roads to increase fares from 5 to 7 cents—a premise it reaffirmed in August when it sanctioned the increase after the strike.

Limits Profits.

In both its decisions the commission declared it would permit the lines to earn their operating expenses, 5 per cent on their capital accounts of $156,000,000, and $120,000 a month as their share of the net divisable receipts. The total, exclusive of operating expenses, is $8,600,000 annually, exclusive of whatever sum is necessary to permit the companies to pay expenses.

Based upon the companies' present volume of traffic, a 1 cent cut in fare will cost the roads about $7,600,000 a year. Its wage increases on the other hand, amount roughly to $8,750,000 or $9,900,000 a year, and there are other items which must be taken into account, such as a 35 to 40 per cent increase in taxation and higher costs of maintenance.

Profits Now Excessive.

The commission will not force the roads to subsist on less than it has declared heretofore that they are entitled to earn, and a 1 cent increase in revenue is held to be insufficient to take care of their added financial burdens. By the companies' own figures, the attorney general charged, their excess profits are revealed at $3,114,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Lenine, fresh from Russian outlands and the Caucasian slopes, are to make their home in Chicago. Mr. Lenine is a huge tiger and Mrs. Lenine, of course, is his wife.

They were presented to the zoo yesterday by Dr. D. B. Boyed of Sacramento, Cal., who captured them in Siberia. Mr. Lenine bit a piece out of his wife's ear ten minutes after A. E. Parker, who has supplanted Cy De Vry as zookeeper, put them in their cage.

FIND WHISKY DEALERS HAZY ON BIG THEFTS

Revenue agents uncovered a blind alley maze yesterday in their investigation into recent wholesale thefts of liquor stocks. Both field and inspection departments asked for more time to complete their investigation.

"We have found that everybody connected with most of those whisky losses is hazy on the subject," declared L. C. Keter, general deputy, assigned as one of the investigators in the Louis Stern & Co. robbery. "In the Stern case the owners don't seem to know how much liquor they had or just how much was taken."

"It will take a little time," said Col. L. G. Nutt, chief inspector, "but we will eventually be able to prove that thefts of whisky under present Chicago conditions might be construed to work advantages for the dealers themselves."

UNVEIL FIRST MONUMENT TO HEROES NOV. 27

The first monument erected by a Chicago church to its war heroes will be unveiled at St. Henry's, Ridge and Devon avenues, on Thanksgiving day following a solemn high mass.

The monument, built of Barre granite, is twenty feet in height, and four life size figures adorn the top. The base is inscribed:

"To the Prince of Peace: In gratitude to our young men who served their country's cause in the great world war this memorial is dedicated by the parishioners of St. Henry's church."

The names of 101 young men of the church who served in the war will be inscribed on the monument in alphabetical order and the bodies of those who died in action will be buried near the monument when returned from France.

IRISHMAN TAKES ANOTHER RAP AT ADMIRAL SIMS

O'Connell Hints He's Tool of Propagandists of Britain.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Another attack on Admiral Sims has been made by the Irish national bureau in a letter addressed to the secretary of the navy, in which Daniel J. O'Connell, director of the bureau, calls the attention of the secretary to the fact that on May 3 last Admiral Sims not only attended but spoke at a dinner given in New York by the English Speaking union.

"He could have shown no greater indiscretion," Mr. O'Connell wrote, "had he presided at a meeting of welcome to Lenine and Trosky, or taken the platform to argue for Lord Cecil's league of nations, to the adoption of which the English Speaking union is committed."

Run by the English.

According to the Irish bureau, the English Speaking union is "one of the most potent organizations for English propaganda which the United States has had thrust upon it in many years."

Its head, Mr. O'Connell states, is "none other than Arthur J. Balfour, a cousin of the author of the covenant of the league of nations," and its chief American organizer Maj. George Haven Putnam, "who is English born, and who received his commission as organizer while in England."

Remarks Charged to Sims.

"We beg of you to note what a rear admiral of the United States had to say at this strange gathering," Mr. O'Connell wrote. "He said, among other things:

"(a) 'That merchant soldiers are superior to the men of the United States navy;

"(b) 'That men of the United States navy are such land lovers that they remain ashore as long as they can until the navy department orders them out to sea.'

"And, in addition to these complimentary references to the navy, he said (New York Times, May 4, 1919):

"(c) 'An English statesman's word is his bond.'

English Label Put on Sims.

"How long since has the ranking officer of the United States navy been either qualified or authorized to place a seal of approval upon the acts of foreign statesmen? And this statement that 'a British statesman's word is his bond' is not only a grave indiscretion but, as history shows, it is a serious distortion of the truth.

"We have merely outlined to you, Mr. Secretary, a situation in which a rear admiral of the United States has identified himself with English propaganda and English propagandists.

PASSENGER TRAIN KILLS MAN.

SHE AIDS BOYS

Girl Overseer of Mail Mercuries Who Has Made Record in Keeping Her Wards Straight.

Miss Wynifred Thomas

"A guy only happens to go crooked."

It's a simple enough axiom of the days of real sport, but Miss Wynifred Thomas, Uncle Sam's guardian of all the special delivery boys in Chicago, has used it to cut wrongdoing by boys in her department to the zero mark in the last month. As many as ten boys a week used to be brought before United States commissioners on the charge of "stubbing" deliveries or stealing letters.

Only three were arraigned during October, and none so far in November.

"I try to see that the little things which cause a boy to go wrong don't happen," said Miss Thomas yesterday after rounding out ten years in Uncle Sam's service.

During the last year she has directed the work of 1,200 boys in the special delivery department.

MOTHERS WATCH RED SHAMBLES FOR THEIR DEAD

Identify Sons, Wantonly Slain by Leninеites, Taken from Pit.

BY LADISLAV CZAPSKI.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Special Correspondence of The Tribune.]

KIEFF, Sept. 30.—Among the houses occupied in Kieff by agents of the various extraordinary committees to combat counter revolution, or tschresvychaikas, as they were called for short, none will go down in the story of the red terror in the Ukrainian capital with associations more lurid than those clinging to the big mansion at 5 Sadovaya street.

For three days now spademen have been digging up corpses of men and women from the huge pit next to the stable. To wander for five minutes among the long rows of dead bodies laid out under the trees, watching mothers, fathers, wives, and sisters as they bend over the mutilated forms in eager search for marks which would enable them to claim their own dead—this more than volumes of discussion will teach you what bolshevism meant to the people of Russia.

Reign of Perverts.

Naked, silent witnesses, these hideous corpses give the lie to those who seriously regard bolshevism as a political movement. To the people of Kieff, as to those of Kharkoff and Poltava, it has been organized, systematic murder, perpetrated on a large scale, day in and day out, by a gang of male and female perverts, many of whom were notorious sadists and professional criminals specially hired for the purpose by the high priests of the system.

I have seen women suddenly recognize their loved ones, some by missing teeth, others by old scars of birthmarks.

Shrieking in her anguish, one of these mothers threw herself on the dead body of her son and hugged it until bystanders dragged her away from the spot. Above the heads of the men and women surrounding her I saw her thin hand, with clenched fist, as she prayed heaven for vengeance on the murderers.

Story of Her Boy.

Her boy had disappeared from home several weeks back, shortly after he had confided to her that in a restaurant he had spoken rather too harshly and too loudly about the bolshevik régime. No word had reached her from him. He was only a student, too young to matter in politics one way or another.

GAS LITIGATION FOR 1920 TO COST CHICAGO $101,700

Litigation aimed at the recovery of $10,000,000 in overcharges by the gas company under the 1911 70 cent gas ordinance will cost the city $101,700 in 1920, according to a report to the special council gas litigation committee yesterday.

Donald R. Richberg, the city's special attorney in the case, made the report. He said that $3,870 is necessary for office rent; $52,830 for engineering services; $15,000 for accounting services, and $30,000 for legal and other expenses. The case has been in the courts seven years.

The committee directed that an itemized statement of the probable 1920 expenses be laid before the committee before any action is taking approving the sum requested by the attorney.

NATIONAL SEXTET SEVEN-PASSENGER TOURING CAR

The New National Sextet
It's Like Nothing You Have Seen

The newest National—we call it the Sextet—is quite the finest automobile that has ever borne the National name.

It is built in five distinctive body styles, all with refreshingly new lines, all conforming to the expectations of those who seek relief from the usual.

Even in the finish there is that same pleasingly different quality, evident especially in the minor details.

And the engine!—you'll rarely need to look at it unless to raise the bonnet and show some inquiring friend the simplicity of a seventy horsepower engine.

Naturally not everyone who desires the new Sextet can own one, for the production of such a car as this necessarily is limited.

And no amount of pressure will ever induce us to depart from our traditional policy, to build no more National cars than we can build well.

THE NATIONAL SEXTET IS BUILT IN FIVE CUSTOM BODY STYLES

With an unstropped blade
Seen under a powerful magnifying glass, an unstropped razor blade, after use, looks like a saw edge

With a stropped blade
Stropping keeps the tiny teeth of the blade in perfect alignment, and provides a smooth keen edge for every shave

Can you average 42 good shaves from each razor blade?

—500 shaves from every dozen blades?

HOW many satisfying shaves do you get from one razor blade before it begins to pull and scrape?

On the first day, when the blade is fresh, your shave is smooth and cool. But very soon your beard begins to dull the edge. Soon the pulling and scraping become unbearable. You throw the old blade away—slip a new blade in your razor—and begin the same round again.

The real reason that blades grow dull

Under a microscope, a razor edge is seen to consist of hundreds of tiny teeth. When these teeth are in alignment, the blade is sharp. But the very first shave with a new blade bends these teeth out of alignment, and the blade begins to lose its edge.

With most safety razors, there is no way to smooth the delicate teeth back into alignment. The original smooth, fine edge of the blade grows rougher with every shave.

Today there is one safety razor that gives you a fresh, keen edge for every shave. With the AutoStrop Razor you will get 500 cool, clean shaves from every dozen blades—an average of 42 satisfying shaves from each blade.

Like having a new blade for every shave

Built right into the frame of the AutoStrop Razor is a remarkably simple self-stropping device which keeps the blade keen-edged as when new—day after day. It smooths the tiny teeth of the blade into perfect alignment, and gives you a freshly-sharpened blade in a few seconds—without taking the razor apart or removing the blade.

All the comfort of a fresh blade every day—that's what the AutoStrop Razor means for you! It ends all the many shaving troubles due to dulled or dulling blades—"pull," aftersmart, tender spots on the face. Morning after morning it gives you a smooth, comfortable shave with a keen, freshly-stropped edge.

The AutoStrop Razor is the only safety razor that sharpens itself, shaves, and cleans without removing a single part. A touch of the thumb adjusts the blade for close, medium, or light shaving.

A few passes of the AutoStrop Razor over its specially treated strop put the original keen, fresh edge back on the blade day after day

Don't put up any longer with the scrape and smart of fast dulling blades. Begin tomorrow to get the comfort of a fresh, keen edge for every shave. Ask your dealer today about the AutoStrop Razor free trial plan.

...RATIONS ...E CANDY AND SOFT DRINK MEN

U. S. Arrests Grocer Who Conceals Name of Profiteer.

Preparations to put Chicago candy and soft drink manufacturers on curtailed sugar rations; the arrest of the first witness, who has refused to testify against sugar profiteers, and an inquiry into clothing prices, were developments yesterday in the federal attack on profiteers in Chicago.

District Attorney Clyne announced that manufacturers charged with corraling the lion's share of the city's sugar supply will be placed on a reduced ration and a sugar distributor will be named the moment Attorney General Palmer notifies the Chicago office of his promised rationing move.

Housewife to Get Share.

"We are ready to act," declared Mr. Clyne. "It is apparent if the Chicago housewife is to receive her share of sugar, manufacturers who have been getting more than their share must be cut down. We are expecting orders from Washington to this effect and plan to name a sugar distributor who will have the power to fix a just average for the distribution and determine the ration allowed the manufacturers while the sugar shortage prevails."

Less than 22 per cent of the Chicago sugar supply now goes to the retail consumer, according to a market survey made public by Russell J. Poole, city food director. The remainder finds its way into the hands of makers of candy, soft drinks, syrups and preserves, or is taken up by brokers.

Hides Name, Arrested.

Because he refused to disclose the name of the wholesale dealer to whom he paid 20 cents a pound for sugar, Harry Rosenthal, owner of the grocery at 2302 Cottage Grove avenue was arrested and held under $500 bonds by United States Commissioner L. F. Mason.

The grocer was first brought before Assistant District Attorney Milroy to tell why he had been selling sugar at 21 cents a pound. He declared he was forced to pay 20 cents for his stock.

"I won't make anybody any trouble," he declared when pressed for the name of the wholesaler who sold him the supply. He entered a federal cell pending the arrival of bondsmen.

Blame Style Designers.

Designers of clothing are as much at fault for prevailing unreasonable prices as any other agency, according to government officials after their first day of investigation of the clothing market.

"We can't speak with full authority just yet," remarked Mr. Clyne, "but we know the trimmings on women's suits this year sometimes exceed the cost of all other goods in the garment. I'm told that while women now are taking steps an inch long because of narrow skirts, the designers are preparing to launch spring styles in which skirts will measure four yards around the ankle.

Eyes Shoe Prices Also.

"My attention has been called to the fact that women's shoes have been raised in price four times in one year," he added, "partly because of changes in styles."

Maj. A. A. Sprague, in a statement from the fair price committee, strongly advocated the purchase of cold storage eggs and butter during the present inflation of values. He also urged housewives to visit retail stores in person in order to cut down the overhead cost of operation.

EXPECTS BIG CUT IN FLOUR PRICE; DUE TO LIFTING BARS

LOWERING of spring flour prices $2 to $3 per barrel is expected to follow the lifting of the embargo on imports of wheat and flour by the federal grain corporation Dec. 15, according to Howard B. Jackson, vice president of the United States Grain corporation and in charge of its operations in the Chicago territory. The move means a regaining of control of food supplies by the federal government, he said.

"Canada has a large surplus and, while Europe could take it, foreign exchange rates are so low that Canadian holders would prefer to ship to the United States and be glad to sell at around $2.25. Wheat is now selling in Minneapolis around $3 per bushel. Canadian shipments will eliminate the big premium on spring wheat. The Canadian government may prevent the shipment of wheat and flour, but I doubt it.

"Canadian growers have been anxious to sell wheat in this country, but were prevented by the embargo. With the embargo lifted, there should be a revival of the private competition in the export trade in wheat. We have made large sales of wheat to millers the last few days at prices lower than the open market and have orders for more of the desired variety than we have on hand."

B. A. Eckart, one of the largest millers in Chicago, said he did not expect that much Canadian wheat would be available for importation, as the Canadian government was supposed to own nearly all the good wheat and American millers would not want the poor. The price of wheat here and at Minneapolis yesterday was unchanged, and a local miller paid $3.10 for No. 3 dark northern, the highest of the season.

JUDGE'S DECREE UNRAVELS RECORD KINSHIP TANGLE

Here's a real tangle.

Mrs. Lillian Weaver was married to Fred Weaver, her mother's second husband's brother, and became the stepmother of her mother's two nieces by marriage and her stepfather's sister-in-law. Mrs. Weaver asked for an annulment on the grounds that she was under age at the time of her marriage. She lives at 2314 West Adams street. Judge George F. Barrett signed an annulment yesterday.

Now what is the relation between Lillian and her mother's two nieces? Or her stepfather? None at all.

POSTMAN FINDS BODY OF MAN WHO HANGED HIMSELF

When the postman tried to deliver mail to John Lindberg, 2218 South Wabash avenue, yesterday, he found the door locked. It had been locked for two days. The postman becoming suspicious pried open the door. Lindberg's body was hanging to a rope in the closet door. The Cottage Grove avenue police ambulance doctor said that he had been dead at least two days.

In a box in the room among the kitchen utensils the police found 85 cents and a note. The note read: "In case anything happens, notify my brother, David Lindberg, Nineteenth street and Marshall boulevard, Illinois Industrial Home for the Blind."

Lindberg had lived at the Wabash avenue address for three years.

...SON WILL ...HT FOR NURSES BEFORE COUNCIL

100 Aids Meet and Plan Battle to Prevent Epidemic.

Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson announced yesterday that he will carry his fight to retain nurses in the public schools before the city council at tomorrow afternoon's session.

The commissioner's decision followed the announcement that no session of the council finance committee, at which yesterday's action throwing the nurses off the payroll could be reconsidered, would be held before Tuesday afternoon.

More than 100 of the nurses met on the tenth floor of the city hall yesterday morning where Dr. Robertson explained the action of the finance committee.

At the close of the meeting the nurses held an indignation meeting without the commissioner. Under the leadership of Miss Martha Thal, chairman of their organization, the guardians of the school children's health appointed committees to canvass the city council over Sunday to appeal to the Chicago Federation of Labor and various city clubs and to "let the public know what this means to the children."

After his explanation of the order ousting the nurses Dr. Robertson asked:

"Will this action mean a spread of diphtheria and scarlet fever in the schools?"

"Absolutely," chorused the nurses.

Forty hands were raised in answer to a question as to how many had found diphtheria carriers in their districts in the last seven days.

Helped Vaccinate 990.

One nurse said she had assisted at the vaccination of 900 school children this year. Another said her absence would seriously impede vaccination of the children of the Ogden school against smallpox, a case of which was found "lacked squarely up against the school last week."

A canvass of the nurses showed that each cares for five cases of impetigo and "ring worm," infectious skin diseases, a day on an average. Pediculosis—lice cases—are even more common, they said.

The nurses plan to camp at the city hall tomorrow and Tuesday, if necessary, "not to save our jobs," they say, "but for the good of the children of the city." Another delegation will call on the school board tomorrow, as the finance committee believes that body should pay the nurses.

Doctor Rejects Alibi.

Some of the health commissioner's assistants advised him that in the refusal of the committee to transfer the funds, he has a "perfect alibi" if a contagious disease epidemic, which the commissioner says is menacing, arrives. Refusing to take refuge behind this advice, the commissioner ordered a complete canvas of the contagious disease situation.

Ald. Clayton F. Smith, who with Ald. Moran, Woodhull, and Feizer, voted to remain the nurses at Friday's meeting of the committee, are said to be ready to take up the commissioner's fight on the council floor. The following aldermen voted against the transfer of funds in the committee: Kostner, Maypole, McCormick, Schwartz, Walker, Capitain, Lipps, Fisher, Clark, and A. O. Anderson.

"I am accused of crying wolf when there is no reason for it," said Dr. Robertson. "The figures show there is ten times as much scarlet fever and twice as much diphtheria right now than there was last year. I'm not going to wait until the menacing epidemic is upon the city before I sound the alarm."

$1,340 FINE SETS RECORD IN CASE OF INFANT STARS

Theatrical people sat up and took notice yesterday when Judge George B. Holmes of the Municipal court imposed the largest bulk fine, with costs, thus far entered in Illinois against a show management for violation of the child labor law. The owners of the "Daddies" company at Powers' theater were fined $1,340 on 168 separate charges.

Section 1 of the law prescribes a maximum fine of $200 for each offense prior to the first conviction. Therefore, Judge Holmes had it in his power to charge the company with $33,600, there having been 168 separate charges listed. As it was, the fines were $5 and $5 costs under 100 counts, and the costs of $5 under 68 counts, under pleas of guilty.

There are five boys and girls in the cast—pampered youngsters, who are as carefully guarded in matters of health as hothouse plants. They are: Aida Armand, 6 years; Lorna Volare, 7 years; William Quinn, 6 years; Edward Quinn, 9 years, and Mildred Platz, 8 years old, respectively. Last night was their final appearance in Chicago and today they are on their way to Philadelphia, where the "Daddies" show is billed.

Tartar on Teeth Shows You Leave the Film

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Free
A 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent to show you its effects. See coupon.

See how teeth glisten when the film is gone.

It is film that makes teeth look dirty. It is film that is the source of most tooth troubles.

Remove the Film

Film is the basis of tartar. It is the source of discolored teeth and decay.

In brushing teeth you leave a slimy film. You can feel it with your tongue. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. Your tooth paste cannot dissolve it. Most tooth troubles are now traced to that clinging film.

That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. So the one great object in cleaning teeth should be to end that film.

Dental science, after years of searching has found a way to do that. For home use the way is now embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent.

The results are known. Convincing, clinical and laboratory tests have proved them beyond question. Leading dentists everywhere now advocate its use.

A 10-Day Test Supplied

We now send a 10-Day Tube to anyone who asks. Thus we are starting countless people toward cleaner, safer teeth.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object is to dissolve the film, then to day by day combat it.

The way seems simple, but pepsin must be activated. The usual method is an acid harmful to the teeth. It is the invention of a harmless activating method which makes pepsin possible. That, with other Pepsodent ingredients, is doing now what was never done before.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

Read the book we send you. Learn the reason for these things. Then judge for yourself if you want your teeth kept in that way always. Cut out the coupon now.

SERGEANT'S DIM MEMORY DELAYS POLICE TRIALS

E. A. McCormick Finds Frequent Refuge in "Don't Remember."

Detective Sergeant Edward A. McCormick, one of the five Warren avenue policemen on trial before the city civil service commission on inefficiency charges, proved to have only a dim recollection concerning many complaints about which he was questioned yesterday.

"I don't remember," was his favorite answer.

Assistant Corporation Counsel John Bugee delved into the report to Chief Garrity that $50 was used to "square" the arrest of two men and three women taken in a raid on the King Edward hotel last September.

Admits Arrests in Question.

McCormick admitted that with his partner, John C. Siechter, also under charges, he made the arrests in question.

"Why did you book these prisoners under the disorderly section of the city code?" asked Mr. Bugee.

"We wanted to see if we could get anything more on them?" was the answer.

"Did you know that the women were prostitutes?"

"I knew one of them was."

"And you arrested her in a house of assignation?"

"Yes."

Denies Ulterior Motive.

"Didn't you book them 2012, disorderly, that is, because you want them to go to Desplaines street court and not to the Morals court, where the women would have to stand a physical examination?"

"That didn't enter my mind."

"The hotelkeepers of the Warren avenue district would starve to death if they didn't rent rooms for immoral purposes," said McCormick.

At tomorrow's session of the commission, Detective Sergeant Siechter is expected to take the witness stand.

Chief Garrity announced that either Capt. Michael Gallery or Capt. Mathew Zimmer will be placed in charge of the Warren avenue district. The post is vacant by dismissal of former Capt. Thomas F. Cronin.

F. C. Gurney Sworn In.

Fred C. Gurney, whom Chief Garrity named for the Cronin vacancy, was sworn in yesterday. As he is on furlough, no command will be assigned to him for the present. Capt. Gurney will be assigned to one of the south side stations, Chief Garrity indicated.

Ex-Capt. Cronin declared that his dismissal from the forces was "prearranged."

"That crowd simply went out to get me," he said.

R. R. EXPENSES 9-10 OF REVENUE

New York, Nov. 22.—[Special.]—For the nine months ended with Sept. 30, 1919, the ratio of railroad expenses to revenues totalled 89.67 per cent, according to figures compiled by the bureau of railway news and statistics. In the corresponding period last year the ratio was 65.59 per cent, and in 1917, the last year of private operation, amounted to 73.41 per cent. The bureau says:

"The most superficial analysis reveals the fact that this ruinous ratio is wholly due to the abnormal increase in expenses. Where the operating revenue since 1917 have increased over $800,000,000 the operating expenses have increased well over $1,100,000,000.

"Successive advance in wages, coincident with exorbitant prices for coal, materials, and supplies, have placed the operating cost of the railways on a plane from which they cannot be dislodged except through years of the severest economy."

BEG YOUR PARDON!

Government agents did not seize cocaine and other drugs in the office of Dr. A. F. Zwick, 4649 South Ashland avenue, as might be inferred from THE TRIBUNE story of Nov. 12. Dr. Zwick was arrested and charged with violating the Harrison narcotic act, and cocaine valued at $20,000 was seized in drug store raids, but no drugs were found in Zwick's office.

On Nov. 20 THE TRIBUNE stated that "no beer" had caused bakers' union sick benefits to drop from 100 to 5, quoting Tobias Heileman, business agent for local No. 2. Hope Thompson, lawyer, writes that what Mr. Heileman said was that since members of his organization had quit drinking near beer the health benefits had fallen off 5 per cent.

2-4C IN WEEK DESPITE BEAR SENTIMENT

Low Prices Mark Early Trading; Oats and Rye Gain.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Lower prices were made for corn and oats in the early trading with, a reversal of the action later, and the close around nearly the top, with corn up ⅝c to 1⅞c, the distant futures leading in strength, while cash prices were 2c to 4c lower and closed at the inside.

The difference between cash and futures of December was materially reduced. Oats gained ½@⅞c. Rye was taken for export in large volume and closed 1@1¼c higher, and barley closed unchanged to 1c higher in Chicago. Outside corn markets were not as strong as Chicago. Oats in Minneapolis gained ½c and in Winnipeg ¾@⅞c, with receipts in the latter market 185 cars.

Although trade sentiment has been very bearish, corn prices are 2@4c higher than a week ago, December leading, while cash prices are lower. Oats are 2@1⅛c higher, rye up to 5@6½c, and barley 1@3½c, pork 15c higher to 75c lower, lard 60@87½c lower, and short ribs 5@42½c higher, January leading.

Export Sales Advances Corn.

Local sentiment was bearish at the start, due to the lifting of the embargo on wheat, which was expected to bring in Canadian grain, and with liberal receipts and prospects of a sharp break in cash as industries were out of the market, prices were forced off 1@1¼c, December leading.

Lowest prices were made shortly after the start as strong commission houses were good buyers, and there was also considerable grain taken by local traders, who bought on the theory that the market would reverse its action before the close. This buying absorbed the surplus in the pit and when shorts started to cover there was little for sale. A bulge of 2@2⅝c from the low point followed, with the finish within ⅛@¼c of the top.

December closed at $1.31½; January, $1.26¼; May, $1.25⅝, and July, $1.24⅝. A sale of 120,000 bu corn for export at New York, presumably to Scotch distillers, with prospects of further business, had a very bullish effect and was instrumental in causing shorts to cover. Sample values were 1@4c lower on new, closing weak, but had little effect. Arrivals were 189 cars. Estimated for Monday, 500 to 600 cars. Shipping sales, 75,000 bu.

December Oats Weaken.

Scattered liquidation was on in December oats, and the discount under May widened to 3½c, against 3⅛c at the finish the previous day. Trade was mainly local, but the late strength in corn caused shorts to cover and the finish was at the top, with December 73⅝c and May 75⅛c.

There was talk of considerable export business at the seaboard, and ocean freights between this country and the United Kingdom were easier. Sales of 50,000 bu were reported at the seaboard, with 10,000 bu sold to exporters from here. Domestic sales, 111,000 bu. Simple values unchanged, with receipts 93 cars. A good decrease is expected in the visible supply Monday. Local receipts for the week of 1,275,000 bu were nearly 400,000 bu less than shipments.

Big Cash Trade in Rye.

Seaboard exporters were keen after cash rye for winter storage at eastern lake ports, and futures were unchanged for around 550,000 bu here, while Minneapolis reported 250,000 bu. Houses with seaboard connections were good buyers of futures and the latter closed 1@1¼c higher. No. 2 sold at $1.42. Receipts, 3 cars.

Cash barley was in slow demand and unchanged to 2c, with sales at $1.27@1.54. Seaboard exporters were after grain, and reported 50,000 bu sold abroad. There was 25,000 bu sold here to the east at $1.44. Receipts, 45 cars.

Clover and timothy seed unchanged. Country lots of clover, $30.00@48.00, and timothy $8.50@11.50 per 100 lbs.

Liberal Buying of Lard.

Lard was bought freely by commission houses at the start and there was good selling by the same people who have been in the market all week and are credited with selling 5,000,000 lbs. They were also sellers of January and May ribs. Prices had a narrow range with the May lard higher and January unchanged, while May ribs were easier. Cash trade was light. Shipments of meats for the week decreased and lard increased over the previous week and all showed big gains over last year. Hogs were higher and packing here since Nov. 1 aggregates 730,000, a decrease of 142,000 from last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS.

A lack of influential selling of corn futures and a decided disposition on the part of local shorts to stand any punishment was responsible for the advance and higher close yesterday, despite the decline in cash values as was expected by leading cash handlers. As one of the traders put it, we think more of our bank accounts than of our opinions, hence we are not disposed to stand more than ⅛c to ¼c loss. News of 120,000 bu of corn being taken at the seaboard for export came when prices were around the lowest. It was so unusual to hear of export business in corn that traders were easily intimidated into covering, although there was no other news of a bullish character.

Sales of No. 4 corn in the sample market early in the day were at a premium over the December and later a fair business was at ¼@½c under. At the last some late arrivals of No. 4 mixed corn sold at $1.29, a drop of 4c from the early high point, making the discount under December 2¾c. Elevator people are taking advantage of the absence of industries from the cash corn market and are beginning to accumulate a little stock. There may be 10,000 bu corn delivered on November sales this week.

The corn market has a peculiar way of reversing its action. Friday the decline was checked at the close by buying against bids, while yesterday it was the reverse and a large part of the offers were operative.

Liquidation in December oats was of lighter volume yesterday, although the discount under May dropped to 3½c, the widest in a week. There was less changing from December to May. Seaboard houses were liberal buyers of December and May, but the best buying came from local interests.

"Heavy selling of January lard at over 2c a pound discount under the cash values was the main feature in provisions during the week and the cause of the decline," says W. L. Gregson. "Financial conditions were factors, but they do not produce more product. General sentiment is against sustained advances at this time, but we believe much of it comes from a desire to get the raw material lower. We look for a tremendous demand for all kinds of hog products until after the hog product is in."

The price of corn is higher than last year, while the crop is materially larger, say Simons, Day & Co. Undoubtedly these features are, to a great extent, responsible for the belief that a downward readjustment of values is inevitable. Under ordinary conditions such theories would have a logical basis; however, there are so many different features entering the situation, while not in direct relation to corn values, their indirect influence is nevertheless the predominating factor.

Julius Barnes, wheat director, is quoted as saying that the grain corporation has sold 30,000,000 bu wheat the last few days. Removal of the embargo permitting the importation of wheat is to help the spring wheat millers out. It is claimed here that the Canadian government has secured the bulk of the good wheat in Canada and only the poor remains.

"Winter wheat in Kansas and Oklahoma along the Rock Island road is not high enough to afford good pasturage," says James E. Bennett, who returned yesterday from a trip to Oklahoma. "They are still seeding wheat in Oklahoma, and very little of it is up sufficiently for pasturage. There is lots of moisture and a large acreage is being put in. There is plenty of feed. They have just cut sorghum, which is about two to three feet high, for feed. Some wheat remains in the field in shock, but I saw few stacks. Elevators are well filled with wheat and cars scarce. They have the oil fever bad. There is a great deal of doping of dry holes with oil to make a showing. The oil craze is as great as was that in silver mines twenty-five to thirty years ago."

R. E. Haggerty, E. Davis, and E. D. Dier have applied for membership in the Board of Trade. H. P. Wilkinson has posted his membership for transfer. The last trade reported was $11,050 net to the buyer.

Some very radical bulls are to be found on corn. In the main they are men who became bearish when prices were much higher, and covered on the extreme break. They believe that a corn market that will close higher than the previous week in the face of the most bearish conditions it was possible to expect is inherently strong and indicates much higher prices ultimately.

Ocean freight rates from United States ports to Rotterdam are now quoted at 72c per 100 lbs, against 85@90c recently. On the other hand, rates from Argentina have advanced, and corn to the United States from Buenos Aires and Rosario is now quoted at 80@85c per bu.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Shipping sales of cash grain at Chicago Saturday: Corn, 80,000 bu; oats, 111,000 bu. To the seaboard: Oats, 10,000 bu; rye, 550,000 bu; barley, 25,000 bu. For export at New York: Corn, 120,000 bu.

Despite removal of restrictions on imports of Canadian wheat no change was shown in prices at Chicago, although the undertone was easy. Receipts, 58 cars. Minneapolis, which would be most affected by imports, was unchanged on choice and 5c lower on lower grades and on winters. Kansas City was unchanged to 5c lower on hard winters, with a large number of cars carried over unsold. Red winters unchanged. St. Louis was 1@2c lower on red and 2c lower on hard. Omaha, 3@5c lower, with No. 2 hard $2.41@2.52.

Demand for cash corn came mainly from shippers, but the market failed to reflect the strength in futures and closed at the bottom with prices unchanged to 4c lower. No. 4 mixed sold at $1.29 at the last. Receipts, 189 cars. St. Louis was mainly 4@5c lower, Omaha 1c higher to 2c lower, and Peoria 2c lower on new and unchanged on old.

Cash oat prices were unchanged at Chicago, St. Louis, Omaha, and Peoria and ½c lower at Kansas City. Local receipts, 89 cars.

There was a general advance of 30@35c in hog values, closing day of the week, being first gain scored since Monday. Packers were free buyers from the start, especially smaller concerns.

Best sold at $14.25 standing 35c above Friday, 60c lower than opening day of the week and 30c below previous Saturday. Day's average was $13.90, against $17.58 a year ago and $17.78 two years ago.

Week's receipts of hogs at 223,600 besides being largest since last February, were 44,300 above the eight year average of corresponding week since 1910.

Average Weight Heavier.

Estimated average weight last week at 227 lbs was 1 lb heaveir than previous week and 7 lbs heavier than a year ago. The corresponding week of 1915 the average at 180 lbs was lightest on record. Closing cattle trade was lowest of the week, due to largest receipts on record.

While some of the poorer grades were as much as $2.00 lower than high time previous week, the general average price of good beef steers at $14.50 was $1.00 off, being practically $3.00 lower than high time last August.

Sheep and Lambs Steady.

Sheep and lamb prices at the close of the week were steady to 25c lower than previous Saturday, with best lambs quotable around $14.75. Owing to much improved quality of sheep the average price of aged stock was sharply higher than previous week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 32,000 cattle, 40,000 hogs, and 35,000 sheep, against 42,834 cattle, 20,673 hogs, and 52,348 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts, 86,000 cattle, 200,000 hogs, and 110,000 sheep.

FURTHER LOAN CONTRACTION IS MADE BY BANKS

Cut Volume of Credit by $350,000,000 in Last Five Weeks.

There was a further contraction in loans, $64,625,000, shown by the New York banks in their statement yesterday. The banks have now decreased their volume of credit about $350,000,000 in the last five weeks.

The demand deposit account showed a decrease of over $17,000,000. The excess reserve stands at $37,267,480, a fair figure.

The treasury department continued to draw down its balances, reducing the amount by $38,381,000.

Little Change Suggested.

The statement, as a whole, did not suggest a condition for much change in the stock market money situation. The figures:

The federal reserve institution bought bills in open market to the extent of $9,351,413, that is the net change in this account being the increase noted.

The total of all bills on hand decreased $3,367,433. The volume of federal reserve notes outstanding increased $3,867,433.

Reserve Decrease $6,400,000.

The reserve of the member banks decreased about $6,400,000. The figures:

National Banks Show Gain.

The reports of Chicago banks showing their condition at the close of business Nov. 17 indicate a healthy growth in savings deposit. The national banks had a gain of $1,889,006, or 8.3 per cent, compared with the same item on Sept. 12.

The state banks did not make so large a percentage increase, although in dollars the growth was $17,946,100, or 5½ per cent.

The savings deposits accounts are averaging back to normal condition of growth. The public is no longer asked to subscribe to Liberty loans. Chicago banks are substantially outside the strike area, so that withdrawals have not been affected. In the case of the South Chicago Savings there was a decrease of about $10,000 on Nov. 17, compared with Sept. 12.

LEAST TRADING SINCE AUGUST IN GOTHAM MARKET

Day's Turnover Is Under 400,000 Shares; Stocks Heavy.

The New York Times.

New York, Nov. 22.—[Special.]—There was little of interest or significance in today's short session of the stock market. Trading was considerably reduced in volume from other recent days, and price changes, which were more or less irregular, were generally limited to relatively small amounts.

The day's turnover was well under 400,000 shares, the smallest day since last August, when the market was beginning to recover from the July break. Apparently the market at the present time is going through the same situation which beset it at that time, with those who either refused to sell on the recent break or could not sell then, liquidating their holdings now.

The way the market has been acting for two or three days would indicate that this is the case.

General List Heavy.

Some prices, to be sure, have shown a great disposition to improve, and recoveries in a few instances have been quite substantial. Yet the general list has been heavy, meeting stock on the bulges, and unless all signs fail, should not clean up the shares which are ready for marketing for several days longer.

The worst of liquidation, in all probability, has run its course, but the so-called secondary liquidation is still in progress.

The banking situation, as disclosed by the clearing house and federal reserve statements of today, has enjoyed further strengthening this last week. In the former there was a contraction of $65,000,000 in the loan account, bringing the item down to $5,195,672,000 in the actual statement, as compared with $5,364,812,000 on Nov. 1, and with $5,433,003,000 on Oct. 11, when the high record was established. The several deposit items also showed contraction and excess reserves were reduced by $9,851,570 to $37,267,480.

Easier Tone in Money Likely.

The easing of money rates the latter part of the week clearly foreshadowed this improvement and it is quite possible that there will be an even easier tone in the money market this coming week. If liquidation of stock market commitments has proceeded far enough in the opinion of the powers that be, the renewal rate, the really important quotation, may be allowed to recede to 6 per cent. It was fixed at 8 per cent on Friday for the carry-over to Monday, but this is still somewhat doubtful, for a return to a 6 per cene renewal might well be construed by the speculative fraternity as an invitation to renew its activities.

Foreign Quotations Rally.

Foreign exchange quotations today again rallied slightly at the outset and most of the small gains were held to the close of the day.

The upturn since Thursday's opening level, which amounts to about 4c in sterling, 16 centimes in francs, and more than 40 centimes in lire, rather refutes the theory that all of the bad decline of the last several weeks was due to the fear of failure of the peace treaty in the senate. Of course, it is axiomatic of Wall street that markets forecast, rather than follow events, but if the decline of the exchanges were solely due to the treaty action, it would seem the event were entirely too big to be ignored after its realization.

CHICAGO....STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Chicago stocks were rather dull, without any special trend. A feature was the activity and strength in Hupp Motor common. The price advanced a full point to 14½.

Stewart Waner held steady, while Union Carbide showed a fractional gain. The packing house issues were generally firm, but not very active. National Leather was up ¼. Wahl stock sold off ½. Montgomery Ward preferred was steady at 112.

California offers you $2500 yearly Income for Life from a 10 acre Almond Orchard

For the past seventy years California has been giving up her gold to those who have grasped and made the most of her glorious opportunities, with greater prodigality than any other state in the Union.

Gold from her mountain mines. Gold from her valley oil wells. Gold from the unequalled productivity of her soil. Her grains, fruits and nuts have made fortunes for many. Other fortunes from her soil are now in the making. And California's door of Opportunity today stands as wide open as ever.

Right now the very best money-making opportunity this great state has to offer you is a fully developed ready-made income-producing ALMOND ORCHARD. One reason why this is so is because, while almonds have been grown commercially for a number of years past, the industry has never been developed to anywhere near its fullest possibilities. Although California produces 99% of the almonds grown in the United States the sum total of her almond crops each year supplies only 15 per cent of the domestic demand. The other 85 per cent are imported. Yet the demand for California almonds keeps increasing year after year.

Heretofore the men who have profited through the development of California's vast resources have gone there and devoted their best thought and energy to their tasks. In oranges, lemons, figs, prunes, grapes, apricots, walnuts—in fact, in every product of the soil where intensive cultivation can be applied, the story has always been the same—BIG MONEY for those who understood the business.

This is also true in the development of the almond industry. Though comparatively young, of late years much thought, care and specialized knowledge have been applied to almond growing in California and today it is recognized as one of the leading industries of the state.

PASO ROBLES

The Most Favored District for Almonds

To Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, the field manager of the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles, is due more credit for the development of the almond industry than to any other man. Horticulture has been his life's work. Almond culture is his specialty. Years ago he foresaw the tremendous possibilities of almond growing on a vast commercial scale in the Paso Robles district. In this district he found soil and climate ideal for sturdy tree growth and heavy crop yield. He found that the soil composition was such that it required neither irrigation nor fertilizing—both of which are very expensive and absolutely necessary for the production of many of California's crops. Today he owns some of the finest, biggest profit-making almond orchards in California. And they are "right across the fence" from land of the same rich soil formation and subject to the same climatic conditions as land that you can now obtain for an almond orchard of your own.

Associated with Mr. Nehrhood are a number of men who went to California in search of investment opportunities. On all sides they were told that the surest, most consistent, biggest profit-making crop on amount invested was—Almonds.

We're All Working Together—and We Want You with Us

We, the members of the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles, under Mr. Nehrhood's direction, took over a big tract of the choicest almond land in the Paso Robles district. We have our own almond orchards out there. We divided our holdings into 10-acre units and began telling the people in the North, Middle West and East about our almond development plan. The response was immediate—and overwhelming. The 10-acre units have been going fast ever since our first announcement. There are only a few left. This last statement is significant because desirable almond land in California—the only state where almonds are grown commercially and where are produced 99 per cent of all almonds grown in the United States—is limited. In the Paso Robles district it is extremely limited.

Quick Action Now Necessary

There is still time for you to secure one or more of these choice 10-acre units. But you must act quickly. You do not need to go to California and "sweat blood." You do not need to know the first thing about almond growing. All problems pertaining to this industry have been solved—successfully.

No doubt some day you will want to go to California to live. It is the dream of practically everyone. But in the meantime you can stay where you are and, by making a moderate payment down and part of the balance in small monthly payments, secure for yourself a 10-acre almond orchard that will pay you a net income of from $2,500 to $3,000 yearly for life. You pay only half in cash. We will accept payment for the balance out of the crops from your orchard.

Planting Season Soon Here

To make the most of this wonderful opportunity you must not delay in making your reservation. In a few weeks planting will be in full swing. Don't put it off. Make your reservation of at least one of the 10-acre tracts now so that you will be sure to get in on this season's planting. We have complete mechanical equipment and a large field force ready for the work, but there is this important fact for you to bear in mind.

Not An Almond Tree Except of Finest Pedigreed Stock Will Be Planted

Only a limited acreage can be planted for that very reason. Under no circumstances will we plant what are known as "commercial" trees. Only trees of pedigreed stock budded from old trees with unbroken records of prolific yield can find place in a Paso Robles almond orchard. These trees are nursery grown under the direct supervision of Mr. Nehrhood, who also superintends the planting.

These are trees which will yield 20 to 30 pounds each of the meatiest, richest flavored almonds on earth—nuts for which there is an ever-increasing demand and which last year brought the growers 25½ cents per pound. This year's price is 32½ cents. We plant 70 trees to the acre—700 to a 10-acre orchard. Taking the lowest figures—20 pounds to the tree and 25 cents per pound—you can see that, after making a most liberal deduction for care and marketing, the net income from 10 acres is upwards of $2,500 a year.

Meet Mr. Nehrhood Face to Face

Our Field Manager, Mr. Nehrhood, is here in Chicago for a few days preliminary to his return to Paso Robles to begin the season's planting operations. While here he will deliver lectures on Almond Growing at Lyon & Healy's Hall, 64 E. Jackson Boulevard, as follows: Monday evening, November 24, and Saturday evening, November 29. Each lecture will begin at 8 o'clock and will be illustrated with lantern slides showing interesting California scenes and photographic views of Paso Robles almond orchards.

You will want to meet Mr. Nehrhood and hear him talk. He has just come from the scenes of activity around Paso Robles and you will be interested in hearing him tell about the latest developments in the almond industry out there.

Hear him explain why he selected the Paso Robles district as the best place for almond culture in California and why there has not been an almond crop failure there for 35 years. You will want to hear what he says about budding almond trees from pedigreed stock—why 70 is just the right number of trees to the acre—why these trees under proper cultivation thrive and come into bearing quicker than others—why there is sure promise of big yields every year. He will tell you all about the soil—why it needs no irrigation or fertilizing—how it is cultivated—how the young trees are planted and cared for. He will cover the entire subject thoroughly and if there are any matters that are not perfectly clear to you he will gladly answer your questions.

So be sure to come to one of the lectures this week. Remember the place, Lyon & Healy Hall, 64 East Jackson Blvd.; and the evenings—Monday and Saturday at 8 o'clock.

Here we have a magnificent collection of enlarged and colored photographs showing Paso Robles Almond Orchards in all stages of development.

We want to explain our entire plan to you—why 10 acres is enough for independence for life—how easily you can obtain one or more of these tracts on small monthly payments—how we select, plant, care for and bring your trees into bearing without a cent of cost to you.

We want you to meet the officers of our company and convince yourself that you are dealing with honorable, high-minded men who are themselves owners of almond orchards at Paso Robles. We also want to tell you how perfectly your interests are safeguarded by one of the largest trust companies on the Pacific Coast, having capital and surplus of $2,500,000, which acts as custodian of the orchard development fund and delivers to you the deed and title to the property upon completion of the contract.

And we want to tell you about our beautiful acre homesite tracts overlooking and within easy walking distance of the center of the city of Paso Robles—homesite tracts with every modern convenience—cement walks, electric lights, water, etc.—on easy terms, planted to fruits, nuts, etc., without a cent of extra charge. There are only a few of these homesite tracts and they are rapidly being taken up.

Be sure to come any day or evening this week that suits your convenience. Let's get together and talk it over

America's First Parisian Presentation

As Portrayed by Our Designers in Paris is Approved by the Better Shops of America

Those representatives of America's leading retail shops who already visited our First Spring Showing at our New York showrooms came away with a definite understanding of what trend the Parisian Spring silhouette will follow.

So well established is our contact with the Parisian style market, so completely have our designers working in Paris embraced every opportunity to interpret Parisian fashion for America at the instant of its creation, that Paris seldom favors a new vogue that does not immediately find its way into a Maison Haas model—sent over to our New York showrooms on the next steamer departing for America.

There will be a continued arrival of new French styles to our New York showrooms; dresses transposed to American needs only after our designers have conferred with Parisian mandates.

Under Searching Eyes—

Do you ever wince inwardly?

AN unexpected meeting—a battery of eyes focused upon your face—can you meet it with composure? Is your skin flawless? Clear, lovely in coloring?

Or is there some blemish that stands out mercilessly in your own consciousness?

There is nothing that so destroys a man's or woman's poise and self-confidence as the consciousness of a complexion at fault.

Blackheads are such a disfigurement. Enlarged nose pores, a skin that will get shiny—yet these things can be corrected.

Take care of the new skin that is forming every day as old skin dies. Give it every night the right treatment for your particular trouble, and in a week or ten days you will notice a marked improvement.

Take one of the most common skin troubles. Perhaps your skin is constantly being marred by unsightly little blemishes. No doubt you attribute them to something wrong in your blood—but authorities on the skin now agree that in the great majority of cases these blemishes are caused by bacteria and parasites that are carried into the pores from outside, through dust and fine particles in the air.

How to remove skin blemishes

By using the Woodbury method of cleansing your skin, you can free it from such blemishes.

Just before retiring, wash in your usual way with warm water and Woodbury's Facial Soap, finishing with a dash of cold water. Then dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy cream-like lather. Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this and leave it on for ten minutes. Then rinse very carefully with clear hot water, then with cold.

Use this treatment regularly and the blemishes will gradually disappear.

You will find Woodbury's Facial Soap on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. The booklet containing full directions for all the famous Woodbury treatments is wrapped around each cake.

Get a cake today and begin using it tonight. A 25 cent cake lasts a month or six weeks.

Would you like to have a trial size cake?

For 6 cents we will send you a trial size cake (enough for a week of any Woodbury facial treatment) together with the booklet of treatments, "A Skin You Love to Touch." Or for 15 cents we will send you the treatment booklet and samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Powder, Facial Cream and Cold Cream. Successful Cake

Flour is more important than luck in baking cake and pastry. The use of bread flour causes most cake failures, as Domestic Scientists know. Special cake flour with a great part of the heavy gluten removed, makes such cakes as cannot be made at all with bread flour. Roxane Cake Flour is just the softest, lightest, whitest part of the wheat. A bushel (60 lbs.) of wheat yields only 10½ lbs. of Roxane, and the wheat is the finest for home use of any grown—soft, southern Indiana winter wheat. Such flour makes amazing cakes. Electrical Engineers Choose the

Thor

Manufactured and Guaranteed by the Hurley Machine Company oldest and largest manufacturers of Exclusively Electric Washing Machines in the world.

Electric Washing Machine

350,000 Women Use It

A group of electrical engineers wanted washing machines for their own homes. After a careful study of all machines, they chose the Thor unanimously.

When you buy your washing machine follow their lead.

If you are not sufficiently skilled in mechanics to appreciate all the fine points about the Thor which led these engineers to choose it above all others, then come to the Thor Shop in Chicago or go to the Thor dealer nearest you (write for this name if you don't know it) and bring with you some friend who does know mechanics. There is no doubt about what he will tell you.

These engineers saw that the Thor was the one machine with the atalog. Be sure you don't buy any machine without the atalog. It has the no-wear wooden revolving cylinder, which does not need to be lifted out, because the Thor is self-cleanable.

All gears are enclosed. It does a big washing in one hour and at a cost of 3 cents. 350,000 women use it every wash-day.

Why she Failed to Pass the Test of Critical Eyes

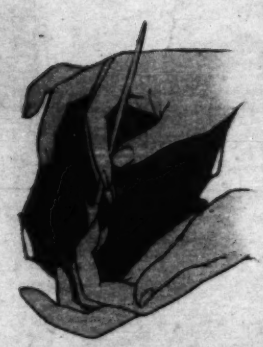
A dozen times a day some little unconscious movement of the hands betrays you

CAREFULLY gowned, pretty, attractive—yet she failed to pass the test of the other woman's scrutiny.

In the one small index to good breeding that never escapes the eyes of a critical person, the girl was deficient. Her hands were not well groomed.

How often, without our knowledge, each one of us is judged by this test!

Whenever we shake hands, whenever we make a little nervous movement or gesture of any kind, eyes are attracted by the motion to our finger tips. They see and notice our finger nails. Most people, even when they do not consciously observe our hands, are none the less unconsciously influenced by their appearance.



Gently push back the cuticle with the end of an orange stick wrapped in cotton and moistened with Cutex. Wash the hands. The surplus cuticle will disappear leaving a firm, slender nail base.

Some people deliberately judge every new acquaintance by the finger nails. They consider this the most unfailing of all tests of character. A well-known social leader said, "I can overlook shabby clothes, but ragged looking nails and cuticle are something that I cannot forgive anyone. They prove a lack of personal fastidiousness which simply means vulgarity to me."

Yet most of us have learned from sad experience how impossible it is to keep our own nails well groomed by the old-fashioned cuticle cutting method. The cuticle only seems to grow up faster, to get thicker and rougher.

For cuticle, like hair, is coarsened and thickened by constant cutting.

It is very easy, though, by the proper softening method, to keep always a lovely unbroken nail margin. The Cutex method for caring for the nails and cuticle—the most popular method in America—will keep your nails always charming. Regularly, once or twice a week, according to the rapidity with which your cuticle grows, give yourself a Cutex manicure.

You will never again be embarrassed when you feel eyes upon your hands. Your nails and cuticle will be always above reproach, always one of your chief charms.

Cutex, the cuticle remover, comes in 35c and 65c bottles. Cutex Nail White, Cold Cream and Nail Polish are each 35c.

Whatever work you do, make NUCOA your energy food

BETTER than its pleasing smoothness, mild flavor and satisfying economy, is the unquestionable nutrition of Nucoa.

Frosty weather makes the body call for more nutriment. Nucoa supplies this energy food in even greater quantities than the finest creamery butter.

Nucoa is a pure rich churning of coconuts and milk—a fine, clean, carefully made spread for bread—that tastes like creamery butter, costs half the price, but keeps twice as long.

Whatever work you do, eat Nucoa. You will find it more satisfying, every day in the year, than any butter you have ever used.

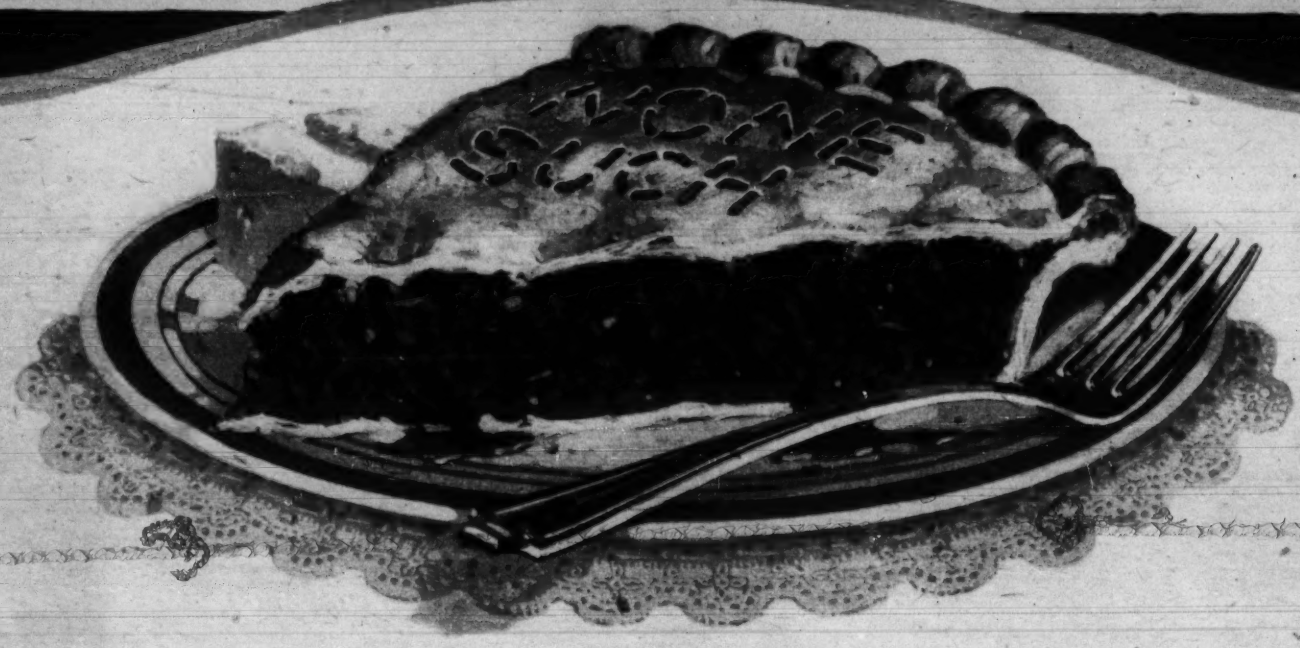
NUCOA

Butters Bread—Stays Sweet

WRITING of the energy-producing value of Nucoa, Dr. I. K. Phelps, Chemist in Charge of the United States Government Food Control Laboratory, at Washington, D. C., declares:

"Coconut oil as made up into nut margarine has a higher nutritive value in nut margarine, weight for weight, than butter, since nut margarine as sold upon the market is higher in content of fat oil than is butter in content of butter fat."

Mince Pie



"Like Mother Used to Make"

Mince pie and Thanksgiving! One is the very flavor of the other.

Can't you smell mince pie baking in the old home? Can't you taste the juicy, generous slab that was cut right on the the table for you?

What is home without a piping-hot mince pie every now and then? Absent members of the family remember how it smelled and tasted. It has more to do with building up the home-returning instinct than most people realize.

Perhaps you haven't time to prepare the mince meat. But one comes prepared for you with the real old home-made richness and flavor.

NONE SUCH MINCE MEAT

It comes as wholesome and fragrant as your mother's mince meat, stewing merrily on the old kitchen stove. It comes ready for you to warm up and put straight into the pie crust—and you are told just how to make that.

None Such Mince Meat is so good that it gives especial body and flavor to the dressing for duck and other game, to jellies, relishes, sandwiches, croquettes and salads. Try the recipes printed on the None Such package, then send to us for other recipes.

THOUSANDS OF TONS OF SUGAR BEETS ready for the mill in Utah. Each ton of beets will produce from 250 to 300 pounds of sugar. The United States' annual consumption of sugar is nearly 82 pounds per capita. Italy's is only about 10 pounds, and even France, the home of dainty confections, uses less than half as much sugar per capita as the wasteful American people. And yet we wonder why there's a shortage.

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

The CURSE OF A THOUSAND KISSES

by Sax Rohmer

Illustrated by MAUDE MARTIN EVERS

Out Toward the Great Pyramid It Led Him—and He Never Came Back.

SAVILLE GRAINGER will long be remembered by the public as a brilliant journalist and by his friends as a confirmed misogynist. His distaste for the society of women amounted to a mania, and to Grainger a pretty face was like a red rag to a bull. This was all the more extraordinary—and for Grainger more painful—because he was one of the most handsome men I ever knew—very dark, with wonderful flashing eyes and the features of an early Roman—or, as I have since thought, of an aristocratic oriental; aquiline, clean cut, and swarthy. At any mixed gatherings at which he appeared women gravitated in his direction as though he possessed some magnetic attraction for the sex, and Grainger invariably bolted.

His extraordinary end—never explained to this day—will be remembered by some of those who read of it; but so much that affected whole continents has occurred in the interval that to the majority of the public the circumstance will no longer be familiar. It created a considerable stir in Cairo at the time, as was only natural, but when the missing man failed to return the nine days' wonder of his disappearance was forgotten in the excitement of some new story or another.

Briefly, Grainger, who was recuperating at Mena house after a rather severe illness in London, went out one evening for a stroll, wearing a light dust coat over his evening clothes and smoking a cigaret. He turned in the direction of the Great Pyramid—and never came back. That is the story in its bald entirety. No one has ever seen him since—or ever reported having seen him.

If the following story is an elaborate hoax—perpetrated by Grainger himself, for some obscure reason remaining in hiding, or by another well acquainted with his handwriting—I do not profess to say. As to how it came into my possession, that may be told very briefly.

Two years after Grainger's disappearance I was in Cairo, and although I was not staying at Mena house I sometimes visited friends there. One night as I came out of the hotel to enter the car which was to drive me back to the Continental a tall native, dressed in white and so muffled up that little more of his face than two gleaming eyes was visible, handed me a packet—a roll of paper, apparently—saluted me with extraordinary formality, and departed.

No one else seemed to have noticed the man, although the chauffeur, of course, was nearly as close to him as I was, and a servant from the hotel had followed me out and down the steps. I stood there in the dusk, staring at the packet in my hand and then after the tall figure, already swallowed up in the shadows of the road. Naturally I assumed that the man had made some mistake, and holding the package near the lamp of the car I examined it closely.

It was a roll of some kind of parchment, tied with a fragment of thin string, and upon the otherwise blank outside page my name was written very distinctly!

I entered the car, rather dazed by the occurrence, which presented several extraordinary features, and unfastening the string began to read. Then, in real earnest, I thought I must be dreaming. Since I append the whole of the manuscript I will make no further reference to the contents here, but will content myself with mentioning that it was written with dark brown ink, in Saville Grainger's unmistakable hand, upon some kind of parchment or papyrus which has defied three different experts to whom I have shown it, but which, in short, is of unknown manufacture. The twine with which it was tied proved to be of finely plaited reed.

"My life is thine," she said. "Take it." For one instant I hesitated, devouring her with my eyes.

That part of Grainger's narrative, if the following amazing statement is really the work of Grainger, which deals with events up to the time that he left Mena house—and the world—I have been able to check. The dragoman, Hassan Abd-el Kebir, was still practicing his profession at Mena house at the very time of my visit, and he confirmed the truth of Grainger's story in regard to the heart of lapis-lazuli, which he had seen, and the meeting with the old woman in the Muski, of which Grainger had spoken to him.

For the rest, the manuscript shall tell Grainger's story.

The Manuscript.

I.

Two years have elapsed since I quitted the world, and the presence in Egypt of a one time colleague, of which I have been advised, prompts me to put on record these particulars of the strangest, most wonderful, and most beautiful experience which has ever befallen any man. I do not expect my story to be believed. The skepticism of the material world of Fleet street will consume my statement with its devouring fires. But I do not care. The old itching to make a "story" is upon me. As a "story" let this paper be regarded.

Where the experience actually began I must leave to each reader to judge for himself. I personally do not profess to know, even now. But the curtain first arose upon that part of the story which it is my present purpose to chronicle one afternoon near the corner of the Street of the Silversmiths in Cairo. I was wandering in those wonderful, narrow, winding lanes, unaccompanied, for I am by habit a solitary being, and despite my ignorance of the language and customs of the natives I awakened to the fact that a link of sympathy—of silent understanding—seemed to bind me to these busy brown men.

I had for many years cherished a secret ambition to pay a protracted visit to Egypt, but the ties of an arduous profession hitherto had rendered its realization impossible. Now, a stranger in a strange land, I found myself at home. I cannot hope to make evident to my readers the completeness of this recognition. From Shephard's with its throngs of cosmopolitan travelers and its hosts of pretty women I had early fled in dismay to the comparative quiet of Mena house. But the only real happiness I ever knew—indeed, as I soon began to realize, had ever known—I found among the discordant cries and mingled smells of perfume and decay in the native city. The desert called to me sweetly, but it was the people, the shops, the shuttered houses, the noise, and the smells of the eastern streets which gripped my heart.

Delightedly I watched the passage of these

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE LADY OF FASHION HEARD ABOUT IT AND THEN THINGS HAPPENED. BY WM. DONAHEY.

TOM was the name of a little boy, who lived near the village of the Teenie Weenies. Tom was seven years old and on his birthday he got the very thing he had wanted for ever so long. He got a drum and many other things, but the thing he wanted most was a knife. It was a real knife, with two blades, and when Tom saw that knife he was a very happy boy.

The second day after he received the knife Tom lost a rivet out of it and the handle came off. Tom took the knife to his mother and she could not fix it for him and the poor little fellow cried as though his heart was broken. He cried and cried until he cried himself to sleep and that is where the Teenie Weenies come into the story.

The Dunce happened to be prowling around when Tom broke his knife and he heard and saw the whole thing. He started home when Tom went to sleep and on his way he met the Clown. He told the Clown and the Clown told the Cook. The Cook told the Turk and the Turk told Paddy Pinn. Paddy Pinn told the Doctor and the Doctor told the Old Soldier. The Old Soldier told the Lady of Fashion and that kind hearted little person wanted to know what could be done about the matter.

"Can't we go over to Tom's house and fix that knife?" she asked.

"Well, I don't see just how we could do it now," answered the Old Soldier. "You see, we have got to get up our supply of wood for the winter and everybody is working as hard as he can to get it all cut before the snow falls."

"Well, it seems too bad if we can't spare a little time to mend that knife for that poor little boy," cried the Lady of Fashion. "I'm going to see the General right this minute and ask him if he won't let some of the boys go over and fix that knife."

The little lady hurried to the shoe house where she had a long talk with the General and that very afternoon the head of the Teenie Weenies ordered the little men to fix the knife.

The Teenie Weenies carried their tools over to Tom's house and sneaked quietly into the room where the knife lay on the floor beside a drum. While Tom slept the little folks worked on the knife and in a short time they had the handle securely in place.

"Well, we must get back to work cutting wood," said the General when the knife had been fixed, so the little people picked up their tools and hurried quietly away.

When Tom awoke some time later he lay in his bed and as he thought about his broken knife the tears gathered in his eyes.

"Maybe I can fix it," he thought, and climbing out of bed he ran to the place where he had left the knife. He picked it up and he could hardly believe his eyes. It was not broken and it was in the very place he had left it!

"Why, that's funny!" he exclaimed, "I'm sure it was broken. I-I must have dreamed it was broken," and he joyfully put it into his pocket, never dreaming that the Teenie Weenies had had a hand in the matter.

The Curse of a Thousand Kisses

By SAX ROHMER

commercial vehicles, narrow and set high upon monstrous wheels, which convey loads of indescribable variety along streets no wider than the "hall" of a small suburban residence. The Parsees in the Khan Khalil, with their carpets and shining silk ware, the Arab dealers, fierce, swarthy tradesmen from the desert, and the smooth tongued Cairenes upholding embroidered cloths and gauzy yashmaks to allure the eye—all these I watched with a kind of gladness that was almost tender, that was unlike any sentiment I had ever experienced toward my fellow creatures before.

Mendicants crying the eternal "Bakshish!" Sakhas with their skins of Nile water, and the other hundred and one familiar figures of the quarter filled me with a great and glad contentment.

I purposely haunted the Muski during the heat of the day because at that hour it was comparatively free from the presence of Europeans and Americans. Thus, on the occasion of which I write, coming to the end of the street in which the shops of the principal silversmiths are situated, I found myself to be the only white man (if I except the Greeks) in the immediate neighborhood.

A group of men hurrying out of the street as I approached it first attracted my attention. They were glancing behind them apprehensively, as though at a rabid dog. Then came a white bearded man riding a tiny donkey, and also glancing back apprehensively over his shoulder. He all but collided with me in his blind haste, and, stepping quickly aside to avoid him, I knocked down an old woman who was coming out of the street.

The man who had been the real cause of the accident rode off at headlong speed and I found myself left with the poor victim of my clumsiness in a spot which seemed miraculously to have become deserted. If the shopkeepers remained in their shops they were invisible, and must have retreated into the darkest corners of the caves in the wall which constitute native emporiums. Pedestrians there were none.

I stooped to the old woman, who lay moaning at my feet, and as I did so I shrank. How can I describe the loathing, the repulsion which I experienced? Never in the whole of my career had I seen such a hideous face. A ragged black veil which she wore had been torn from its brass fastenings as she fell, and her countenance was revealed in all its appalling ugliness. Yellow, shriveled, toothless, it was scarcely human; but, above all, it repelled because of its aspect of extreme age. I do not mean that it was like the face of a woman of 80; it was like that of a woman who had miraculously survived decease for several centuries! It was a witch face, a deathly face.

And as I shrank she opened her eyes, moaning feebly, and groping with clawlike hands as if darkness surrounded her. Furthermore, I saw a new pain, and a keener pain, light up those aged eyes. She had detected my involuntary movement of loathing.

Those who knew me will bear testimony to the fact that I was not an emotional man nor one readily impressionable by any kind of human appeal. Therefore they will wonder the more to learn that this pathetic light in the old woman's eyes changed my revulsion to a poignant sorrow. I had roughly knocked her from her feet, and now hesitated to assist her to rise again! Truly, she was scorned and rejected by all. A wave of tenderness, that cannot be described, that could not be resisted, swept over me. My eyes grew misty and a great remorse claimed me.

"Poor old soul!" I whispered.

Stooping, I gently raised the shriveled, apelike head, resting it against my knee, and, bending down, I kissed the old woman on the brow!

I record the fact, but even now, looking back upon its happening, and seeking to recapture the cold, solitary Saville Grainger, who has left the world, I realize the wonder of it. That I should have given rein to such an impulse! That such an impulse should have stirred me! Which phenomenon was the more remarkable?

The result of my act—regretted as soon as performed—was singular. The aged, hideous creature sighed in a manner I can never forget, and an expression that almost lent comeliness to her features momentarily crept over her face. Then she rose to her feet with difficulty, raised her hands as if blessing me, and, muttering something in Arabic, went shuffling along the deserted street, stooping as she walked.

Apparently the episode had passed unnoticed. Certainly if any one witnessed it he was well concealed. But conscious of a strange embarrassment, with which were mingled other tumultuous emotions, I turned out of the Street of the Silversmiths and found myself amid the normal activities of the quarter again. The memory of the kiss was repugnant. I wanted to wipe my lips, but something seemed to forbid the act; a lingering compassion that was almost a yearning.

For once in my life I desired to find myself among normal, healthy, moderately brainless Europeans. I longed for the smell of cigar smoke, for the rattle of the cocktail maker and the sight of a pretty face. I hurried to Shepherd's.

II.

The same night, after dinner, I walked out of Mena house to look for Hassan Abd-el-Kebir, the dragoman with whom I had contracted for a journey, by camel, to Sakhara on the following day. He had promised to attend at half past 8 in order to arrange the time of starting in the morning, together with some other details.

I failed to find him, however, among the dragomans and other natives seated outside the hotel, and to kill time I strolled leisurely down the road toward the electric tram terminus. I had taken no more than ten paces, I suppose, when a tall native, muffled to the tip of his nose in white and wearing a white turban, appeared out of the darkness beside me, thrust a small package into my hand, and, touching his brow, his lips, and his breast with both hands, bowed and departed. I saw him no more!

Standing there in the road, I stared at the little package of stupidity. It consisted of a piece of fine white silk fastened about some small, hard object. Evidently, I thought, there had been a mistake. The package could not have been intended for me.

Returning to the hotel, I stood near a lamp and unfastened the silk, which was delicately perfumed. It contained a piece of lapis lazuli, carved in the form of a heart, beautifully mounted in gold, and bearing three Arabic letters, inlaid in some way, also in gold!

At this singular ornament I stared harder than ever. Certainly the muffled native had made a strange mistake. This was a love token—and emphatically not for me!

I was standing there, lost in wonderment, the heart of lapis lazuli in my palm, when the voice of Hassan disturbed my stupor.

"Ah, my gentleman, I am sorry to be late, but——"

The voice ceased. I looked up.

"Well?" I said.

Then I, too, said no more. Hassan Abd-el-Kebir was glaring at the ornament in my hand as though I had held, not a very choice example of native jewelry, but an adder or a scorpion!

"What's the matter?" I asked, recovering from my surprise. "Do you know to whom this amulet belongs?"

He muttered something in guttural Arabic ere replying to my question. Then:

"It is the heart of lapis," he said, in a strange voice. "It is the heart of lapis!"

"So much is evident," I cried, laughing. "But does it alarm you?".

"Please," he said softly, and held out a brown hand, "I will see."

I placed the thing in his open palm and he gazed at it as one might imagine an orchid hunter would gaze at a new species of odontoglossum.

"What do the figures mean?" I asked.

"They form the word 'alf'" he replied.

"Alf? Somebody's name!" I said, still laughing.

"In Arab it means ten hundred," he whispered.

"A thousand?"

"Yes—one thousand."

"Well?"

Hassan returned the ornament to me, and his expression was so strange that I began to grow really annoyed. He was looking at me with a mingling of envy and compassion, which I found to be quite insufferable.

"Hassan," I said sternly, "you will tell me all you know about this matter. One would imagine that you suspected me of stealing the thing!"

"Ah, no, my gentleman!" he protested earnestly. "But I will tell you, yes, only you will not believe me."

"Never mind. Tell me."

Thereupon Hassan Abd-el-Kebir told me the most improbable story to which I had ever listened. Since to reproduce it in his imperfect English, with my own frequent interjections, would be tedious, I will give it in brief. Some of the historical details, imperfectly related by Hassan as I learned later, I have corrected.

In the reign of the Khalif El-Mamun, a son of Haroun-al-Rashid and brother of the prototype of Beckford's Vathek, one Shawar was governor of Egypt, and the daughter of the governor, Scheherazade, was famed throughout the domains of the khalif as the most beautiful maiden in the land. Wazirs and princes sought her hand in vain. Her heart was given to a handsome young merchant of Cairo, Ahmad er-Madi, who was also the wealthiest man in the city. Shawar, although an indulgent father, would not hear of such a union, however, but he hesitated to destroy his daughter's happiness by forcing her into an unwelcome marriage. Finally passion conquered reason in the breasts of the lovers and they fled, Scheherazade escaping from the palace of her father by means of a rope ladder smuggled into the harem apartments by a slave whom Ahmad's gold had tempted, and meeting Ahmad outside the gardens, where he waited with a fleet horse.

Even the guard at the city gate had been bought by the wealthy merchant, and the pair succeeded in escaping from Cairo.

The extensive possessions of Ahmad were confiscated by the enraged father and a sentence of death was passed upon the absent man—to be instantly put into execution in the event of his arrest anywhere within the domain of the khalif.

Exiled in a distant oasis, the sheikh of which was bound to Ahmad by ties of ancient friendship, the prospect which had seemed to alluring to Scheherazade became clouded. Recognizing this change in her attitude, Ahmad er-Madi racked his brains for some scheme whereby he might recover his lost wealth and surround his beautiful wife with the luxury to which she had been accustomed. In this extremity he had recourse to a certain recluse who resided in a solitary spot in the desert, far from the haunts of men and who was widely credited with magical powers.

It was a whole week's journey to the abode of the wizard, and, unknown to Ahmad, during his absence a son of the khalif, visiting Egypt, chanced to lose his way on a hunting expedition and came upon the secret oasis in which Scheherazade was hiding. This prince had been one of her most persistent suitors.

The ancient magician consented to receive Ahmad, and the first boon which the enamored young man craved of him was that he might grant him a sight of Scheherazade. The student of dark arts consented. Bidding Ahmad to look into a mirror, he burned the secret perfumes and uttered the prescribed incantation. At first mistily, and then quite clearly. Ahmad saw Scheherazade, standing in the moonlight beneath a tall palm tree—her lips raised to those of her former suitor!

At that the world grew black before the eyes of Ahmad. And he, who had come a long and arduous journey at the behest of love, now experienced an equally passionate hatred. Acquainting the magician with what he had seen, he demanded that he should exercise his art of visiting upon the false Scheherazade the most terrible curse that it lay within his power to invoke!

The learned man refused; whereupon Ahmad, insane with sorrow and anger, drew his sword and gave the magician choice of compliance or instant death. The threat sufficed. The wizard performed a ghastly conjuration, calling down upon Scheherazade the curse of an ugliness beyond that of humanity, and which should remain with her not for the ordinary span of a lifetime, but for incalculable years, during which she should continue to live in the flesh, loathed, despised, and shunned of all!

"Until one thousand compassionate men, unmasked and of their own free will, shall each have bestowed a kiss upon thee," was the exact text of the curse. "Then thou shalt regain thy beauty, thy love—and death."

Ahmad er-Madi staggered out from the cavern, blinded by a hundred emotions—already sick with remorse, and one night's stage on his return journey dropped dead from his saddle, stricken by the malignant will of the awful being whose power he had invoked! I will conclude this wild romance in the words of Hassan, the dragoman, as nearly as I can recall them.

"And so," he said, his voice lowered in awe, "Scheherazade, who was stricken with age and ugliness in the very hour that the curse was spoken, went out into the world, my gentleman. She begged her way from place to place, and as the years passed by accumulated much wealth in that manner. Finally, it is said, she returned to Cairo, her native city, and there remained. To each man who bestowed a kiss upon her—and such men were rare—she caused a heart of lapis to be sent, and upon the heart was engraved in gold the number of the kiss! It is said that these gifts insured to those upon whom they were bestowed the certain possession of their beloved! Once before, when I was a small child, I saw such an amulet, and the number upon it was nine hundred and ninety-nine."

The thing was utterly incredible, of course, merely a picturesque example of eastern imagination, but just to see what effect it would have upon him I told Hassan about the old woman in the Muski. I had to do so. Frankly, the coincidence was so extraordinary that it worried me. When I had finished:

"It was she—Scheherazade," he said, fearfully. "And it was the last kiss!"

"What, then?" I asked.

"Nothing, my gentleman. I do not know!"

III.

Throughout the expedition to Sakhara on the following day I could not fail to note that Hassan was covertly watching me, and his expression annoyed me intensely. It was that compound of compassion and resignation which one might bestow upon a condemned man.

I charged him with it, but of course he denied any such sentiment. Nevertheless, I knew that he entertained it, and, what was worse, I began in an uncomfortable degree to share it with him! I cannot make myself clearer. But I simply felt the normal world to be slipping from under my feet, and, no longer experiencing a desire to clutch at modernity as I had done after my meeting with the old woman, I found myself to be reconciled to my fate!

To my fate? To what fate? I did not know, but I realized beyond any shade of doubt that something tremendous, inevitable, and ultimate was about to happen to me. I caught myself unconsciously raising the heart of lapis lazuli to my lips! Why I did so I had no idea. I seemed to have lost identity. I no longer knew myself.

When Hassan parted from me at Mena house that evening he could not disguise the fact that he regarded the parting as final; yet my plans were made for several weeks ahead. Nor did I quarrel with the man's curious attitude. I regarded the parting as final, also!

In a word, I was becoming reconciled—to something. It is difficult, all but impossible, to render such a frame of mind comprehensible, and I shall not even attempt the task, but leave the events of the night to speak for themselves.

After dinner I lighted a cigaret, and, avoiding a particularly persistent and very pretty widow who was waiting to waylay me in the lounge, I came out of the hotel and strolled along in the direction of the Pyramid. Once I looked back—bidding a silent farewell to Mena house! Then I took out the heart of lapis lazuli from my pocket and kissed it rapturously—kissed it as I had never kissed any object or any person in the whole course of my life!

And why I did so I had no idea.

All who read my story will be prepared to learn that in this placid and apparently feeble frame of mind I slipped from life, from the world. It was not so. The modern man, the Saville Grainger once known in Fleet street, came to life again for one terrible, strenuous moment, and then passed out of life for ever.

Just before I reached the Pyramid and a would say, "and, after that, the match with the Big Feller."

"And then we go traveling," said August, dreamily. "Vienna and Berlin and Dresden——"

"Huh!" said Garrity. "What's the matter with Cork and Dublin?"

"O, well," said August with resignation, "I suppose we see them, too, eh?"

"See that!" bragged Martin, proudly. "He ain't worrying about this coon. He ain't even worrying about fighting the champion. O, I tell you, this boy ain't got a nerve in his body!"

That evening, just at dusk, August sat alone on the front porch of the cottage inhaling the fragrance of the roses and drinking in the quiet beauty of the scene. From the dining room at the rear of the house came faint murmurs; the camp followers were engaged in their nightly game of craps, but the cries for "Big Dick, the bartender," and "Eighter from Decatur" seemed very far away. August's feet were on the porch railing, but, in reality, August was miles away from anything which savored of fighting and violence. In fancy, he was where the blue of the distant mountains was beginning to turn purple and the long shadows were creeping over the cañons and ravines.

Out of the stillness of the evening there came a creaking, whining sound, a false note in the symphony of the dying day. It sharpened to a squeal of protest, and August turned his head. Along the yellow, dusty road came a queer looking vehicle. At first August thought it was only a heavily loaded wagon, but as it came nearer he made out the lines of a hearse—a rusty, black hearse, its curtains drawn and its shabby plumes jerking stiffly as the creaking wheels jolted in and out of the ruts in the roadway.

August was conscious of a sense of resentment. What business had a hearse to be out at this time in the evening, and on this quiet country road? But, to save his life, he could not have taken his eyes off the thing.

The somber equipage drew abreast of the house, and then, for the first time, August noticed the driver—an immensely tall, cadaverous looking man in a black frock coat and an old fashioned stovepipe hat.

As if in answer to August's scrutiny, the tall driver turned his head, and August saw, with a vague and unidentified tremor, that the driver was a Negro, as black as the hearse upon which he rode and of which he seemed so much a part. Through the gathering gloom the whites of his eyes were plainly visible, and, turning his long neck, the Negro continued to stare at August until the hearse was fifty feet down the road, the wheels keeping up their constant, whining song.

August rose, shook himself, and went into the cottage, where he played pinochle with Martin, but, try as he might, he could not efface the haunting memory of the black hearse and the black driver.

The next night the same thing happened again. Once more the creaking hearse came out of the dusk, and the same Negro driver favored August with a long, deliberate stare. That night August could not keep his mind on the cards.

On the third night August found himself listening for the first faint whine of the wheels. Another man might have gone inside; but not August Lembach. The thing had taken hold of his imagination, and he found himself thinking over and over again:

"What does it mean? What does it mean?"

That was his first sleepless night. Garrity, in the next room, heard the giant thrashing about in his bed, and attributed it to nervousness. He rose and tiptoed to the door. August was sitting by the side of his bed looking out of the window upon the road.

"G'wan back to bed!" said Garrity, roughly. "What's the matter with you, anyway? Are you worryin' about that coon?"

"What coon?" asked August, with an undeniable start.

"Why, this Churchill."

"No," answered August, honestly. "I wasn't thinking about him at all."

"Well, then," demanded Garrity, "what's eating you? Are you worryin' about anything?"

"I don't know, Martin," said August, heavily. "I don't know. I just can't seem to get to sleep."

"Aw, forget it!" scolded Garrity. "Get back in the hay and go to sleep!"

Obediently, August rolled himself in his blankets, but sleep would not come, and in the morning he refused to touch his breakfast.

"They're all like this before a big fight," said Martin to the sparring partner. "I used to worry my head off toward the end of my training. But that was when I'd been some time in the game. We'll have to kid this feller along and keep him cheerful."

"A swell chance!" said the sparring partner, moodily. "Yesterday he rammed me with that right hand and loosened three teeth, and all the sucker would say was that he thought I was going to duck it."

"Praise be," said Martin, "he's still got the wallop. He'll be all right when he gets in the ring."

But the next night, and the next, the black hearse moved slowly past the training quarters, and always when August was alone on the porch. The big fighter slept little those nights, and when he did, his rest was disturbed by dreams of a tall, cadaverous Negro, whose white eyes bored through and through him like hot gimlets.

On the night before the battle there was a pale moon, and at 2 o'clock in the morning August, lying wide eyed on his bed, with every muscle set and tense, heard a sound which drew him creeping to the window, with cold shivers playing up and down his backbone. Out of the dark to the south came the unmistakable whining of wheels and the soft, muffled thud of shod hoofs. A black shape loomed against the yellow ribbon of the roadway, seemed to hang for an instant motionless, and then moved forward at a snail's pace.

Hardly daring to breathe, August watched every detail of the loathed vehicle emerge from the darkness, complete to the last tattered plume. There, on the box, was the tall Negro driver, his upturned face ghastly in the moonlight and his white eyes fixed steadily upon August's window. August shrank back behind the curtain, but he felt those eyes even in the dark. When he dared to look again, there was the hearse, standing in front of the house, the driver's face still upturned to the window.

Martin Garrity, asleep in the next room and dreaming of money, leaped out of his bed at the sound of a strangled cry, and an instant later he was shaking August by the shoulder.

"For the love of heaven, Owgust, don't take on like that! You're worse than a woman with the hysterics! What's the matter?"

It was five minutes before August could tell him, and Martin strode to the window and drew the curtain aside.

"Come and look!" said the manager, sternly. "There's nothing there. A hearse? I tell you, you dreamed it. You've had a nightmare, Owgust, that's what ails you."

After a time Martin believed that he had convinced August Lembach of the unreality of the nocturnal vision.

"Just to think," muttered the manager, as he again sought his repose, "to think of a big slob like that havin' nerves! And seein' things, too! I'll be glad when this fight is over."

Sledgehammer Garrity sat on a rubdown table in the dressing room of the fight pavilion. He seemed almost cheerful.

"It's the fight that will divert him," said Martin, sagely. "You see how much better he is already. Listen, now, Owgust. Waste no time with this coon. Go right after him. He's got a jaw like a pie crust. Give him the old one-two: the left to the belly and the right to the jaw. O, man, but it's a fine house they have out there!"

"That's good," said August. "And don't you want me to box this coon?"

"Divvle the bit!" said Martin, emphatically. "Hang it on him the first round, if you can. Come on, now, we're goin' out. Gather up them buckets and things."

August strode down the aisle to the ring with the manner and bearing of a real champion. After all, here was something to keep his mind off hearses and such unpleasant subjects. The crowd gave him a hearty welcome, for he was the favorite, save in a portion of the gallery set apart for the persons of color.

Churchill, a chunky, coal black Ethiopian, with an immense mop of woolly hair, was already in his corner. He leaped across the ring and showed every tooth in his head as he offered his immense black paw to August.

"All I says," chuckled Churchill, "is may de bes' man win, white or black!"

"The winner will be white!" snapped Martin Garrity. "You bet your spare wool on that, coon."

"That," said Churchill, who seemed to be a jovial soul, with a sense of humor, "is a matteh which we two gen'leman am about to decide, an' not with ouah mouths, eitheh!"

He pranced back to his corner, immensely pleased with himself.

"Seem lak to me," he remarked to Pete Gilman, "as if that Dutch boy ain't happy this evenin.' He shook hands all right, but his hand was as cole as a lizard's tail. Pete, you reckon he's nu'vous?"

"Shouldn't wonder," said Gilman. "Hurry up and get these gloves on!"

Martin Garrity watched his protégé with the eye of a hawk, and found nothing amiss with his bearing.

"He's forgotten all about his scare last night," thought Martin. "I used to be the same way; all right when I got into the ring."

Almost before August realized it, he was standing in the angle of the ropes, listening to the final announcement of the referee.

"These men have agreed—twenty rounds—straight Queensberry rules—winner to be matched——"

"Remember now, Owgust," Martin was saying as he leaned over from behind. "Remember! Get in one on his jaw as soon as you can. This coon ain't game, and he won't stand the gaff. If he won't mix it with you, feel him out for a while, but get in that good slam at his jaw as soon as he leaves an opening."

"Sure!" said August. "Sure!"

"Are you all ready, down there?" whispered Pete Gilman. "As soon as the bell rings, up with you on that chair!"

There was an instant of silence. The referee glanced at the timekeepers and then swung his right hand into the air.

"Let her go!" he cried.

As the bell clanged, August took a step out of his corner toward the middle of the ring, but what was that commotion in the other angle of the ropes? Suddenly from behind Churchill's corner there rose a terrifying shape—a tall, cadaverous Negro in a rusty, black frock coat with white cotton gloves on his hands, and, horror of horrors! an ancient stovepipe hat upon his head! And the eyes of this apparition—the large, white eyes—were fixed upon August in a stare that every nerve of his body remembered.

Some time after that August awoke with a shudder. In his nostrils there was a strange, penetrating odor which caused him to gasp and move his head from side to side, as if to escape from it.

"There, now," said a voice, which he dimly recognized as belonging to Martin Garrity. "There, now, you're coming out of it, all right. Easy." Martin was pressing a fat, green bottle of smelling salts to August's nose. August blinked a few times and looked about him. He was back in the dressing room, which seemed overfull of strange faces, in which, despite his dazed condition, August read sympathy or reproach.

"O-o-o-h!" grunted August. "Did you see it, Martin?"

"Did I see what?" Martin's voice rose almost to a yell. "I saw you walk right up to that coon and drop your hands at your sides, that's what I saw! And you let that coon cop you with the first punch! Did I see it!"

"Yes, sir," said one of the reporters, "it seemed to me that he stuck out his jaw to be hit!"

"Do you think he was doped?" chimed in another earnest searcher for information.

"Yes!" said Martin bitterly. "He was doped with what dopes most of 'em, a good wallop on the chin, the big Dutch pig!"

But August minded none of these things. He went quietly back to sleep, and it took two doctors an hour to bring him to consciousness again.

"He's had a shock of some kind," said one of the medical men, "something beside the blow."

"That's it!" said Martin, savagely. "Get him an alibi of some kind, because he needs one bad."

At the same moment "Bud" McManus and Pete Gilman were sitting down to a thick beefsteak in the back room of an all night restaurant, with a cold quart on the floor beside them.

"You're a marvel!" said Bud, lifting his glass.

"Well," said Gilman, modestly, "there's a lot of angles to this fight game, and a smart fella has to know 'em all. This was a good game to work on a Dutchman, but it wouldn't do to try it on an Irishman."

"And why not?" asked Bud. "An Irishman has got a goat to be got the same as anybody else."

"Because," said Pete, "an Irishman would have loaded up a scatter gun with slugs and shot old 'Sad-face' plum off that hearse! A little more of the grape, Bud?"

The THIRTEENTH TURKEY

In Fancy, It Was Roasted For More Than One Thanksgiving Day Dinner.

By Oney Fred Sweet

THE streets were practically deserted. A blue haze shrouded the big buildings, above which there was mist for a sky.

A cheerful enough day, perhaps, out in the homes, but downtown silently drab. Turning a corner where traffic ordinarily caused a contest between clatter and clang, Mr. Champine, in his car, encountered a flock of pigeons enjoying the pavement as though in an open field. The bleak warehouses seemed to understand, just as all of them understood—boss and office boy, stenographer and solicitor, customer and clerk. It was Thanksgiving day.

Mr. Champine, the elevator stilled, climbed three flights of stairs of a bee hive that had turned tomblike, and on entering his office stepped to the telephone before removing his hat and coat. He was some time in getting connection, but eventually——

"That you, Mr. Clifford? Mr. Champine speaking. I want you to come down right away. Yes, I know it's a holiday, but I want you to come down. I'll be waiting for you here at the office."

The president of the Champine company hung up the receiver. He was a reserved, elderly man who had given his life to the institution that bore his name. For several years he had partially retired—there was on his cheeks a Florida tan—but changing conditions in the business world had brought him back to his desk. He wheeled about in his chair when Mr. Clifford, a questioning expression on his fat face, finally appeared.

"It was at your own suggestion that I hired you, Clifford," began Champine, clearing his throat. "You came to me with recommendations of your ability to create good will among employes. It was a new stunt to me. I never had any trouble. But you explained the existence of unrest, the need of new methods for dealing with labor. I thought that possibly I was getting out of touch with the times; I hired you. And I am called out of bed this morning by Jensen, the watchman, who has been with us for thirty years; he wanted to let me know he'd quit. had suddenly turned bolshevik—I gathered had suddenly turned bolsheviki—I gathered that much, although much of his conversation was not clear. And he tried to tell me how they were running things in Turkey."

"He was merely expressing his appreciation," smiled Clifford.

"He was doing nothing of the sort," snapped the president. "He was leaving our employ, and he is a man I don't care to replace. His loyalty up until this morning has been all that could be asked. Now—now we're without a watchman here tonight apparently."

"Mr. Jensen got his turkey; it must have pleased him," puzzled Clifford. "I think you must have misunderstood his conversation on the phone. You see, yesterday——"

"I understood him, all right. I've known him for thirty years and I tell you that he had a tone of voice that might have belonged to Emma Goldman. I never heard such ranting in all my life, and Jensen has always been a peaceable sort of fellow. He got his turkey, you say—what turkey?"

"I took good care of Jensen," insisted Clifford, reminiscently. "I took good care of all the boys—you understand, gave each of them a big turkey for their dinner today, despite the high price and scarcity of the birds. You will remember you approved of the plan a week or so ago."

"I had forgotten," nodded the president, losing some of his agitation.

"Yes, I got each of the boys a turkey," continued the welfare worker. "I went down the list and took care of everybody. During the noon hour some of the boys chopped off the heads and legs of their birds, and when one of the truck drivers came along in the afternoon and insisted that he ought to have been remembered with the bunch—well, we gave him a bird, too. You would have laughed. It looked just like the real thing—the heads and feet all nicely wrapped up with a pair of feet sticking out the end. We gave that to the truck driver. It looked like a fifteen pound bird, just like the others. I hadn't put the truck driver on the list; I bought just a dozen turkeys. He could hardly have expected one, but he's got a lot of nerve. It was hard enough and expensive enough taking care of the number we did. But, as I say, the truck driver came along in the afternoon and asked where his turkey was, and—we simply provided a thirteenth turkey."

"You gave him the wrapped up heads and legs with a pair of feet sticking out the end," finished the president, tersely. "Well——"

"Well, he must have examined the thing before he had gone far, because he threw it out in the alley. I suppose for a time he had visions of a real Thanksgiving dinner out of that package, but he saw the joke and threw the thing away. It couldn't have been in the alley long, for about 3 o'clock the city salesman, looking out the window, saw an old fellow starting off with it under his arm and he had a hunch that it had been stolen here. The city salesman thought surely that it was the real thing. It did look natural."

"Then the poor old fellow who picked it up had his vision of a Thanksgiving dinner shattered too," cut in the president. "A turkey used to be just a turkey, but a fifteen pound turkey nowadays——"

"But the city salesman reported what he supposed was a theft and two or three men from the shipping department started out to chase it down," Clifford interrupted. "They didn't know but what it was one of their own turkeys. They had visions there for awhile of their own dinners slipping from them, I guess. Anyhow, they put up a hot chase. The old fellow seemed determined to get away with the fowl, and he came close to being run over a couple of times in trying to make his getaway. But they caught him, and they brought the package back. We all had a good laugh when we opened it up. Then we tied it up again and threw it over in the corner, figuring that that was the end of the excitement."

"But it wasn't," hemmed the president, impatiently.

"No, you see the truck driver came back again about 5 o'clock. 'Say,' he hollered, 'that was a nice trick you tried to play on me.'

"'Oh, I knew you'd be back,' I says to him; 'here's your real turkey.' And I went and brought back that fake thirteenth turkey again and gave it to him. Never saw a thing so realistic in my life—just the shape and size of a nice fifteen pounder with those two legs and feet sticking out."

"And you gave him the fake turkey again?"

"Why shouldn't I? There was no reason to include him on the list. Not one of our own men. I only bought twelve for the old timers. Wait until you see the bill for those turkeys, Mr. Champine."

"I agree with you," yawned the president. "There was no reason for including the truck driver on the list. But since you have given him one of the good turkeys——"

"But Mr. Jensen, our faithful night watchman, was given the one good turkey that was left when he came on at night," frowned Clifford.

"You said a while ago that it looked very realistic," nodded the president. "It was so realistic, in fact, that it was mistaken many times yesterday, according to your strange narrative. No doubt it was the cause of great anticipation on the part of the watchman as he made his rounds last night. He was probably very happy over it all the way home. And his wife must have smiled when she met him at the door. The faces of the ten children must have brightened while it was being untied. But when the strings were opened—well, it wasn't a very dainty dish to set before a night watchman and his family on Thanksgiving day."

"But do you have an idea——?" began Clifford in alarm.

"I have an idea it's getting toward dinner time," remarked the president, rising. "Look through the files there and get the watchman's home address. We've got to get a turkey to take out there, but nobody's going to have a chance to wrap it up. I want Jensen to glimpse it in full before we attempt to invade his premises. You didn't hear him resign over the phone this morning; I did."

"We can't recover the truck driver's turkey now," shrugged Clifford. "I imagine it's full of dressing and well browned by this time. And I said to him, 'I knew you'd be back; here's your real turkey.' One less lie held against me, anyhow."

Half an hour later Messrs. Champine and Clifford, provisioned with one unwrapped turkey, drove up in front of a number above a basement door. Holding the fowl aloft, Mr. Champine knocked, waited, knocked again.

Mr. Jensen, coming to the door, glanced at the turkey and glanced at the boss. He had been in Mr. Champine's employ for too long a period not to pay a bow of homage, despite the telephone conversation of the morning. Anyhow, the cause of the talk over the phone had been removed by what the boss held in his hand. And besides it was the first time the boss had ever called.

"I am sorry to say, Jensen, that, unwittingly, a very low trick was played on you last night," the president began, passing over the gobbler. "The explanation is too complicated for me to go into details because I realize your Thanksgiving dinner has been delayed as it is. I might say that I have a poor opinion of any one who would wrap or rewrap up a bundle of refuse, realistically hinting of a turkey within, and pass the same on to a fellow man, in these days of social unrest and high priced food."

"Aye be back to work tonight," assured the night watchman, hefting the bird in hand.

Returning to the car, the president of the Champine company gave a sigh of relief. "You're to come out to the house to take dinner with me," he said to his welfare worker. "Thank goodness, we're through with this turkey business."

The president had returned to good mood as he sat with Clifford by the fireplace in his home. He was showing his guest some Florida snapshots when the housekeeper, realizing his return, came to the room. She was plainly embarrassed.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Champine," she hesitated, "but I have been waiting to tell you. It's about the turkey."

"Turkey?"

"There were two of them and now there aren't any," the housekeeper continued. "I ordered one and a boy came with one this morning. Not long afterward another boy came with another turkey. I told the second boy that the turkey had already been delivered; that there must be a mistake; and I let him take his back. When I unwrapped the first turkey it wasn't a turkey at all—just heads and legs with a fair of feet sticking out."

Mr. Clifford groaned and Mr. Champine fidgeted in his chair.

"I tried phoning them, but it was too late," went on the housekeeper. "There was a note with the turkey that wasn't a turkey. I found it inside the package when I opened it up. As near as I could finally figure out, it was from a Mr. Jensen, who explained he was sending the package out by his boy so you could better understand what he had been talking about over the telephone."

"It's all right, Martha," gasped Mr. Champine, after a pause. "Mr. Clifford and I are tired of turkey, anyhow."

a lonely spot in the path—for this was not a "Sphinx and Pyramid night"—that is to say, the moon was not at the full—a tall, muffled native appeared at my elbow. He was the same man who had brought me the heart of lapis lazuli, or his double. I started.

He touched me lightly on the arm.

"Follow," he said, and pointed ahead into the darkness below the plateau.

I moved off obediently. Then—suddenly, swiftly, came revolt. The modern man within me flared into angry life. I stopped dead, and, "Who are you? Where are you leading me?" I cried.

I received no reply.

A silk scarf was slipped over my head by some one, who, silently, must have been following me, and drawn tight enough to prevent any loud outcry but not so as to endanger my breathing. I fought like a madman. I knew, and the knowledge appalled me, that I was fighting for my life. Arms like bands of steel grasped me. I was lifted, bound, and carried—I knew not where.

Placed in some kind of softly padded saddle, or, as I have since learned, into a shibriyeh or covered litter, on a camel's back, I felt the animal rise to its ungainly height and move off swiftly. As suddenly as revolt had flamed up, resignation returned. I was contented. My bonds were unnecessary; my rebellion was ended. I yearned, wildly, for the end of the desert journey! Some one was calling me and all my soul replied.

For hours it seemed the camel raced ceaselessly on. Absolute silence reigned about me. Then in the distance I heard voices, and the gait of the camel changed. Finally the animal stood still. Came a word of guttural command, and the camel dropped to its knees. Pillowed among a pile of scented cushions, I experienced no discomfort from this usually painful operation.

I was lifted out of my perfumed couch and set upon my feet. Having been allowed to stand for a while until the effects of remaining so long in a constrained position had worn off, I was led forward into some extensive building. Marble pavements were beneath my feet, fountains played and the air was heavy with burning ambergris.

I was placed with my back to a pillar and bound there, but not harshly. The bandage about my head was removed. I stared around me.

A magnificent eastern apartment met my gaze—a great hall open on one side to the desert. Out upon the sands I could see a group of men who had evidently been my captors and my guards. The one who had unfastened the silk scarf I could not see, but I heard him moving away behind the pillar to which I was bound.

Stretched upon a luxurious couch before me was a woman.

If I were to seek to describe her I should inevitably fail, for her loveliness surpassed everything which I had ever beheld—of which I had ever dreamed. I found myself looking into her eyes, and in their depths I found all that I had missed in life, and lost all that I had found.

She smiled, rose, and, taking a jeweled dagger from a little table beside her, approached me. My heart beat until I felt almost suffocated as she came near. And when she bent and cut the silken lashing which bound me I knew such rapture as I had hitherto counted an invention of Arabian poets. I was raised above the joys of common humanity and tasted the joy of the gods. She placed the dagger in—

"My life is t—"

And, clutching ing her beautiful bos— plunge the blade into her hea—

The knife dropped, clattering upon the ble pavement. For one instant I hesitated, watching her, devouring her with my eyes; then I swept her to me and pressed upon her sweet lips the thousand and first kiss.

Next week an original story entitled "Lover's Reckoning," by John Fleming Wilson, will appear in this section.

GARRITY'S CHAMPION

Fame Beckoned, But a Dark Cloud Loomed on His Path from a Brewery Wagon to Glory.

By Charles E. Van Loan

MARTIN GARRITY stood in front of Tim Shaughnessy's place of business and watched the driver of the brewery wagon maneuvering that unwieldy vehicle into the proper position for the discharge of freight. The street was narrow and crowded and the cobblestones were slippery. Another driver might have cursed or whipped the horses. The blonde giant on the high seat did neither, speaking seldom, and then in a soothing tone, and handling the team with rare patience and no small amount of skill.

When at last the hind wheels of the wagon rasped against the curb the big blonde swung down from the seat with a lithe, graceful movement of his powerful body and nonchalantly began discharging cargo. He juggled the heavy barrels as another man might have handled soap boxes; and Martin Garrity, whose business had made him something of an authority on the human animal, looked on with interest and appreciation.

"By golly," he thought, "but there's a whale of a man for you, Martin! He handles them barrels as if they was empty!"

His task completed, the young Hercules came out of Shaughnessy's place and, standing upon the sidewalk, stretched himself idly. He did not know it at the time, and he never knew of it afterward, but it was that spreading abroad of his powerful arms that changed the whole complexion of his career. Had the driver of the brewery wagon been gifted with second sight, the chances are that he would have scrambled upon the wagon and driven away as rapidly as possible.

Garrity, at the edge of the sidewalk, took in the picture at a glance—six feet six inches of bone, muscle, and sinew; broad, sloping shoulders, and, under the blue shirt, a tremendous chest outlined, wide and deep, and, as Garrity afterward remarked, "as thick through as a barrel." One arm was bare to the elbow, and Martin noted with pleasurable thrill the bulging muscles of the forearm. Then the giant raised his arms, crooked them in slightly toward his shoulders, and thrust them out, full stretch.

"Oo-o-o-a-a-ah!" he grunted.

"Powers o' mercy!" thought Martin Garrity. "What a reach! What—a—reach!"

With the unspoken words came the great idea, and whenever Martin Garrity had an idea he did not allow dust to settle upon it. He stepped forward at once.

"My, but you're the big lad!" he said, approvingly.

The blonde giant opened his eyes a bit wider and blinked at Martin sleepily. His face was the face of a happy, contented child. He had the brow of a student, the eyes of a dreamer, and the mouth of a poet, but these were not the features which had interested Martin Garrity.

"Eh? What's that?" said the giant, slowly. His voice was soft and low, and carried a faint trace of his Teutonic origin.

"I said that you was a fine, big lad," answered Martin, "and, by golly, you are! How much do you weigh?"

"How much?" repeated the giant, slightly puzzled by the question. "O, I don't know. Two hundred and forty, maybe."

Martin Garrity put out his hand and ran it down the giant's arm from shoulder to elbow, and then he whistled.

"What's your name?" he asked.

"August Lembach."

"And your age?"

"Twenty-two."

It never occurred to August Lembach that he might tell this inquisitive Irishman to go hence with his questions and his impertinent fingerings. August was a man of peace.

"Look here!" said Garrity. "I think I can put you in the way of making some money. Anyway, I want to talk to you about it. Where do you live?"

August answered truthfully.

"How about you taking dinner with me tonight at that big German place on Fifth street? Say at 7 o'clock. If you could make some money—honestly, you know—you'd be for that, wouldn't you?"

August Lembach reflected for fully half a minute.

"Well—maybe," he said, at last.

He stepped into the street and hoisted himself to his high seat. Once again Martin noted the ease with which he carried his tremendous bulk—the catlike grace of his movements.

"Hey!" cried Martin. "You won't forget? At 7 o'clock tonight, you know?"

"Well, maybe," answered August, gathering up the reins. "Git ap!"

Garrity watched him drive away down the narrow street, his blonde head nodding like a yellow chrysanthemum above the beer barrels. Then he rubbed his hands together and swore softly.

"If ever I saw a feller," thought Martin, "with all the makin's of a heavyweight champion, he's the boy! And, O, by golly, I'll bet he's got a kick that would knock a street car off the track!"

Garrity disappeared indoors. Tim Shaughnessy was sitting in his tiny office examining his monthly bills.

"Hello, Martin," he said, "thought you'd gone."

"I was just outside," said Martin. "Say, Tim, I've found a fortune."

"Ye don't say!" exclaimed Shaughnessy. "In front of my place? Then half of it belongs to me."

"Yes," said Martin, "I've found some one to lick the Big Feller!"

"Go on with ye!" scoffed Shaughnessy. "And for why should ye want to get the Big Feller licked, Martin? He's a friend of yours, ain't he?"

"Sure, he's a friend of mine!" said Garrity. "But there's little friendship in business, Timmy."

"True for ye," said Shaughnessy, eying his bills ruefully. "And who is this unknown champion ye have found?"

"His name is Owgust Limbock, or some such a noise."

"A Dutchman?" demanded Shaughnessy. "Sure, Martin, ye know a Dutchman can't fight!"

"Well," said Martin, "this one can be taught. He's got all the tools of the trade, and wit' me to coach him—say, we'll be challegin' the Big Feller this time a year from now!"

The followers of the fighting game have many peculiarities. No sooner have they set up one idol than they cast about to find a man to knock it down. No sooner has a fighter demonstrated that he is the best man in his class, when lo! he is beset with challenges of all sorts, and there are always those who wish to see a champion whipped. The Big Fellow, so called because of his great bulk, had worn the crown for three years, and none had been found who could so much as tip the bauble over his ears, much less knock it off. The discovery of a successful challenger for the title meant a fortune for finder and findee, hence Martin Garrity's excitement.

That night he sat long over a round table with August Lembach. At first the giant absolutely refused to listen, and Garrity was hard put to it to keep him from making an abrupt departure. In vain Garrity bought stein after stein of the finest imported brew; but the Irish have the tongues, and, by playing skillfully upon many strings, in the end Martin found the right one. Money failed to interest August, easy living proved no attraction, but when Martin Garrity began to talk about fame August's eyes brightened.

"You'd be the biggest man in America, Owgust," he urged. "Your picture would be in all the papers and hanging up, framed, in all the saloons. People would come miles to look at you and shake you by the hand."

"So?" said August, bending forward.

"You keep on driving that brewery wagon," said Martin, "and what does it get you? Fifteen dollars a week. That's all. Nobody will ever hear of you. Owgust Limbock! Who's he? Nobody will know. But if you stick to me and do as I tell you, I'll make you known even in the old country. And then you can travel and see things—go around the world, if you want to."

Well, that was the argument which landed Lembach. Money and the things which money would buy he did not seem to care for; easy living left him cold. But fame? That was another matter, and the sleepy eyes awoke. For every Achilles there is a tendon, and it takes an Irishman to find it.

Matters were speedily arranged. August was to quit his job at the brewery and go into training. Garrity guaranteed him $15 a week during the period of preparation. When the giant had been sufficiently instructed matches were to be made, and not for nothing had Martin Garrity been an ornament to the welterweight division in a day when real welters were going about the country. He knew how to make matches—none better—and he was thoroughly conversant with the best methods of nursing along a "comer." By a spectacular string of victories over his opponents of little worth, Martin knew that he would be able to bring his protégé to the point where the top flight heavyweights could not overlook him.

A month after the original conversation between Shaughnessy and Garrity a second confab took place.

"Well," said Tim, "an' how does he shape up now, this Dutch slob of yours?"

"You'll call him no names if you wish to be friendly with me!" said Martin, heatedly. "Owgust is no slob, I'll have you know, Shaughnessy. He's a fine boy, and that simple and obedient you wouldn't believe it at all. I've had no trouble with him, and the way he picks up boxin' is amazing. And work? Owgust would work all day if I didn't make him lay off!"

"And ye think he has the makin's of a champion in him?" demanded Shaughnessy.

"Tim," said Garrity, solemnly, "I've never lied to you, have I? Well, now! Owgust will be the next heavyweight champion of the world. If I don't believe it, may I never get off this chair alive!"

"Ye should know," said Tim. "Ye've seen enough of them, but 'tis a pity he hasn't more of the real fightin' timperamint!"

Three weeks later Martin Garrity called on his friend McGee, the owner of the Queensberry club, where boxing encounters were staged weekly.

"Patrick," said Martin, "I have a heavyweight that I think is a comer. Do you reach out and get me some bum for him to fight next Friday evening."

"How much do ye want?"

"Anything you like, to begin with," said Garrity, "but be sure to get me a soft one."

"Very well," said McGee. "How would Sandow Mulligan do? He's the softest big man in these parts, and he's got a glass jaw. By the way, what's the name of your man, so I can tell the newspaper boys?"

Garrity hesitated. Lembach is no name for a fighter, and Martin knew it.

"Call him 'Sledgehammer' Garrity!" said Martin. "It's a good fightin' name." Thus August received his nom de guerre, and protested bitterly. It seemed that he had a fancy for making the name of Lembach famous.

"No, no," argued Martin. "They would be callin' you 'Limburger,' an' 'The Big Cheese,' an' all manner of names like that. But they will not trifle with 'Garrity,' and sure a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, but anything with a cheese flavor to it would smell bad. D'ye see?"

McGee was as good as his word. Sandow Mulligan was, indeed, a very soft one.

When the bell rang, August walked to the middle of the ring, ducked a left lead for the face, sent his own left crashing into the pit of Mulligan's stomach, and, as Sandow bent forward, whipped the right across to the jaw. That was all there was to August's first fight—that and the doctor's bill, for Sandow Mulligan's glass jaw was broken.

"A knockout in twenty-one seconds!" said the ringside reporters. "That's going some! Who is this Sledgehammer Garrity, anyway?"

Thus launched into the pugilistic arena, August advanced by leaps and bounds. He stopped Timothy McTurk, Andrew McMillen, "Tex" Morrissey, and "Beef" Hogan, all in a round apiece, and always it was the crashing right hand slam to the jaw which ended the fight. "Gravy" Gavigan, who was clever, managed to stay two rounds, and the town went wild over Martin Garrity's protégé.

Martin Garrity sharpened his scythe to reap the rewards of wisdom and experience. August became a drawing card, and, from fighting preliminaries, leaped into the main event class. Martin skillfully maneuvered the price until August's end amounted to a thousand dollars per performance, of which the fighter received his fair half.

"Five hundred for you," said Martin, "and five hundred for me. Didn't I tell you that if you stuck with me you'd wear diamonds? And that ain't a marker to what we'll be raking in one of these fine days!"

Now, about the same time that August Lembach began to attract attention a giant Negro won his first fight in a neighboring state and followed it with a string of victories over pork and bean heavyweights. The Negro's name was Dan Churchill, and he had been discovered, sweeping out saloons, by an exceedingly crafty young man named Gilman—Pete Gilman. The name of Dan Churchill began to go abroad, and Pete Gilman, being something of a press agent, at once introduced the question of the color line.

"Would the Big Fellow fight a Negro?" The Big Fellow maintained silence. Of all the new material in the heavyweight class, there were only two men to be considered—Sledgehammer Garrity, with his string of speedy knockouts, and Dan Churchill, with the scalps of yet other pork-and-beaners at his belt. The clamor grew; sporting writers began to agitate the question of an elimination match between the men. Martin Garrity made a trip of 500 miles to interview no less a personage than the Big Fellow himself.

"Will you give us a fight if we win?" he demanded.

"Lick the coon, and then come and talk to me," said the Big Fellow, speaking out of the side of his mouth.

"That's good enough for me," said Martin.

The newspapers continued to scream and the fight fans to rave. August Lembach, with a first class heavyweight as a sparring partner, worked behind closed doors until such time as Garrity was satisfied. Suddenly he issued a challenge to Churchill, the match to take place before the club offering the best inducements. Five cities contested for that honor, and, after the usual backing and filling, the papers were signed and the men went into training for the event. Pete Gilman, who was very much present at every conference, studied Sledgehammer Garrity narrowly before he unburdened himself to his black fighter.

"Here, bo," he said to Churchill, the day the articles were signed, "this fellow is a Dutchman. Never let it be said that you can't lick a Dutchman. An Irishman and a coon—that's a battle, but a coon and a Dutchman—that's murder!"

Nevertheless, with the thoroughness of a real general, Pete Gilman employed a furtive youth named "Bud" McManus to linger about the rival camp and report discoveries. Martin Garrity had selected a cottage half a mile beyond the cemetery for his training quarters. There were flowers in the garden and fruit trees in the back yard, and August smiled when he saw the place.

After three days, Bud McManus made his first report to Gilman.

"This fellow is no boob," said he. "You'll make a mistake if you think so. I saw him poke that big sparring partner of his in the stomach and double him up like a knife, and he's got a right cross for the jaw that would knock a mule off his feet. Better tell Dan to get used to hunching his left shoulder pretty high or this bird will cop him on the jaw, and the dinge ain't exactly made of iron, you know. You remember how he hollered when McLaughlin nailed him on the point that time? He don't like 'em any too well, you know, and you oughtn't to take chances."

"Then you think he's dangerous?"

"Any guy," said McManus, "with a kick like this Dutchman is dangerous. And it's a funny thing about him, too; if you saw him loafing about the place you wouldn't take him for a fighter. He's one of those melancholy Dutchmen; give him a week of cloudy weather and there's no tellin' what he'd do. He never laughs and he never talks much, and, when he's through with his work he goes out and sits on the porch alone and looks at the scenery. He was out there two hours yesterday, and he never opened his mouth once."

"Hm-m-m," said Gilman. "Melancholy, is he? Well, we'll give him something to be melancholy about!"

"All the same," persisted McManus, "you better tell that coon to keep his shoulder up over his left ear if he don't want to get his black block tore off. I'm telling you!"

Gilman sat for ten minutes, fingering his watch charm and smiling to himself. When he spoke, it was not of fighters.

"Bud," said he, suddenly, "do you remember that awful tall, thin coon who was around here the first day?"

"You mean old Sad-face Sam?"

Gilman nodded.

"Bud," said he, "I want you to find him and send him out here. I think I've got a job for him."

The date of the grand elimination contest drew near. Another week and the matter would be decided one way or the other. Martin Garrity was as sanguine of victory as if the long end of the purse had already been paid into his hands. He had heard that Churchill was a wide open sort of a fighter, and rumor had not credited the black man with a brass bound jaw.

"One wallop, Owgust, my son," Martin would say, "and, after that, the match with the Big Feller."

"And then we go traveling," said August, dreamily. "Vienna and Berlin and Dresden——"

"Huh!" said Garrity. "What's the matter with Paris?"

The somber equipage drew abreast of the house, and then, for the first time, August noticed the driver—an immensely tall, cadaverous looking man in a black frock coat and an old fashioned stovepipe hat.

As if in answer to August's scrutiny, the tall man moodily. "Yesterday he rammed me of my training. But that was when I'd been some time in the game. We'll have to kid this feller along and keep him cheerful."

"A swell chance!" said the sparring partner, moodily. "Yesterday he rammed me of my training. But that was when I'd been some time in the game. We'll have to kid this feller along and keep him cheerful."

"Seem lak to me," he remarked to Pete Gilman, "as if that Dutch boy ain't happy this evenin'. He shook hands all right, but his hand was as cole as a lizard's tail. Pete, you reckon he's nu'Vous?"

"Shouldn't wonder," said Gilman. "Hurry

SPICE

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

SYNOPSIS.

Sydney Penfold Isham Chester Elting, whose initials won for him at school the obvious nickname, Spice, comes back to America expecting to find it a dull place after his adventures as an aviator in France. Before he has been home two days, however, things begin to happen. From the studio in which he has taken temporary quarters he sees three men breaking into the home of Bernardo Aria, a famous financier. He helps Aria shoot down the marauders, who prove to be emissaries of a band of anarchists against whom the financier is secretly operating on behalf of the government, and on volunteering his aid in the fight is engaged to pilot Aria on trips to Washington by airplane. Then Spice encounters Marcia Briggs, his newly acquired step-sister. His father, an admiral, married a widow while his son was in France, a proceeding which Spice resents bitterly, but Marcia's breezy camaraderie proves hard to resist. And to complicate matters further, Spice finds himself much interested in Aria's beautiful daughter, Esther. Meanwhile, the conspirators meet at a dive known as the 101 club and make new plans for the murder of Aria, delegating one of their number, a scoundrel named Johnson, to get a job as steward on the Elting yacht, which the financier frequently visits. Spice is invited to the Arias' country home near New York, where Dr. Adrian Isaacs, Aria's chief aide initiates him into the mysteries of an elaborate system of dictaphones by which every part of the house and grounds is guarded. While testing the apparatus for Spice's benefit, Isaacs hears one of the Aria chauffeurs tell of an attempt to get him to visit the 101 club. Some weeks later the Elting yacht arrives for a visit, with the Eltings and Marcia aboard.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT.

At the Hangar.

AS Marcia was dressing for dinner at the Arias' Mrs. Elting came into her room. If, as maintained by some theorists, one may predict the future physical qualities of a girl of 20 by an inspection of her mother at 40, then Marcia's numerous suitors had no just cause for anxiety.

Mrs. Elting was a tall, handsome woman who in her youth had been the acknowledged belle of a tract of grazing country about the size of France. The fact that at that time its feminine population might not have exceeded that of Bordeaux or Brest would have made no particular difference. Leaving the matter of costume out of the question (which as every man and no woman will admit is the only fair viewpoint from which to judge) she could not only have held her own anywhere but even raided that of other women had it been her pleasure, which it never was.

From her girlhood she had been adept at all western ladies' outdoor sports. She could ride any eastern hobby imported and dismount when she chose without breaking anything, could throw the lasso with her eyes shut and walk through the loop, throw and hogtie and brand any rider of the plains without getting kicked or singed. At 17 she galloped away from the ranch of her millionaire father (who was under the wrong impression that she was too young to wed) to marry a penniless young prospector who justified her faith in his star by stubbing his toe almost immediately on an outcrop of rich ore.

Marcia had the singular experience of being born an heiress in a 'dobe hut. For a number of months events moved up so rapidly that the beautiful young matron whose father had refused to hear her name mentioned, and whose husband could scarcely leave her long enough to go down his burrow and whack off a few thousand dollars with a sledge, was washing her baby's clothes on the shady side of a dump assayed at about a quarter of a million. Eventually the railroad spur connected with it and conditions were radically changed. The little family made a running jump from the 'dobe hut to the most costly suite in the most costly hotel on the Pacific slope, and from that time on it seemed to Sylvia Briggs, by nature strongly domestic, that they were jumping most of the time. A theatrical stock company could scarcely have outskipped them. Briggs became a promoter of mining, railroad, irrigation, and other propositions, all money making concerns, and was kept constantly on the move, wife and daughter always accompanying him.

They lived for varying periods east and west and middle, in Canada, in England for three years at one time, and a little over a year at two others. The result of this was that the domestic life for which Marcia's mother had always longed never came to happen. Being never identified with any one place for any length of time, she scarcely knew what to answer when asked where she lived, and after a number of years had passed Sylvia Briggs realized with a pang of despair that she and her husband had entirely lost touch with their small circle of early friends while failing to replace them with any permanent new ones.

It was a peculiar situation and one typically of western America, where one rarely finds a family living in the habitation of its grandparents. Here was an affectionate domestic triangle, father, mother, and child, homeless, practically friendless, scarcely known in any general locality, and which had lived for the last fifteen years at the rate of somewhere between fifty and a hundred thousand dollars a year, which was well within Briggs' income. He was a natural born money maker and perhaps Destiny, recognizing this fact, thought that he might as well have it first as last and unkindly let him stub his toe against his gold mine.

Behold the result. If they had spent a quarter of their yearly revenue in two places, a summer and winter home, they would have established kinsmanly and social relations and no doubt political ones, for Briggs was magnetic and masterful, with the gifts of a leader. Probably there would have been other children. Sylvia Briggs could have acquired some actual social finish instead of the superficial travel polish which a courier might gain, while Marcia's education must have had a sound academic basis instead of the joblot, fragmentary sort which it actually was. As Sylvia was wont to say, she would have felt like a real person instead of the fly by night adventuress which she was often forced to feel herself.

Thus when Briggs, a hard liver in a steady sort of way, succumbed to pneumonia in New York, his widow felt almost a sense of relief at being finally able to settle down. She had always hated the roving life which had been the breath of her husband's badly treated lungs. During this time her father had died and left the bulk of his millions to Marcia. There had been a reconciliation of sorts, and Marcia had visited him upon the big ranch which he would never leave. Then the war had come and they had gone to Washington, where in the suddenly augmented population of "floaters" they had found themselves curiously at home. Mrs. Briggs had set her teeth and purchased a handsome residence on Massachusetts avenue near the Sheridan circle. She had by this time reached a frame of mind where the purchase of a plot in the cemetery would have been a comforting investment, but shortly after meeting Admiral Elting she felt rather differently about it.

The admiral represented precisely what her soul craved. This courtly and distinguished gentleman with his honored name, quiet, polished manners, erudition, and solid social foundation looked to Sylvia Briggs like the capitol or the monument or the Metropolitan club or such other long established national institution, and she knew that to him she herself did not look like the mint, as she had to a good many other men. Briggs had been then four years deceased. And so they were married.

Then came Spice, who acted much as his father had foreseen, though rather more so. It was his anticipation of this which had kept the admiral from writing of his prospective marriage. He had discovered that Sylvia was extremely sensitive about her lack of identification with any particular place and people and knew that while Spice's unfriendly attitude might not actually prevent her marriage it was still bound to hurt and rouse her resentment. The admiral had hoped that his dearly loved son might cheerfully make the best of what was already accomplished.

This Spice had actually done, though it was rather a poor best. On his first air journey to Washington with Mr. Aria he had duly paid his respects, dined with his father and stepmother (Marcia had gone to a dinner party), and left at 10 o'clock on the plea of not knowing just what moment Mr. Aria might wish to start on the homeward flight. On three subsequent trips he had called each time at the house, but declined to spend the night, and by some strange hazard Marcia had been away from home each time.

From being hurt, Mrs. Elting had grown angry at his behavior. The kind treatment received from her husband's family and friends was reassuring her and she thought Spice an insufferable young snob, though she had not said so to anybody, not even to her daughter, who had made no secret of the boy's attraction for her. Liking Spice or disliking him, Mrs. Elting would have been glad to see the two make a match of it. Her horror of an unattached existence was almost an obsession. The poor woman with all her wealth had been starved of intimate human intercourse. One can thus understand her willingness to remarry the kindly Admiral Elting, who when all is said was really young for his 60 years and very much of a man.

"Well, my dear," said she to Marcia, "you seem to be getting on pretty well with the spoiled child of my old age."

Marcia powdered the tip of a nose which like the eye of an eagle could look undaunted at the sun. "Don't bother about Spice, Mammy. He's going to pay for all his youthful Alexander airs. I haven't grown up a hotel pest and steamship disturber for nothing."

"Is that what he calls you? He ought to have his ears boxed."

"He has." Marcia teased an auburn curl into a flirtation with a pink ear tip. "It wasn't for calling me that, though. He asked me to remember that we were dining tonight with people whose ancestors had been paying the income tax when ours were dragging their women into their caves by the hair."

"Well, did I ever hear the like! Sydney had better not try to give you any tips on polite behavior. His sisters have told me what a young rowdy he was before the war."

"His sisters make me tired," Marcia said. "The meanest thing a woman can do is to knock her brother."

"Well, they don't mind doing it. Muriel is jealous of Spice's war record because her own husband sidestepped. He was just above draft age and makes steampipes or something. When we were lunching at the Ritz the other day Mrs. Howard asked her what Spice was doing, and she answered: 'Oh, he's chauffeur or sky pilot or something for some rich people down on Field Point.' A nice sisterly remark, wasn't it? I've no reason to be crazy about Sydney, but I did think that was pretty raw."

"Their trouble is that their tongues and their brains are not on the same circuit. Anyhow, it would take an expert rifleman to shoot Muriel through the brain at ten paces. Any fool could guess what Spice's job amounts to."

"Don't be so sweeping dear. Do you mean

Marcia had the singular experience of bei that he's in love with Esther Aria?"

"The God of Israel forbid. He may be, for all I know. If he is, though, he'll have not only Jehovah but Mr. Aria to contend with. But that's not his job." Marcia tried the effect of a jeweled side-comb, then discarded it. "Can't you put two and two together, Mammy? Just at this moment Aria is the David that's gone up against the bolshevik Goliath. They mean to get him if they can before he lets drive with his sling. Spice is riding herd over him. So is Ben-Hur, I imagine."

Mrs. Elting's blue eyes opened very wide. "Good heavens, Marcia—you mean that he's a bodyguard?"

"Of course he is. You don't suppose that Spice would take an ordinary pilot's job. He flies Mr. Aria down to Washington every week and then does a sentry-go around him while there. That's the reason for his never staying over night at the house. I'll bet if you were to run your hand over Spice's person tonight at dinner you'd find a gun or two—and Ben-Hur, too."

"Mercy me! Do you think the admiral's in danger?"

"I don't believe so, Mammy. If they'd have wanted him they'd have managed it before this." She turned her head as if to listen. "Who's that out there?"

There came a discreet rap upon the door and a smooth voice said in the whining tone ascribed to those born within sound of the Bow Bells: "The h'admiral's compliments, m'lady, and the launch is waiting."

"Very well, Johnson. Say we're coming."

"Thank you, m'lady."

Through the skylight they heard the voice of being born an heiress in a 'dobe hut.

of a quartermaster: "Eight bells, sir," and the crisp tones of Admiral Elting: "Make it so." A moment later the bells were struck: ding-ding, ding-ding, ding-ding, ding-ding. Marcia rose, threw a tulle veil over her ruddy hair, and looked at her mother with a smile. "I like all this with the exception of one detail," said she.

"What's that, dear?"

"That steward, Johnson. Somehow the man gives me the creeps. He's got such cold, fishy eyes, and the way he goes slithering around. He's like a bad genie. You don't see him anywhere and the first you know he's at your elbow with his nasty whine and something you don't want. It gets on my nerves."

"Nonsense. You haven't any. I find him a very good servant and he came highly recommended."

"Well, you'd have to go to heaven or some place to look up the recommendation. Oh, I suppose he's all right. Come along, Mammy. We're under navy discipline now."

They got into the launch, followed by Admiral Elting, who, according to etiquette, was always the last to leave his vessel and the first to go aboard her. Dr. Isaacs and Spice were waiting for them at the landing and they walked up to the house where they were met by Esther and Mr. Aria.

Mrs. Elting approved of the Aria household and felt its charm, especially when she happened to observe a large framed photograph of a group in which she recognized King Edward VII, a royal princess, a lady in waiting, and her present host in conversation on a superb sweep of lawn with a stately palace in the background. It was an informal picture and the portraits were excellent. Mrs. Elting commented on this fact.

"Yes," said Mr. Aria, "the king was kind enough to send me that souvenir. I had the honor to be his guest for several days at Sandringham."

A manservant approached Mrs. Elting and offered her a small object wrapped in tissue paper. It proved to be her lorgnette, which she had overlooked.

"Your steward brought it, madam," said he, and Mrs. Elting happening at that moment to glance at Dr. Isaacs wondered at the expression of intense annoyance which crossed his handsome face.

. . . . . .

Aboard the steam yacht Sylvia, Steward Johnson found himself in considerable perplexity of mind, and when a week had passed with no developments of any interest to himself this potential assassin grew almost desperate.

After the peremptory order issued by Admiral Elting that none of the yacht's personnel was to set foot on the Aria estate, Johnson took to studying the grounds surreptitiously with strong binoculars through an open porthole. The result of this espionage was such as to render the idea of a nocturnal visit extremely distasteful. He observed the watchman Connors and the police dogs circulating the premises in the gloaming, and Johnson knew enough about these canine protectors to realize that a prowler could not get far unmolested. He was also well aware that their appetites were not susceptible to temptation by any choice tidbit, however succulent—that the first important detail in the training of a chien policier was to inhibit their touching any article of food or drink not tendered them by the hand of authority. He had read in an article on the subject that many of them were so highly intelligent, one might almost say imaginative, that from early adult life they actually required no instruction whatever in this respect.

Johnson's cunning brain suggested the well known French apache trick of luring the dogs away from their beat through that almost irresistible instinct, the mating one. He thought also of having a confederate enter the grounds under pretext of selling a brace of fighting bull terriers and accidentally loosing their leashes, when they might manage to kill or maim the police dogs. Both of these schemes had to be dismissed, partly because the canine guardians were a pair and partly because it was by no means certain that the bull terriers could make away with them.

Being no fanatical devotee of anarchy with unselfish though mistaken ideas nor a sinister soul ready to run any risk for the lust of killing, but merely a low grade brave of whom the sole motive was money, Johnson had no intention of taking any chances with his own hide. First and last he was in the murderous business for himself. He would not have hesitated to betray the plot to Mr. Aria and sacrifice his confederates but for two inhibiting reasons. The first was that in so doing he doubted that he would ever die of old age, and in the second something told him that Aria's policy was based on that of Pinckney, "millions for defense but not a cent for tribute," and the steward did not believe that he would be richly rewarded.

Then came fresh disappointment. Johnson had been sure that sooner or later Mr. Aria would lunch or dine aboard the yacht and had his poison mushrooms in readiness. But nothing of the sort occurred. The cautious Dr. Isaacs had been most unfavorably impressed by the steward's general type and although unable to discover anything positively incriminating about the man had told Admiral Elting in frank confidence that as lifeguard-in-chief he had decided on a sweeping régime that Mr. Aria, until his work was finished, should not partake of any food except that subjected to close examination or eaten in some place where his refreshment was unanticipated.

Johnson may have suspected this precaution and despaired of carrying out his murderous design. But in the meantime something had happened which set him on a different train of thought. Studying the grounds through his glasses late one evening, he observed a sudden activity about the hangar. Then the swift chasse machine was wheeled out and rolled across the lawn to its farther and upper limits. Almost immediately two figures, which he identified as Mr. Aria and young Elting, appeared, both despite the heat being bulkily costumed and hooded and masked as for a lofty altitude. They quickly took their places when the pilot Oakes started the motor and the light machine sped down across the wide declivity of sloping lawn, rose easily, planed off across the water toward the Long Island shore, where it took a quick ascent, banked, and skimmed swiftly away to melt in the haze to the southward. It returned in about an hour and a half, just before dark, and the steward overheard the admiral telling the sailing master, Larsen, that Mr. Aria had been suffering from an attack of asthma and gone up into the high air in search of relief.

But two mornings later, just before the dawn, Johnson heard again the thrum of the departing airplane and this time it returned shortly after daylight twenty-four hours later. Said the steward to himself: "'E's been tykin' the 'igh air of the Potomac valley this time." And set himself to study ways and means, which had no relation to toadstools.

Johnson's brain was tricky rather than ingenious, but he was useful with his hands and he had heard described and read in a treatise on sabotage issued to members of the 101 club the simpler methods for making a death trap of an airplane in less than five minutes. Such procedure, in fact, whether applied to aircraft, motor cars, boats, or any other form of conveyance, would scarcely need any explanation to the person of ordinary intelligence equipped with a few simple tools.

The idea struck the steward like a flash from hell, making his toadstool scheme appear clumsy, inexact, diffuse, and altogether medieval. It would be the easiest thing in the world to put in execution if he could only get access to the machine. But while the proposition was simple the preposition loomed appalling in size. It often does.

In the first place, the pilot, Oakes, had his quarters in the hangar, which in the daytime was visible from all about, while at night there were also the watchman and his dogs. It might be quite possible to evade these long enough to do the job, as the hangar was on the edge of the rocky bank, opening in front to free the hydroplane which descended on a slide, or set of ways, and in the rear to release the airplanes on the lawn. One could go directly up to it by boat.

But knowing the vigilance of Isaacs, or, rather, suspecting it, Johnson doubted that the hangar was ever left unguarded except at mealtimes, when Oakes went to the "noncom's mess," as Isaacs not ineptly called it. The steward had observed Oakes leaving the place every day at 12:30, sometimes returning within the hour, sometimes remaining longer absent. He surmised that the young man must be making a course of study along the lines of his profession, as light shone from his window, which was on one side, often until late into the night. This was indeed the case, Mr. Aria having advised Oakes to prepare himself for such a position as he might offer him later in the air transportation scheme in which he was interested.

All of this was infuriating to Johnson, especially as he expected any day that the yacht might leave for a short cruise to the eastward, Newport, and Bar Harbor. The steward could not see how merely waiting was going to get him any nearer to his object, his imagination not being quite up to suggesting how this might be brought about. The committee of which he was at that moment the active agent was getting impatient and spurred on none too gently from headquarters had given Johnson but another week in which at least to make some attempt. He had reported his plan and its difficulties and been exhorted to get around these latter in some way or other, or else tender his resignation as inefficient. And with that went all hope of a fortune which might set him up for life.

But that "everything comes to him who waits" applies also to the criminal, and the opportunity for which Johnson might have waited if he had been foreminded came most unexpectedly in a day of dense white fog. Still better (though he might have got leave on some pretext) there was no cabin luncheon to be served that day, the admiral and Mrs. Elting having gone to one of the admiral's daughters, while Marcia was lunching at the Arias'.

Johnson decided to act. He had already provided himself with the requisite accessories and going to the sailing-master he asked permission to take the dinghy and go ashore, saying that he would like to row himself. This was of course accorded.

"Take care you don't get lost," said the skipper, jokingly. "It's t'ick as pea soup."

"No bloomin' fear, sir," Johnson answered. "I'm a Londoner."

He went over the side and got into the boat wearing a long raincoat which hid his bulging pockets. The fog was a dense white fluff such as the sun usually burns up by noon in midsummer. But this one persisted as though it might last out the day and so heavy was the vapor that it blotted out objects at a distance of a hundred yards.

Johnson had timed his departure a little after Oakes' dinner hour. Picking up the oars, he pulled away in the direction of the yacht club until the Sylvia had disappeared, when he changed his course to a little less than a right angle, heading for the shore close to the hangar. His calculation was accurate and he made his landfall presently so closely that he could see the vague outline of the big, low structure. The tide was on the ebb, about half out, and Johnson, making fast his painter to a rock, stood for a moment listening. Hearing no sound in the immediate vicinity, he made his way as silently as possible over the broken stones and shingles and approached the hangar from in front.

As the steward had feared, the place was securely locked. Going cautiously around to the side, he found that the two windows of the pilot's room were secured by the ordinary fasteners and one of them, the new sash swelled by the dampness, had refused to close entirely so that the clamp had no purchase. This struck Johnson as a bit of luck, as he dared make no noise for fear of the dogs, and also it would have been fatal to his plan to leave the slightest evidence of forcible entry.

Even as it was, he had some difficulty in opening the window. The conscientious Oakes had tried his best to jam it snug, though he had not carried this precaution to the extent of sawing a window-stick when he found it impossible to turn the clamp. No doubt he reasoned that nobody could force it open anyhow without smashing the sash. The steward achieved it, however, with his crate opener and managed not to sear it noticeably. A moment later he was inside.

As a thief of some slight experience, his first act was to open the small door, which fastened by a spring lock. In the event of a surprise he meant to say that while rowing ashore he had got off his bearings in the fog and fetching up at the hangar and seeing the door ajar he had stepped in to ask if he might borrow a compass—a flimsy pretext, perhaps, but with plausibility enough to save him rough handling or arrest.

Standing for a moment to listen and hearing nothing, the steward got to work, choosing as the object of his first attentions the chasse machine which showed signs of recent usage. With a fine file he had just started to nick a forestay close to the turnbuckle when the faint light from the open door was obscured and he straightened with a start to find himself facing a square figure in flannels and looking into the muzzle of an automatic pistol.

"Hands up, Johnson!" said the vibrant voice of Dr. Isaacs.

Evening Dress Is Fancy Dress by Corinne Lowe

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—And now in truth do the butterflies of present fashions come out of the moth balls of the past. Evening clothes are an historical medley. Go to any formal party nowadays and you find a dozen echoes of departed pageantry. On the same floor you will identify these varying modes.

Broadly speaking, there are two distinct movements in evening clothes, the classic and the crinoline. But these two often become fused, and there are so many ways of going about an evening dress nowadays that the lay mind is bewildered. Classic draperies pucker impishly into panniers, all sorts of tunics interpose between us and a complete Bagdad metamorphosis, a hundred trimmings diversify regularity of line. Altogether, we sometimes feel that Puck is the leading dressmaker of the time.

One general rule may be given. The bodice of the new evening dress is simple and the skirt is complex; whether it be the quaint, tight fitting little waist which goes with the crinoline skirt or the bodice which introduces the classic skirt, both are slighted in comparison with the skirt. Looking at these new evening frocks, I often feel that the skimpy little waist looks above its furbished and intricate skirt exactly like some tiny bungalow overlooking the grounds of an English manor.

I have said the bodice is slighted in comparison with the skirt. I will go even farther. I will say it is slight. Often it is a single band held up by one or two shoulder straps. And when it does get started on being a regular bodice, the scissors start such a campaign against it back and front that little save the skeleton remains. Particularly in the back, where the deep V is still the favorite Paris way of doing things, the work of corsage extermination is almost complete.

As an evidence of this creed, we point to the gown at the left. What would become of that metallic green cloth which undertakes to be a bodice were it not for the assistance of the silver lace over the shoulders? Of course, this corsage is not so blameworthy, for most of its efforts have been directed to where below the girdle it stretches out over a wire to suspend that tunic of silver lace.

This, as you see, is an evening frock after the crinoline manner. It will probably be worn all winter, but its chief activities will be among the young and the slender. The older woman who is wise will cling to the clinging modes. Yet in color effect and line this frock is really so lovely that it forms a temptation to those of us who ought to know better. As we have said, the corsage is of metallic cloth in Nile green, and this is perfectly stunning in combination with the silver lace of tunic and underskirt and sleeves. The last effective touch comes from the narrow yellow ribbon about the waist line ending in flowers of pale yellow and green and silver.

Embroidery, beads, rhinestones—above all, rhinestones—jet, flowers, fruits, fur, and feathers are among the notes of trimming sounded in the evening motif. Sometimes, too, the note becomes a chord. Two of these notes are sounded together, as when single flues of ostrich are caught all over the surface of a satin frock by sparkling drops of rhinestones.

Almost as daring as this effect is the one which we picture in the center of this page. Enter the cave woman, the brave woman! For instead of fur drop skirt we have a skirt made up entirely of rows of coral ostrich which are affixed to a bodice of coral velvet embroidered in a motif of gold in the front and finished by a scarf of self-colored tulle. It sounds aboriginal, yet so lovely is the color of this dress and so wonderful the effect of that accumulated ostrich that it doesn't look so awful as it sounds.

Along with panniers are all manner of tunics and panels. Frequently the latter are irregular. On the left hand a fold of tulle may dive far down below the panel on the right side. Sometimes, too, the skirt is covered by pointed panels of sheer material of irregular lengths.

Among all these extravagances of the mode—many of them wonderfully beautiful, wonderfully filled with the spirit of bygone pageantry—it is always pleasant to come to a gown such as we show at the right. For, while bending to the mode, it is not subservient to it. It is the sort of wearable, charming frock which makes the average woman feel that her life is not an utter failure. This is of black satin under black tulle which is shown with jet beads, weighted by jet tassels, and embroidered in the same glittering black upon the corsage.

A Lesson for Him.

A Moving Tale.

Laddie is an old dear, but fifteen years have thrown upon him a rather confining collie dignity, to which he usually sacrifices even the rigors of canine tradition. Yet there are some occasions when duty overpowers, and more especially there was the other evening.

Just after sundown he lay at the foot of the front steps biting at an inquisitorial flea, waving his tail a shade languidly, and trying to adumbrate the appearance of an Art Institute lion without standing up. Across the lawn promenaded a cat, doubtful of color and indeterminate of age and breed.

Laddie raised his eyes and dropped his tail; Laddie raised his tail and dropped his eyes; he hunted desperately for the flea, looking a bit troubled. On came the cat. Away hopped the flea. Post hoc, sed non ergo propter hoc. Lad closed his eyes and went on biting nothing.

A slight atmospheric tension, frequent but not prolonged fulminations, an explosion! Our enemy was strolling blissfully down the walk. Bounding with half hearted rage, Laddie found himself set tablelike over the intruder. Behold a hissing, arching, spitting cat, looking up inquiringly: "Well, what are you going to do about it?"

Laddie stands, glances up for help, glances back for help, looks down interrogatively: "Well, what am I going to do about it?" Laughter from the porch—the situation is intensely comic.

Growing embarrassment on both sides. Lad has probably never been so near to a strange cat before. He notes a startling resemblance to Gypt, his friend and household companion. Then he slips around the corner of the house with his tail between his legs. Diabolic laughter. M. M.

Not Her Steady.

My steady phoned me he would call for me that evening, saying we would go to some good show, and asked me which one I preferred. Not having any special one in mind just then, I told him I would think it over and tell him when he came.

That evening when the door bell rang, supposing it was my steady, I opened the door and grabbed him by the arm, the while saying, "Say, there's a peachy show on at the Grand; let's go there."

Stepping into the light I found myself hanging onto the new minister, who was making his first call at our house. Needless to say I did not attend church for several Sundays. A. D.

My Experience with a Burglar

Made It Hot for Him.

Some time ago there was a burglar scare in our town, but it soon died down and we forgot all about it.

One evening I hurried down cellar to fix the furnace before going to a "hen party" and as I hustled into the dimly lit furnace room I tripped over a man's foot and nearly fell. I saw a small man dodge behind the door and I was so angry over my near fall I never thought of being frightened.

We have a hose attached to the hot water heater for filling the water compartment and I grabbed that and turned it full force on the man. He stood his ground for a minute, but as the water became hotter he ran for the door. I am afraid he was scalded before he got out of the cellar.

Then I fixed the fire and went upstairs and had a spell of "nerves."

H. R.

In and Out.

I always slept alone in a downstairs room, having for company only my dog. It was on Sunday night and I was ready to retire. Calling old Spot, my dog, I went into my room and immediately closed the door.

I had no more than become settled and ready to sleep when I heard some one in the living room moving around among the Sunday papers, which were strewn on the floor. Knowing that the family were all upstairs, I felt a little funny.

The person then moved again, and I began to think it was time for me to do something, though I didn't have anything in mind that I was the least desirous of doing. I had an automatic pistol in the room, but I thought it wouldn't hurt to await developments for a while longer.

However, as the noise continued, I could stand it no longer. I got up, found the pistol, and called the dog—no answering tail tap on the floor. I called louder; still no response. Then as I heaved a sigh of relief I knew. That dog had walked right in and as I was turning on the light had walked right out again. And my burglar proved to be my faithful old dog hunting a bed in the papers. R W

PATTERNS by CLOTILDE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

9475—Woman's house dress with vest and back shoulder edges extending over the gathered fronts. The sleeves may be in long or short length and the two piece gathered skirt has a regulation waistline.

9450—Woman's dress in sizes 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 36 inch material and ⅜ yard of contrasting for collar. The lower edge measures about 2 yards.

9480—Woman's waist closing at the left side front and with collar in either of two styles. It comes in sizes 36 to 44 inches bust measure.

How to Use the Patterns

If you have any question relating to sewing that you would like to have answered write to Clotilde, Chicago Tribune, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

AN unusually pretty design for a house dress is No. 9475, with the vest, collar, belt, cuffs, and pocket facings made of a contrasting material. Made up in plain or figured percale or gingham with the contrasting material, a rather fine ribbed white pique will make it most attractive.

The vest pieces should be lined, preferably with the same material, the outside and lining laid with the two right sides together and stitched in a narrow seam on the front edges. Turn the lining right side out over the seam, baste down close to the edge, and press well before pinning it in position on the fronts.

In putting the shoulder seams together, hold the front towards you always. The fullness on the fronts at the shoulders is a desirable feature, and particularly good for slight figures. Be sure and keep the fullness between the notches indicated on the pattern. If spread too near neck or armhole the fronts do not set well.

No. 9450 is suitable for any material one may desire. These first snappy days make the idea of some one of the lovely woolen cloths agreeable but unless one is quite experienced it is safer not to select anything with a decided nap such as broadcloth, velvet, etc. Serge, poplin, crepe, tricotine, challis, and similar materials are easier to handle and make up prettily.

If you are using a material that looks about alike on the right and wrong sides, so it is hard to always tell which is which, hold the cloth over the arm, so that both sides show, and hold the arm on a level with the eye. A difference can readily be seen in this way, as in the weaving, if there come rough places in the threads they are thrown to the wrong side, while the right side will have a perfect surface.

In serge or any other diagonal weave the diagonal runs always from the right corner at the bottom up towards the left. Hold a length of serge up to you and look down at it; if it is right side out the diagonal will start on the right hand edge and run up towards the left. You may then turn the cloth the other way around so that the end you held towards your neck is at your feet, and the diagonal will still run the same way, but turn it the other side out, and the diagonal will run the other way—from the left at the bottom up towards the right. Hence it can be seen that in cutting it is important to cut all pieces with the same side out, but an up and down does not have to be observed.

The sleeve in No. 9450 has a good feature in the darts or plaits at the elbow. After laying them and basting the sleeve seam together, try the sleeve on to see if the elbow fullness is coming in the right place for your arm.

The four pointed cuff is a pretty variation from the usual finish, and not hard to make. It should be finished before putting on the sleeve. Lay it back over the sleeve, so that the right side of sleeve and cuff come together, and pin in position. As the cuff is circular in shape where it sews to the sleeve, the edge will have to be clipped at close intervals after it is stitched on. A bias facing, cut about one and one-half inches wide, should be basted and stitched on with the cuff. Then, after the clipping of the seam is done, let the cuff hang down as it belongs, and, holding the sleeve right side out, put your hand inside the sleeve and lay the facing back over the seam and baste down from the right side close to the seam. The sleeve can then be turned wrong side out, the lower edge of facing slightly stretched and turned in and hemmed down.

A woman can hardly have too many separate blouses, and No. 9480 will be exactly what many women and girls will fancy.

The collar will have to be carefully put on, pinning the middle of the back of both collar and blouse together; then pinning the collar to the right side of the neck. Put a pin or thread on the left side of the neck of the blouse, showing just where the collar must come to on the left side. Then pin the collar to the neck of the blouse from the middle back to the shoulder seam on the left side, and see if the end of the collar is coming exactly to the marking thread. The part of the collar that comes over the left front must be finished with a narrow band about one-half inch wide when finished, and this is fastened to the blouse with a couple of snaps or hooks and eyes.

Where the blouse fastens on the left shoulder the seam on the back should be faced back, and on the front, before stitching the plait or hem down the length of the front, clip it at the shoulder edge exactly on the stitching line, turn the raw edges of the plait in to the shoulder seam line, and overhand in small stitches. Then cover the raw edge of the remainder of the shoulder seam and let the covering or facing extend on the wrong side, so it can be turned in and stitched down exactly on the shoulder seam line.

This may sound pretty complicated, but it really is easy and makes a perfect finish. The front on the shoulder slips under the back on this left side and fastens with two snaps or hooks and eyes, and the plait is left free to lay outside, as it should do. Then the collar hooks in place and with two or three fastenings down the side the blouse is perfectly held together.

Where Time Goes Slowly.

They are not forgotten—those boys who kept our homes safe for us—though sometimes some of them may think they are. There are many of them at the military hospital at Fort Sheridan and some are feeling neglected. They are having a hard time of it because loneliness is not easy to bear when one is suffering as some of these fellows are. To relieve this in a measure some games and phonographs and a piano or two would help. They have a truck up there that would call for any of these musical instruments. So if you have one you would like to let them have you might let me know it could not be put to a better use.

Five Needy Children.

"I should like to ask for help for a needy family of five children, orphans. There are three girls, 16, 9, and 6 years old, and two boys of 13 and 6. They are greatly in need of clothes of all kinds, including underwear. I would gladly mend sweaters for them if some old ones could be given. The two smallest ones cannot go to school for lack of clothes. I will make over any garments given and pay the postage on them. They do need a rug, too, having only a coal stove and bare floors. May I hope for rags or pieces to make a quilt for them? And perhaps, now that Christmas is coming, there may be discarded toys. The youngsters have none. I am not well myself, but I have been doing for them all I could. I feel I must ask for help now so as to know the children are warm for the winter. MRS. M. R."

This is a touching letter. The little family and their true friend need us. Will you help a bit?

Beads for Boys.

"Friends in need you truly are. Some time ago I made a request for beads for our brave, but for the present, helpless boys. How kind Sally Joy Brown has been in giving my address to so many of you, and how welcome have been all the splendid boxes and packages you have sent me! When the beads began to come so fast, I sent a letter saying I had beads by the pound, by the yard and in bunches; had them almost ready and would send them soon. When the beads arrived there was great excitement. The instructor called upon a friend to help her unpack them, and before she took time to acknowledge the receipt of them she had six men working upon them. Close your eyes, friends, for a moment and imagine you see this ward with its rows of helpless men waiting and watching for the beads you have sent me for them. After I had sent the first package of beads there came a bead loom and a box of beads, and in an hour I had them on their way. Now and again a box came to me and just as long as they keep coming will sort and send them. In the [illegible] boys I think Sally Joy Brown and all the kind friends in need.

"MRS. J. L. M."

They Need Coats.

"We are two girls, 13 and 15 years old. We go to school and want to get an education, but we are quite poor. Our mother works because papa is 61 years old and has heart trouble. Do you suppose some girl might have some discarded clothing she would give us? Or a coat from last year? We need coats terribly. And we would be grateful for the gift. G. M."

If some one has dresses or coats from last year or the year before, do hunt them up, write for the address, and send them to these girls. They sound like brave little fighters, don't they?

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

BLOUSE TRIMMING IN BATIK.

If you're planning a new waist of georgette or crêpe de chine, a trimming of batik will make it both novel and unusual. A design such as is shown in the large illustration may be used effectively. The trimming has been applied to blouse pattern No 9400 of Clotilde's patterns, but it will suit any other equally well.

First trace the pattern on the material, being careful to have one leaf stem end just where the next one begins. To trace the design cover the back of the paper containing the design with soft lead pencil or charcoal. Carbon paper can only be used where a dark tone of dye is to be used. If the newspaper design wears out, you can trace the design on medium heavy writing paper and use it again and again. Trace the design with a somewhat blunt lead pencil. It is well to thumbtack or pin the design to the material while tracing it.

When the collar, cuffs, and front have all been traced, cover that part of the design which is printed black with melted paraffin. To do this, heat the paraffin in a sauce pan until a blue haze seems to cover the surface of it, remove from the gas flame and paint it on the design, using a No. 3 bristle brush, of the sort used for oil painting. The paraffin can be applied in this way just like water color.

Any two tones of the same color are good. For instance, dark purple with violet, navy blue with turquoise blue dark brown with orange or tan. Suppose you are planning a dark brown waist with a tan design. Trace the design on tan crêpe de chine or georgette, paint with the paraffin, and then mix up a package of dark brown dye, following all the directions except those relating to the amount of water needed. Use only two quarts of water with the dye instead of the amount called for.

Allow the dye to cool. Never immerse batik in dye warmer than 60 degrees Fahrenheit. When cold put all the crêpe de chine or georgette from which the waist is to be made into the bowl of dye at the same time. Stir constantly while in the dye. Allow it to become darker in tone than the tone you desire, as the washing in the rinse water makes it lighter, also wet material always is darker than when dried.

When it seems dark enough, remove from the dye and rinse in cold water until the dye does not run from the material. Dry it and the soak it in a bowl of [illegible] When the paraffin is removed you will find a tan vine on a dark brown background. If the finished waist is trimmed with pipings of the tan, in its original color, you're sure to be charmed with your handiwork.

One last caution. In dyeing the various parts of the waist be sure that they are all dyed at the same time for the same length of time, in order to insure sameness of color and tone in the waist

Fan and Handkerchief Flirtations

by DORIS BLAKE

FLIRTATIOUS and fascinating are the adjectives most aptly applied to a fan, are they not? The beauty of a pair of alluring eyes is never more enhanced than when peeping coquetishly over a fan.

With the lovely examples of this first aid to flirtations that are being worn by charming women this season, it might be interesting to know the origin of the fan.

There is an old legend of Chinese origin that one evening the beautiful daughter of a Chinese mandarin who was attending a grand feast of lanterns became so overcome with the heat that it became necessary for her to remove her mask; but the law forbade a woman to expose her face to the common gaze, so, holding the mask as closely to her face as possible she rapidly fluttered it to give air, and the rapidity of the movement still concealed her. The other ladies, observing the hazardous but charming innovation, followed suit. At once a thousand hands were fluttering their masks and thus was begun the flirtatious and fascinating fan.

So flirtatiously did the fan carry itself from that day on that there grew up a language for it, which I shall herewith retell to you, but please let me caution you not to expect others to understand your language if you talk "fan talk" unless you are quite well informed that they are among the initiated. I present it only as a matter of interest and not with the suggestion that it be adopted broadly:

What the Fan Says.

"Yes" is expressed by letting the fan rest on the right cheek.
"No," let fan rest on left cheek.
"I hate you," drawing through the hand.
"I am sorry," drawing across the eyes.
"We will be friends," dropping fan.
"I am engaged," fanning fast.
"I am married," fanning slow.
"You are cruel," open and shut.
"Wait for me," open wide.
"I have changed," shutting it.
"You have changed," rest on right ear.
"I wish to be rid of you," twirling in left hand.
"I love another," twirling in right hand.
"Kiss me," hold handle to lips.
"You are too willing," carrying in right hand.
"Follow me," carrying in left hand in front of face.
"I desire acquaintance," carrying in left hand.
"We are watched," drawing across the forehead.
"I love you," drawing across cheek.

In fanning, if the fan strikes the body, it should be struck three times on the ground.

It is considered lucky for the sick if you fan them with the fan of an ancestor or a grandmother. If it is made of feathers, so much the better; they will waft the illness away.

If a woman is perfectly devoted to her fan and fans constantly, you could not trust her out of your sight.

Told by the Handkerchief.

Now that we are on the subject of things flirtatious, did you know the handkerchief has a language of its own? Yes, even the humble bandanna, when properly executed, may carry a message to a lady love from the heart of the bandanna owner. So say the folklorists, for whom nothing seemed too lowly or too trivial to attach some manner of message of superstition to.

"I desire acquaintance," is signified by drawing the handkerchief across the lips.
"I love you," drawing it across the cheek.
"We are watched," drawing it across the forehead.
"I am sorry," across the eyes.
"I hate you," through the hands.
"We will be friends," dropping it.
"I wish to speak with you," folding it.
"Yes," letting it rest on the right cheek.
"No," letting it rest on the left cheek.
"You are so cruel," letting it remain on the eyes.
"Do wait for me," opposite corners in hands.
"Follow me," over the shoulder.
"How you have changed," placing it over the right ear.
"No more love at present," putting it in the pocket.
"You are most too willing," taking it by the center.
"I love another," twisting it in both hands.
"I am engaged," winding it around the forefinger.
"Indifference," twirling it in both hands.
"I am married," winding it around the third finger.

It is unlucky to carry more than one handkerchief at a time. It is bad luck to put a folded handkerchief in the pocket.

If you have a handkerchief with you, and take another when starting out to visit a friend, it is a sign that you will be welcome.

To find a handkerchief is a sign of getting a letter which you will be glad to read.

For a woman to give a man a silk handkerchief, breaks friendship.

It is unlucky to put a black handkerchief over your head when sleeping or lying down; this would be a sign that your people will mourn for you.

It is lucky to have a gift of handkerchiefs on your birthday or any holiday, as it wipes away sorrow.

A woman who carries cheap little handkerchiefs will never be able to carry lace trimmed ones.

THE THANKSGIVING MENU.

IF we are faithful to the strictest tradition, soup will not appear on our Thanksgiving menu. If we are faithful to the best traditions of modern menu making we will provide a cup of soup to take off the edge of appetite. It is good dietetics, and the dietitian has at last been allowed a word concerning the Thanksgiving and other feasts.

The most correct of dinner experts will preface a highly festive piece de resistance with some of the simplest soups, though these may be pretentiously named. But that is a long story. Suiting yourself without regard to convention is more the thing today than once it was.

It goes without saying, the turkey! The young female is in favor. I fear that the making of the bird in full feather, the male, the supreme symbol of the day has not helped people to that far more practical and necessary conception, the bird trussed and ready for the oven. This is the half way place between the turkey in all his bouffant panoply of feathers and the browned and perfectly glazed roast, ready to hand to the carver. Note "glazed." No turkey steamed in a covered roasting tin can be glazed. Glazing is the product of a bright, clear, dry heat and good basting.

Cleaning the Turkey.

No ordinary or mild emphasis should be given to the great business of getting a turkey properly ready for the oven, properly and immaculately cleaned above everything else. It takes a woman of powerful will and modern woman self-confidence to essay the cleaning of a turkey if she has never seen it done. Experience in cleaning and preparing a chicken for roasting may have fitted her for the task, but the turkey is a bigger and a better bird if correctly cooked.

To have the turkey trussed and ready for the oven, immaculately clean in every pin spot, is to me the law and the gospel of turkey cookery. Prominent in my memories of turkey dinners is one where the order of squab turkey cost the host $2.25, and I could not eat mine because the taste of dirt was so prominent. Do not let a dirt taste be even half prominent; that is, half masked and so excusable, you think.

The cleanest way of singeing a turkey is to light a tablespoon of alcohol in a pan and quickly turn the turkey through it. A gas taper is good, but slow. For any small attention after the first singeing it is the best thing. Lighted paper is troublesome and dirty. An awkward beginner should not try it.

Removing the Tendons.

But there is not space here for every one of the little details of the preparation. Of almost vital importance is the removing of the tendons from the drumstick. Do not let a careless butcher chop off the legs of any fowl. He will generally remove the tendons unless business is rushing—if you ask him to. But you can easily do this yourself. Just cut through the skin of the knee joint. Bend the leg back and loosen the tendons at the joint by prying them up with the finger. They will then come out when you pull the leg off.

I prefer to season a turkey inside with pieces of celery, buttered onions, and other vegetables. Those expert in making bread dressings stuff the perfectly cleaned and dry turkey twenty-four hours before it is baked. Of course, with such a dressing it is vital that the inside of the turkey be dry before it is put in.

A meat "farci" may be put in quite as long before as the bread stuffing, the turkey being then kept in the cleanest and coolest of places. A vegetable stuffing must of course be put into the turkey just before the cooking. Any stuffing presumably hinders the shrinking of the meat in the cooking, but too often it leaches juice out of the meat to season itself. A bread stuffing almost surely does this, though a fat meat stuffing gives as much as it takes.

Baste the Drumsticks.

One admonition in regard to the necessary fifteen minute basting should be carefully heeded. Do not forget to baste the drumsticks. The dark meat is naturally the juiciest if it is properly cooked. The "oyster" on the back is by some people held in higher esteem than even the meat of the second joint, and a good cook will give us slices of the thigh equal to either. To consider the drumstick as but one portion is crude and wasteful service. Dark and white meat together is put on each plate by each server unless preferences settle otherwise, and the drumstick repays good carving in this division. Of course, it cannot be carved if the tendons are left in, the meat dried to them and the bone.

One word about the carving. The head of the turkey is away from the carver. It is the thumb and not the forefinger that should be on the top of the knife. Two thin slices off the breast and then the removal of the wing, towards which the carving has been, constitute the first gestures.

Fewer Vegetables Today.

Our ancestors piled the Thanksgiving table with vegetables. Butter to dress them cost next to nothing and the vegetables were in store. Today too many people have to pay too high a price for both to make the old abundance anything but a foolish display, besides only a few cooks prepare vegetables expertly. Even their mashed potato is flat.

Winter squash, turnip, and onions may, one or the other or all, be on the menu. The potatoes are usually parboiled and baked with the meat, Franconia style, and may be either the white or sweet ones, when there is another mashed vegetable like squash.

Cranberry cooking is a much simpler thing that the cook books imply. For cranberry jelly the whiter sorts of berries, which are not so ripe as the others, should be chosen. In any case pick over and wash cranberries. To one pound of berries add one cup of boiling water. Boil rapidly from six to eight minutes, strain and sweeten. Cook a bit with necessary sugar. The cranberries for jelly will pop open in five minutes, and long cooking takes away their brightness, making them dark and almost muddy.

No Standard Pumpkin Pie.

Pumpkin pies are as American and particularly as early American as Indian corn. Nuts and raisins, cider, fruit, and pumpkin pies are nearly standardized Thanksgiving desserts But there is no standard pumpkin pie Too many that we see are dark, thin, dry, and strong with spice, while the old fashioned sort were thick and more like a deep custard, I believe. But we have not the old fashioned sort of molasses to sweeten them with. And possibly another reason why they have not the old fashioned flavor is that we do not cook the pumpkin for six hours or more as the older cooks did, caramelizing the small amount of sugar in it and in general getting a darker and more highly flavored product than we generally see today.

One cup and a half of stewed and sieved and rather dry pumpkin, one cup of milk, which may advantageously be half cream or have two tablespoons of butter melted in it; two eggs, spices to taste, four tablespoons of brown sugar or sugar to taste, or a combination of sugar and molasses sweetening, will give an agreeable filling for a deep, medium sized pie. Stir the spices, sugar, and well beaten eggs together, and add the milk to the mixture a little at a time, stirring it in. Superfluous milk will separate, and then the consistency of the whole will not be homogeneous. Bake in a well pricked crust, set in hot oven for about fifty minutes, lowering the heat as the crust begins to cook, but not too much, for an uncooked crust is highly undesirable and soggy.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of variation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Roast Venison.

[Reprinted by request.]

Venison for a saddle should always be prepared at the market. If a leg of venison is used it is prepared and cooked the same as mutton. Have the bone removed from the leg, wipe, stuff if desired, truss, and place in a deep dripping pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, and dredge with flour. Roast in a hot oven, basting every fifteen minutes with melted butter; allow ten minutes for each pound of venison. Serve with currant jelly sauce. Venison, being a very dry meat, it is always best to lard the entire upper surface of the roast with fat salt pork lardoons. Venison is rarely ever stuffed, and when it is perhaps chestnut stuffing is the most desirable.

Chestnut Stuffing.

Cut a half inch cross on the flat side of one quart of large chestnuts. Put them into a shallow pan and allow one-half of a teaspoon of butter or olive oil for each cup of chestnuts. Shake the pan over a low fire until each nut is well covered with the fat. Then place the pan in a moderate oven and let stand from five to eight minutes. Remove from the oven and with a small, sharp pointed knife peel off the shells. By this method the shells and brown skins are removed at the same time. Cook the meats in boiling salted water until soft. Drain, mash, and press through a ricer. Season with one teaspoon of salt, one-eighth teaspoon of pepper and moisten with one-third cup of hot cream. Use as directed.

Currant Jelly Sauce.

Melt three tablespoons of butter in a saucepan and cook until richly browned (but not burned). Add four tablespoons of flour and stir until smooth and well browned. Add gradually one cup of brown stock, continue stirring until sauce is smooth and glossy. Season with one-fourth teaspoon of salt and a few grains of pepper. Whip one-half cup of currant jelly with a fork, add to brown sauce with one teaspoon of lemon juice. Let simmer gently five minutes. Serve with roast venison, mutton or spring lamb.

Alabama Salad.

Peel and finely chop two medium sized white onions; cover with ice water. Pare and slice crosswise four medium sized cucumbers or two large southern grown cucumbers. Cover with ice water and let both stand until crisp and chilled (about one hour) Drain cucumbers well, drain onions also. Add the onions to the cucumbers, sprinkle with salt, a few grains of cayenne, and one-fourth teaspoon of paprika. Dress with three-fourths cup of thick cream to which has been added four tablespoons of vinegar. If vinegar is acid, use equal measure of vinegar and cold water. Sugar may be added to the mixture if desired. Serve on crisp well bleached lettuce leaves.

Fried Cornmeal Mush.

Put one quart of boiling water in the top vessel of a double boiler, add one and one-half teaspoons of salt; heat to boiling point, mix two cups of yellow cornmeal with two cups of cold milk and add gradually to the boiling water, stirring constantly; bring to the boiling point, then place vessel over boiling water, cover, and let cook slowly (water in lower vessel of boiler must boil continually) four or five hours. Use the simmer burner of the gas range for this purpose. Stir occasionally to prevent mush lumping. The longer the mush steams the more delicious the flavor. Serve as porridge with top milk or thin cream; or turn into an agate brick shaped bread pan that has been wet inside with cold water; spread evenly and chill thoroughly. Turn on a cutting board and cut in one-half inch slices. Dredge each slice with flour and fry a golden brown in deep hot fat or sauté in dripping on a griddle. When brown on one side turn and brown the other side. Use plenty of fat. Serve with maple sirup or brown sugar sirup.

Golden Coal

Light a piece of coal and you turn it into a willing servant. It will do a lot of your work—it is a big help.

Another wonderful servant is Fels-Naptha—the original naptha soap. This golden brown bar is often called "golden coal" because it, too, will do a lot of work. It contains naptha, and naptha dissolves dirt.

The genuine and reliable naptha soap will do the hardest part of your wash if you soap your clothes well, and then set them to soak for about 30 minutes in a solution made of and lukewarm water. The soaking takes the place of hard rubbing and is easier on the clothes.

Your washing machine will do even better work when you use Fels-Naptha because the machine flushes the naptha through every thread of the garment and all of the dirt is dissolved and removed.

Be sure to get Fels-Naptha the next time you go to your grocer's

THE LAST WORD IN PARIS FASHIONS

By Mary Brush Williams.

A FOREST OF AIGRETTES.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—There is, of course, a great deal to be said on the mere subject of hats alone. A whole letter could profitably be devoted to the contraptions and the contrivances and technical expertness practiced in costuming the feminine form divine as far as the waist line. Another thesis could be employed in trying to describe skirts.

Cape Collar in Gray and Blue Plaid Wool.

A friend of mine, a French woman, narrated the other evening that she had been that afternoon to one of the smartest hat shops of Paris and had She was having it made on her head, after the approved French method.

Of course, you know that it is practically impossible to walk into a French hat shop, buy a hat, and wear it away. They will have half a dozen models, none of which fits you, and they will wish to make something, fitting the white lining on your head right then and there.

Mme. Renée had reached the next stage when my friend saw her. She was essaying the material itself. "And he [the fitter] bound the oilcloth tightly round her head."

I interrupted, thinking I had misunderstood. I always think in conversations with the French that the mistake has been mine. She paused, a little annoyed at the interruption in her excited description. "The oilcloth?" I questioned.

"You know, that you put on the kitchen table. Like that, only black. That's what they're making the smartest toques of this season. He bound it tightly round her head, and when I left he was loading, planting it, in tons, literally tons, of aigrettes. They're so smart, you know, to have a small tight band, carrying a perfect forest of aigrettes—O, they are very chic, are those forests this season."

Far be it from me ever to doubt, criticize, or even amend the word of my friend on the subject of what is chic, for she herself is the last word in chicness. But I should slightly modify her figure of speech, and say that it was like a forest in the devastated regions, lying prostrate, for except in certain cases the forests of aigrettes seldom stand upright. The smart thing is to have them tumbling into your eyes and making you look cross-eyed, and tickling the cheek of any one who comes near you, and jutting out a little further on the left side than the right, and when not quite so well done as they might be, suggesting another figure, of looking like a wheat field after a windstorm. However, the facts are yours to interpret as you like.

Black Satin Toques with Aigrettes.

Just by way of disproving what I seen Mme. Renée there getting a hat, have said I have had the artist make a drawing of a woman wearing the aigrettes in the forest form. The woman is none other than Lady Duff Gordon, or Lucille, at her own fashion opening. The toque was of black satin with a mushroom brim. High on the crown sat a band of sable, and out of it sprang the magnificent clump of aigrettes.

I was not going to describe full costumes, but one might as well mention that the gown was of black satin and cream lace, and the back of it fell like a coat, straight from the shoulders to the knees. A cluster of Chinese flowers made of bits of bright colored materials sat upon the left front of the girdle, which crossed the waist line in front. Heavy ropes of pearls fell from throat to waistline.

The woman with the fur round her neck is Miss Elsie de Wolfe as she is seen frequently round Paris—at the openings, at tea, at the meetings in behalf of this thing and that, and on the street dodging taxicabs. Her fur piece is magnificent and for me solves a difficult problem.

The fashion, you know, is for wide furs. Foxes are left their entire width and lined with satin. I cannot bear the look of it myself. A fox lined with satin is to me a homely sight.

Miss de Wolfe's fox, needless to say, after showing the picture, is left his entire width, just as he came from the curing—no fox by nature is as wide as that. Instead of lining him with satin, however, Miss de Wolfe has had him done in ermine, and the effect is very different indeed. It is one of the handsomest fur pieces I have ever seen.

As for the rest of her costuming, it is as novel and as smart as only Paris can make it. Her loose blouse is of knitted silk in maroon color. Her hat is of pale gray feathers lying closely one over another as on the body of a bird. The ornamentation is in feathers, too. Tiny black ones are laid on, or almost inlaid one might say, as in a wreath round the head.

Fox Piece Lined with Ermine.

The nose veil which goes with this toque is of black, coarsely netted twisted silk. The sum total is a stunning effect indeed.

Mrs. Elinor Glyn is the lady of the last decoration, and I will say that the likeness is remarkable. She and Miss de Wolfe happened to be seated in the same small group at an entertainment the other afternoon, and they made a stunning contrast to each other in the different sort of smartness each represented. Mrs. Glyn wore a shapeless coat of tan wool, bearing a huge cape collar of the same material in gray and blue plaid. A deep fringe of twisted wool hung from the collar. Mrs. Glyn managed this collar as if it were a separate fur scarf. From the standpoint of the price of wool at present, she was certainly entitled to do so. Her small hat was of crushed tan felt and was built on the lines of your tam-o'-shanter that you used to wear when you were a little girl. She wore the hat tilted slightly on the side, so that it showed her dark red hair, with which the color of the hat made a beautiful contrast.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

UNJUST SUSPICIONS

FEW girls realize the seriousness of casting the suspicion of dishonesty upon others. If girls in offices and shops realized the harm that invariably follows their thoughtless accusations or innuendoes, I am sure they would take greater care to refrain from indulging in such an unjust practice.

The incident described in the following letter reveals the harm that almost inevitably is bound to arise when such a situation is created either through thoughtlessness or malice:

"Dear Miss King: An unfortunate experience in our office prompts this letter to you in the hope that it is used in your column and that it might have the effect of preventing unhappiness in similar circumstances.

"There are about twenty girls and two office boys employed here. One of the girls in the office has a rather excitable disposition, and is continually alarming with some wild tale which on investigation usually develops into the most commonplace occurrence.

"Hardly a day passes that doesn't bring some exciting adventure to her. The younger girls listen with awe and admiration, but some of the older and more experienced girls pay scant heed to her extravagant stories.

"The other day about the middle of the afternoon Miss M. startled everybody in the office by exclaiming, 'Somebody has taken $5 out of my purse. I had it when I came back from lunch, and it's gone now, so somebody in the office must have taken it. Did anybody see Johnnie at my desk while I was up in the washroom a while ago?'

"Johnnie is one of the office boys, and this was said in a loud voice for everybody to hear.

"The woman in charge of the office called Miss M. to her desk and questioned her carefully about the possibility of having mislaid the money or of losing it outside. She was emphatic about not having touched the money since she returned from lunch and equally positive that she had it when she came in. She turned the coin purse which she carries in her bag inside out for inspection.

"The woman in charge told her that she would make a thorough investigation and asked her to leave the matter in her hands.

"Shortly afterward one of the girls told her that she had seen Johnnie near her desk, but she didn't see him touch anything.

"'That settles it; I know that boy took it,' she exclaimed, and without another word went into the office of the boss and demanded that the boy give up the money or that he be fired.

"Johnnie was put through a severe grilling, but came through all right, as the boss told Miss M. that he believed the boy was perfectly honest and hadn't taken the money.

"Miss M. sulked after that and, the other girls in the office then recalled strange and suspicious actions of Johnnie on several occasions, and one of the girls said that she had distrusted him long ago and wasn't a bit surprised when the money disappeared and so on until you would believe that poor little Johnnie was a regular criminal.

"The next morning Miss M. confided to one of the girls that she found the lost $5 bill folded between the leaves of a little memorandum book which she carried in her bag and finally recalled having placed it there.

"She refused to tell the boss and asked her confidant not to tell anybody as it would make her appear ridiculous. The other girl wouldn't promise, but said as every one in the office was under suspicion she thought it her duty to tell the woman in charge.

"The matter has all blown over now, but Johnnie isn't the happy little fellow he was, and I know that in spite of the fact that he was entirely cleared of dishonesty, the girls do not trust him, and they let him see that they don't. R. E. L."

Varied Activities of Women

All moving picture films produced in Mexico are first censored by two women—Miss Adriana S. Ehlers and Miss Dolores L. Ehlers.

Miyo Kohashi, the pioneer newspaper woman in Japan, is now in this country for the purpose of studying English and journalism.

Mrs. Roscoe C. Bulmer, widow of Capt. R. C. Bulmer, U. S. N., has announced her intention of entering an active business career.

English women are beginning to wear monocles, and not only are they adopting them for home wear but are appearing on the street so adorned.

In recognition of her work in organizing the American Red Cross in Damascus, Mrs. Anna L. Fisher of Santa Barbara, Cal., was commissioned a captain in the Arabian army and assigned as a cavalry officer with the sanitary corps.

More than 100 young women from all parts of the United States have received commissions as missionaries to thirteen different countries under the appointment of the Methodist Woman's Foreign Missionary society.

Householders in Great Britain are barred from entertaining their mothers-in-law, or other guests, longer than four weeks by an order of the ministry of food.

Hannah Montague, wife of a blacksmith in Troy, N. Y., made the first detachable collar for men in 1819, and now 200,000 yards of goods are used in a day in that town by a single factory.

REAL LOVE STORIES

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

HER TEAMSTER.

BECAUSE the teaming company sent the luggage—camping outfit and all—by freight, when my instructions had plainly been to send by express, the manager of the concern found himself up in northern Michigan, with his guide awaiting him, without his outfit. After sticking around all week, sending telegrams tracing the shipment, he finally came back without his string of muskies he intended to catch, but with a grouch on big enough to eat everybody up.

For the next six months I heard the story of the week wasted up in Michigan waiting for the luggage, heard it repeated to men who came into the office, heard it hinted up to me—for I, it seems, was mostly to blame for the error. How? I don't know!

So when Mr. Kane decided to repeat the trip some months later, I was quite sarcastically asked to take care of the luggage end, have the teaming company call for it at the office storeroom, and take it to the depot—send it by express. "Now don't make a fool blunder again," came the instructions.

Those words stung. I decided that baggage was going to arrive at its destination before Mr. Kane did, or I'd give up my job. So the morning before Mr. Kane's departure I called the express company and had them send down a team after the whole outfit. When the teamster came up, I slipped into a sweater, went down the freight elevator, saw the baggage and all placed on the wagon, warned the teamster to be sure it went by express—then, doubtful, the fellow didn't look like he cared much how the baggage went. I simply hopped up on the wagon seat beside the teamster and rode down to the depot with him—a lovely sight in a sweater coat, hatless, hair flying—but I was determined no blunder was going to occur this time. At the depot I saw the baggage "red lettered," checked, and safely wheeled away for the next train up to the town in northern Michigan.

Satisfied with my job, I made a discovery. I didn't have any money with me to ride back to the office—I'd forgotten about it—I couldn't walk, the distance was too far. So I sheepishly asked the teamster to loan me a dime, asking for his name and address, promising to mail the money back to him as soon as I got to the office. The dime I got and with it a card. The fellow who drove that team was not a teamster but the team dispatcher of the express company, filling in a vacancy when illness ran them short of a teamster.

The dime was mailed to the gentleman as promised, and a call announced his receiving of same. A couple of weeks later when about to cross one of the downtown streets, I was hailed by a young man in a two seater—the team dispatcher—waiting for the traffic whistle to go west. Invited, I hopped into the car and we rode out to the office, and many more such trips followed in that little car.

Today my team dispatcher is seldom called by any such pet names as dunce or blockhead; endearing names are more appreciative, for he's mine, and I mustn't abuse him. H. M.

Robert was taking physiology and the subject interested him. One day he decided to tell his small brother some facts. Pointing to a vein in his hand, he said: "The stuff in that vein keeps the heart going; do you know what's in it." "No," was brother's quick reply, "I don't know; what is it, oil or gas?" C. C.

Vialta was playing in the yard and her mother told her it was time to come in and prepare for bed.

"I don't want to go to bed yet," pleaded Vialta.

"It's early yet; let her play a little longer," interceded grandmother.

"No," her mother said firmly, "she must come in now."

Vialta came up the steps as slowly as possible. "O, mamma," she exclaimed angrily, "why don't you obey your mother?" K. S.

Bobby and his sisters were served with soup and their mother, mindful of their table manners, remarked, "Now remember, dears, your spoon is a little boat and must be unloaded from the side."

"Huh, mine is a car ferry and unloads from the end," rejoined Bobby complacently. I. P. S.

HOUSE OF UNUSUAL FEATURES.

SOME of the prettiest effects imaginable in home exteriors have been obtained by the use of cobble stones as the materials for the walls. This is especially true of homes that are used only in the summer, or houses set in rustic surroundings.

One type of the cobble stone house is shown in the accompanying design. This house represents a thoroughly modern adaptation of the cobbie stone. The structure is rustic in appearance, but bears the marks of the latest ideas in house design. It is of the bungalow type of story and a half house, containing seven rooms and bath. The size is only 30 by 32 feet, which is not an expensive house to build.

The unusual feature about the exterior treatment of this house is the overhang of the second floor, which forms the porch roof. The porch is 30 feet wide and 10 feet deep, and is beautified by the porch walls and the pillars that support the upper floor. The cobble stone walls only extend to the second floor sill. Above the house is of frame construction, with cobble stone panels in the front and rear gables, and with cobble stone for the walls of the dormer projections. The latter give size and height to the bedrooms.

How cozily and conveniently the seven rooms are arranged is shown by the floor plans that accompany the view of the house. Downstairs there are the living and dining rooms, the kitchen, and one bedroom. The central door off the porch opens into the living room, 16 feet 6 inches by 13 feet in size. Back of the living room, connected with a double cased opening, is the dining room, and to one side the kitchen. The first floor bedroom, at the front of the house alongside the living room, is pleasant and is entirely separate from the balance of the house. It opens off the hall, out of which run the stairs, and in consequence is convenient to the bathroom at the head of the stairs on the second floor. Upstairs there are three good sized and well lighted bedrooms.

While this is not the type of house that the average home builder would erect, it will have a strong appeal to those who want something different from the ordinary run of dwellings. It certainly is a distinctive home, and one that the owner can furnish in a most artistic way—a way that will preserve the impression of the country that its exterior gives.

Last week we peeped into the front part of our illustrated house. This week let us have a little glimpse into the kitchen. It is perfectly ideal. The house is wired for electricity and in the kitchen is an icebox that freezes its own ice. Can you imagine anything nicer than that? All you have to do is to put the electric plug into the socket, fill a little drawer full of water, and in no time, presto! behold the ice in small cubes, small enough to drop into glasses. The inside of the ice drawer is divided like the boxes eggs come in. This icebox keeps the food wholesome and clean and really is worth considering when building. It is one of the gems of the mechanical age. No need to worry about the ice card in the window or germs in the ice, for sterilized water can be used to freeze.

The color scheme is simple and effective, terra cotta, gray and black. The inlaid linoleum has a padding under it, that makes for both comfort and wear. A good deal of brick red pottery is used among the kitchen utensils, casseroles, etc. The wall is papered in Caen stone pattern, in gray with white mortise lines. The curtains and dishes are in gray with touches of black and terra cotta.

Among the up to date contrivances is an electric motor that turns anything that needs cranking—the coffee grinder, meat grinder, ice cream freezer, churn, etc. The fireless cooker has an electric clock attachment that turns it on and off, so that meals may be cooked and ready to serve to the dot on time.

Indeed, this is a wonderful little kitchen. It has a porch all its own, fitted with comfortable red wicker chairs that have chintz cushions like the kitchen curtains.

Who minds doing her own work? Not the owner of this fine little laboratory.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Away When He Called.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am very much in love with a young man who lives in another city. This summer, through some misunderstanding of his letter, I was not in town when he came up to visit. He became angry and has not written to me since, but he has written to my mother asking about me. Do you think he loves me? Should I write to him? NORMA."

He must be awfully interested, Norma, or he would not write to your mother about you; but how unreasonable the male of the species is, when he is jealous! Or did you tell him you would be home, then fail to be there when he came?

Takes a Good Night Kiss.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 19 years old and have been keeping company with a young man of 20 for the last year or more. When he came back from the army, I, of course, kissed him, which I had not done before he went away. He has taken it for granted since the first few times that he could kiss me good-night every night he sees me, but I have been reading a great deal of late about it not being right, and that the men lose their respect for you when you allow them this privilege before becoming engaged. I know our becoming engaged will be out of the question for at least another year, and I would like to hold his love, but I am afraid if I tell him not to kiss me any more he will be hurt. I would like your opinion as to what I should do, as I have been worrying about it for some time, and come to you for advice. FLORENCE."

Well, Florence, it's rather like trying to put the scrambled eggs back in the shell to permit kissing and then suddenly expect the young man to assume the respecting attitude. But it's your chance to have the man realize that you are worth while, because when you make up your mind that a thing is right you are going to stick to it.

No Answer from Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 16 and have been corresponding with a boy that I am very fond of, telling him the good times I have been having going out with other boys. The last letter I received from him he seemed to be very jealous for some unknown reason. I answered his letter, not paying any attention to his apparent jealousy and he has not answered. This is about three weeks ago and he usually wrote at least once a week. Please give me your advice as to whether I should write or not. I would hate to lose his friendship. "H. E. S."

No, don't write to him again until he answers you. If he is piqued he will probably get over it in a few days. Or it may be that he too is going about having good times which keep him too engrossed to write.

Two Delicious Fish Meals

Gorton's Codfish, Creamed

Let the fish stand in cold water, to freshen, for several hours. Then put into stewpan with fresh water, and let come to a boil. Pour off nearly all the water, add milk, and thicken with flour to make a cream, stirring well to prevent burning. After cooking, remove from fire, stir in slowly one or two eggs well beaten, add butter. Serve with boiled or baked potatoes.

Gorton's Codfish Balls

Let codfish stand in cold water for several hours, to freshen. Then put on stove in pan of fresh water, and boil about 15 minutes. Remove, chop fish and boiled potatoes together, using one part fish to two parts potatoes. Add one egg well beaten, and form into balls. Flour lightly, and fry in hot pork fat to a nice brown.

Gorton's Codfish comes packed in one-half and one pound sanitary cartons. Practically ready to cook. No bones. No waste. No trouble to prepare. For sale by all grocers.

PHYSICAL CORRECTIVE COURSE

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Tribune."

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"THE growing interest in preventive medicine and the great popularity of the opportunities afforded for athletic training," says Dr Anna M Galbraith, "attest to the value which people are beginning to place upon health as an asset in their social, domestic, business, and professional lives. But it is not generally or sufficiently understood just how great is the effect of physical training on the physical development of the brain or upon the mental activities. With a strong, vigorous action of the heart there is a feeling of courage and general exaltation, whereas with a weak heart and enfeebled circulation fear and impaired mental activity predominate. The manner in which the organic functions are performed not only determines the health of the body but the temperament and character as well.

"We cannot perform an act voluntarily unless we know what we are going to do and we cannot know exactly what we are going to do until we have learned to do it. The simplest movement brings about a change in the organic structure of the brain, and this change leads to more complex movements and further improvements in brain structure. Most skilled movements give more exercise to the central nervous system than to the muscles. Movements calling for a high degree of skill, correlation of the different senses, sense discrimination, fine coördination, and a rapid and responsible exercise of judgment all tend to a higher degree of brain development."

The object of physical training then is to secure the most perfect development of the body with the corresponding development of the brain, so that the highest physical and mental efficiency of the individual may be obtained.

The possession of a large reserve of nerve and muscle force gives confidence to the individual, increases the ability to take the initiative and undertaking greater responsibilities especially those women who are engaged in the business or professional world and the building up of this necessary reserve force is one of the inestimable advantages of a gymnastic and athletic training.

And so I urge business women and women with home responsibilities to keep up this gymnastic course I am giving you and under no consideration to get discouraged over the increasing difficulty of some of the exercises. Remember it is a training in will power you are giving yourself as well as strength and muscle getting, and you cannot afford to fail. Where the woman is overfat, or heading that way, or painfully thin, there is a certain vanity which will keep her true to her determination.

Now, we will continue:

Just a word to remind you of the need of doing these movements with a precision exactly like the responses to the commands in the army during drill. Just the movements done without energy and tenseness and snap will profit you little.

We are still working on the shoulder, neck, and back muscles, reducing or developing according to the need, the exercises given here working effectively on each type. To this today we will add movements involving the waist and chest and arm muscles as well.

First: Take standing position, head up, knees straight but without stiffness, body erect, abdomen flat, chest high and shoulders square and easy, back flat, feet about two foot lengths apart. Place hands on hips and bend forward from the waist, as in Fig. 1, keeping head up and eyes looking at some point ahead and up, then back. Try to do this without curving the back in or jerking the head back suddenly. Forward and back, forward and back, three times.

Second: Take same position, bend forward from waist, bring fists clenched up to shoulders, elbows in, movements tense, then shoot arms back a couple of times, as in Fig. 2. Relax.

Third: Again bending trunk forward, bring fists up as before, then stretch them outward, as in illustration 3, and back briskly a couple of times and relax.

Fourth: Same trunk bending position, bring fists up again, then shoot arms upward, as in illustration 4, and back. Be careful to keep arms rather close to head, and head well up during all these movements. Relax.

Do each movement not more than three times at first; then gradually increase. If you do these movements briskly and correctly you will feel the pull on the muscles, which will convince you more than anything I could say that they have been inactive for some time and needed stirring up.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

B. L. S.: THE SURE CURE FOR your fair sized mustache is the electric needle in the hands of an expert only. If hair is removed by electricity in the hands of an expert it will not return again or leave any ill effects. I have an astringent for reducing enlarged pores which I shall be glad to mail to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

MARGARET C.: WHITE HEADS are small collections of sebaceous matter which have been caught under the horny epidermis and have dried into hard, cheesy masses. They are really a sort of imprisoned blackhead and are often associated with them, although white, because protected from the surface dirt. They are easily removed by pricking the cover with a sterile needle and pressing out the contents.

MISS B.: THERE IS NO WAY TO remove the kink from your hair, even though it is red. You are greatly to be envied. Many girls would give all their weirdly wealth to be blessed with curly hair. Just think, you don't have to worry about the dampness or rain taking the curl out of your hair and do not have the additional expense of having it curled by a hairdresser. With a few clever manipulations with the comb you are all dolled up for the evening.

ETIQUETTE

By Elizabeth Van Rensselaer

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped addressed envelope.

N. E. S.: If there are no ushers the guests may find their own seats in the church, occupying any except those reserved for the parents of the bride and bridegroom. You, as the bride's aunt and nearest relative and the hostess at the wedding, leave the church first after the bride and bridegroom walk down the aisle. You stand in line with them and the bridegroom's parents to receive congratulations. Yes, the organist plays a recessional when the bridal party leaves the chancel. The head waiter will announce to you that the breakfast is served; then you will lead the guests to the table, where they may find their chairs by means of the place cards. The bride and bridegroom sit at the head of the table; on the bride's right is the bridegroom's father, and the others are seated around the table as follows: You, the bridegroom's brother, the bridegroom's aunt, the minister, the bridegroom's sister-in-law, his cousin, the minister's wife, the bridegroom's uncle, and then his mother (on her son's left). It is not necessary to remove your gloves until you sit down at the table. Yes, since you are taking the place of the bride's mother, it is correct for you to reach the church a little ahead of the others and take your place in your pew on the left hand side of the aisle near the front.

L. T.: When at a theater with a woman, a man may either precede or follow her down the aisle, but in both cases he stands aside to allow her to be seated first. In getting off a street car a man usually alights first in order to assist his companion. It is not necessary to apologize for shaking hands when wearing gloves.

* * *

H. L. O.: A man's dinner partner sits at his right. Yes, it is better to serve all the vegetables on the dinner plate. Dinner and luncheon cards may be placed on the napkin, or at the top of the dinner plate. The meat may either be carved by the host and the plates passed to the guests, or it may be served in the kitchen. Note paper, rather than correspondence cards, is used for notes acknowledging gifts.

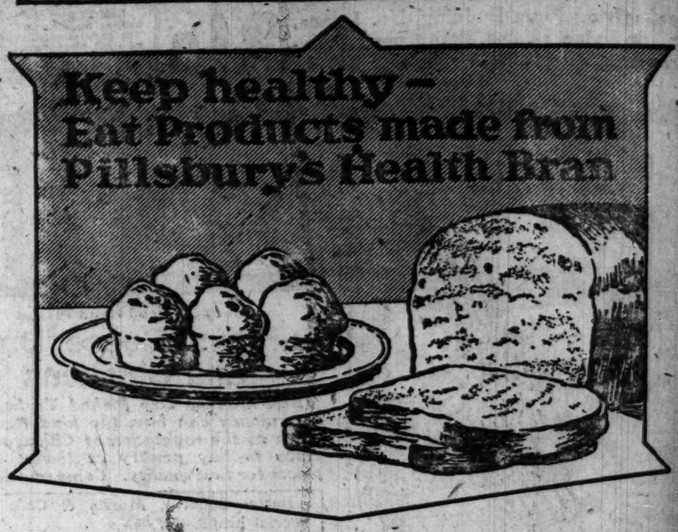
Keep healthy—Eat Products made from Pillsbury's Health Bran



Pillsbury's Health Bran, one of the health-giving members of Pillsbury's Family of Foods is a large-flake, selected Bran, sterilized and toasted under enormous heat that not only insures the keeping qualities of the Bran, but gives it a wonderfully fine flavor. Packed in air-tight cartons that preserve its freshness, Pillsbury's Health Bran always gives satisfaction.

When the children are hungry, give them a good generous slice of fresh bran bread spread with butter or syrup. Fill the cookie box with bran cookies, leave the pantry door open, and the kiddies will take care of themselves. Pillsbury's Health Bran is a wholesome food that contains mineral elements such as iron, lime and phosphorus, and these make it especially valuable as a body builder.

The action of Pillsbury's Health Bran as a laxative is natural—large coarse bran flakes, mixing with the foodstuffs in the intestinal tract, prevent massing and assist in the expulsion of waste matter.

Calling Card Gives Tip.

This and similar talk inspires the following suggestions as a means of simplifying the social problem for inviter and invited:

The English have a passion for adding mysterious letters after their names, such as F. R. G. S., R. A., K. C. M. G.; K. C. B., and so forth. Why shouldn't we apply the same system of indicatory initials to a different line of enlightenment? For instance, on calling cards, after the name, the simple, unostentatious letters, B. D., would mean "bone dry," and would quickly clear any underbrush from the would be hostess' line of approach. She would be even more encouraged by the initials C. R. ("can reciprocate"), while the letters C. O. ("cocktails only") would show her just where she and her guest stood.

In this way the uncertainties and hesitancy which now clog much of the social machinery would be eliminated and an invitation would be in the nature of a contract entered into between hosts and guests. It's worth a trial.

Where the Drought Hits.

The great question to those who get up society's big functions, like balls and large dinner dances, has been, How will the drought strike these entertainments? It strikes them in the middle, that is in the middle of the evening. Those who go to "wet" dinners first, where they partake of liquid, as well as solid, refreshment, if they can't again spur on the inner man a few hours later, suffer that almost incan't again spur up the inner man a inevitable reaction from alcohol which manifests itself in an overpowering desire to go home anfi go to sleep.

This irresistible impulse does not come to the B. D. man or woman, though the probabilities are that the same wisdom which prompted abstinence would also prompt early hours. With the wise and the unwise going home betimes, it would militate against a late and gay ball, except as the very young and very giddy could achieve it.

Some observer of mankind said that a civilization could be measured by the hours it kept—that the higher the civilization the more hours of artificial light it consumed. By that gauge we Americans would not rate as high the French, Spanish, or Italians. Perhaps the observer should have said "ripe" and not "high."

Feel Tug of Home Ties.

At any rate, many commented on the early hours kept by those who attended the recent otherwise completely successful charity ball at the First Regiment armory. Cinderella would not have lost her slipper, nor seen her coach and four turn into pumpkin and mice, had she been at that ball.

It remains to be seen how the Bachelors and Benedicts' dance on Wednesday evening and the Assembly ball on Friday withstand this tug of home ties in the evening's mid hours.

In commenting on this we take the purely neutral and impersonal views of, say, an observer from Mars, who is merely an unbiased onlooker recording conditions as he sees them. Were we expressing our own convictions, it would be to admit that they were changing from an original stand of strong opposition to a nation-wide prohibition. It is only an ardent prohibitionist who could now line up the writer with the wets.

Dinners Precede Assembly.

Preliminary to the first Assembly there will be many dinner parties. Among the hosts and hostesses will be Mr. and Mrs. William Odell, Mr. and Mrs. Philip D. Armour, and Mrs. C. M. Ely.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker will give what will probably be the largest dinner, as their guests are to be the Assemblies' board of governors and their wives—when they have them.

George Porter and Eames MacVeagh, the two bachelors on the board, will have to be provided with temporary partners. Their friends are always seeking to supply them with permanent mates, so far with small success.

Opera's First Night.

The opening of the opera last Tuesday evening was a really brilliant and memorable occasion. It was a sort of first fruit of that experiment, the organization known as the Friends of Opera. The audience, which packed the Auditorium, was a fairly representative one. It was, however, in the piece, and especially the manner of its presentation that the hand of the F. of O. could best be traced.

The opera was of the most modern, and its stage setting was as modern as the opera. It was extremely effective, even if its designer, Erio Bel-Geddes, who was visiting in the box of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson and Mrs. John Carpenter, almost wept when that wonderful ship of his, which looked as huge as the Leviathan, failed to glide across the entire back of the stage, in order to reveal to the audience the vengeful Basiliola nailed to the prow.

The composer, Montemezzi, who led the orchestra, was a most interesting figure, though he looks much more like our ex-secretary of the treasury, William G. McAdoo, than like an Italian.

Tiaras Out Again.

One other impression remains on the picturing mind—the beautiful and becoming diamond tiaras worn by Mrs. Arthur Meeker and Mrs. Charles Edward Brown.

It's so long since the days when such queens of society as Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. George M. Pullman, Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, Mrs. Robert G. McGann, Mrs. Harold F. McCormick, Mrs. W. W. Kimball, Mrs. Hamilton McCormick, the late Mrs. Potter Palmer, the late Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh, the late Mrs. H. C. Chatfield-Taylor, and others of that vanished era all sat up in that circle of boxes wearing glittering coronets that one longs for a returned of that more simple-hearted era before that rising fear of class consciousness (an emotion out of place in this country) made many tiara owners tuck them away in the back parts of their upper bureau drawers.

Bazaar Plans Rushing.

Whatever else you may say about the coming Atlantic City Board Walk bazaar at the Coliseum for the Passavant Memorial hospital, you can't, to judge from the gait of those getting it up, call it a "bored walk." They're skipping, dancing, galloping to their goal—success. There will be altogether about 1,000 people engaged in running it. Mrs. John Carpenter has designed the most fascinating and chic little buildings for the thirty-two shops which will offer their irresistible wares to an eager public.

One of the attractions will be in the center of the board walk traffic, under Mrs. John W. Root's management, a little, glistening black kiosk, gay with posters, where books, papers, magazines, pens, pencils, calendars, and Christmas cards will be sold. Not far away will be Miss Olga Menn's music shop, where Mmes. Campanini, Galli-Curci, and Rosa Raisa will sell you sheet music, gramophone records, and all kinds of musical instruments.

Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman's guest, Mrs. Edith Drown of San Francisco, who has come on especially to assist Mrs. Coleman, has brought with her for Mrs. Marshall Field's shop the rarest, choicest articles that Chinese skill and genius can produce. One jump from China to San Francisco, and another jump from San Francisco to the Coliseum brings them to our doors by as direct a route as there is.

Pushmobiles Offer Rides.

Perhaps the most diverting feature of the board walk will be Howard Gillette's band of forty wheel chair pushers. Clad in white duck trousers, bright colored short jackets, with little round caps perched on the side of the head, and with countenances of a midnight hue, some of our best known young men will propel sightseers up and down that broad expanse.

On one side will be seen the smart shops, all brilliantly lit, with their gay and charming saleswomen; on the other will be the sandy beach, where children may play, and where sellers of popcorn, gum, balloons, and cigarets will wander up and down, indifferent to the sea monster and the tethered airplane which will be permanent features of the scene.

Tickets at Half Price.

There will be perpetual moonlight in Mrs. Coleman's Atlantic City from 1 o'clock Saturday, Dec. 6, to Saturday midnight, Dec. 13, excepting Sunday, Dec. 7, when the show will be closed.

Each member of the executive board and each shop manager has taken 2,000 tickets to sell at 25 cents apiece before ...e enterprise opens. Tickets sold later will be 50 cents each, so buy yours early.

Mrs. Coleman's office is in the Edison building, and there on Tuesday mornings her executive committee meets with her to direct the policy of the undertaking.

On this committee are the Mesdames Watson Blair, Arthur Ryerson, Arthur Meeker, John A. Spoor, C. M. Ely, John Carpenter, R. T. Crane, George A. Carpenter, Charles Frankenthal, Charles B. Pike, and Orville Babcock, and Miss A. M. Garceau.

The men assisting her are Harold F. McCormick, vice president; Robert J. Dunham, treasurer; Henry J. Patten, and Colin Fyffe. Frederic M. Grant (for whose charming "still life" in the present exhibit at the Art institute we cast a vote) has contributed the effective poster, which now advertises the affair in public places.

And still they come, the famous and interesting from other lands! Last week two celebrities of the English speaking world, Lord Dunsany, the Irish poet and playwright, and Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, dean of the British stage, rested for a moment on Chicago's door sill.

The Irish poet did not suggest either the warrior that he was, nor the lover of Celtic fairyland that he is. A pleasant, loose jointed, easy going, genial Irishman he seemed, with clothes extra comfortable and an engaging, open countenance.

He does not take himself so seriously as Sir Johnston F.-B. takes himself. The latter is a very agreeable but less jovial mortal. His affability has the measured gait of his own Hamlet. It would be almost impossible, with so rich and noble a voice as his, not to read Shakespeare with a classic and sonorous emphasis. And yet I doubt if old Shakespeare himself would care for so impressive an interpretation of his works, but I may be mistaken.

English Writer to Speak.

Coming to us by the end of the month is one of the foremost of modern English writers, Hugh Walpole, author of "The Secret City," "The Dark Forest," and other novels. "The Dark Forest," is by many [including the writer] considered the greatest war novel. We may put the war away, but there are passages in that book which we cannot put away. That brooding phantom of the unknown just ahead which haunted the various characters and which sent them in quest of they knew not what, is something akin to a spiritual experience which comes to most of us sooner or later.

He is to be the guest of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson during his stay here. As he is of a cheery, companionable nature he will undoubtedly find a friendly welcome here. He is to speak at that quaint institution, the Court playhouse, where last Wedensday afternoon Lord Dunsany saw the Betty Ross puppets present most cleverly a little play of his, "The Tent of the Arabs."

This theater is to be the shrine for many a notable lecturer this winter. Keeq your eye on it, if you're not afraid of being a bit of a high brow.

Poole to Exhibit French Art.

One of the most interesting exhibits coming in the near future to the Art institute is one gotten together by Abram Poole. It is a collection of old French pictures, furniture, and other art objects, which is to be installed in a suite of rooms arranged like salons, so that each thing shall have the setting and surroundings for which it was designed. Mr. Poole has been fortunate in his quest for only the choicest, most exquisite of its kind, so that the whole show will be most enlightening to those who are interested in such matters.

He himself is a veritable connoisseur in such matters, as his delectable house in Lake View avenue proves. The visitor there feels as if he or she were taken out of bustling clamorous, every day Chicago and transported to some older, riper city, so completely has Mr. Poole imported their original atmosphere, with the charming old chairs, tables, cabinets, pictures, rugs, and hangings with which his home is equipped. There he has his studio, and there he and "Harry" Milliken keep bachelors' hall in the most delightful fashion known to their species. Later in the winter Mr. Poole will betake himself and his palette, paints, and brushes to Jamaica.

Have you noticed the almost entire disappearance of our silver dollar from daily circulation? The old "cart wheel," as many dubbed it, was not a popular piece of money, but its absence makes one wonder what has become of it. When is the United States mint going to revive and furnish you and me with that handy bit of coin, the old fashioned copper 2 cent piece? We could use one every time we get on a street car or stop at a news stand.

Red Cross Seals Help Chicago Lead White Plague Fight

NEARLY 2,000 club women have answered the call of the Chicago Tuberculosis institute for volunteers to assist in this year's sale of Red Cross Christmas seals, backbone of the warfare on the white plague in Chicago and Cook county. The sale will begin on Dec. 1 and end on Dec. 10.

Cook county, owing to the enthusiasm with which the little seal has been received in the past, leads the world in the warfare on the white plague. No other community has so well equipped itself to fight the ravages of tuberculosis.

The large organization which will handle the seals this year was built up under the direction of Mrs. Annie Peaks Kenny, formerly of the American Fund for French Wounded. Immediately upon her return from France Mrs. Kenny was asked to take charge of the volunteer staff, recruited almost entirely from the memberships of the various women's clubs. There will be no house to house canvass or street solicitation, but "Santa Claus" booths will be placed throughout the city and county, where opportunities will be afforded to purchase the famous little penny seal.

Those in charge of the sale this year are stressing the argument that "tuberculosis is more deadly than war." Americans to the number of 67,882 perished in the world conflict; in the same period 200,000 Americans died at home of tuberculosis. Approximately 150,000 persons give their lives to tuberculosis in the United States every year. There are about 60,000 cases needing attention in Cook county today. Yet tuberculosis not only is curable—it is preventable.

Tuberculosis thrives upon ignorance, and to eradicate it a tremendous educational work must be done. This educational campaign is financed solely through the sale of the Christmas seals.

Among children tuberculosis is especially active. Mothers who allow their children to play on dirty floors or to use soiled toys must be reached by the institute's educational campaign, for much of the plague that now exists in Chicago is due to ignorance on simple rules of health.

In order to emphasize these fundamentals, the institute is installing a "health exhibit" at the Red Cross seal campaign headquarters on the first floor of the Lamont building, Randolph street and Michigan avenue. Here throughout the campaign period, Dec. 1 to 10, noonday meetings will be held, with prominent physicians as lecturers, and every phase of the prevention and cure of tuberculosis will be explained to the public.

The sale of the Christmas seal is nation-wide. The Chicago Tuberculosis institute is one of 1,000 arganizations affiliated with the National Tuberculosis association in a great campaign of education.

The Willing Workers' Woman's club, of which Mrs. Hugo King is president, will give a benefit dance on Saturday evening at the Auditorium hotel. The club, which was organized in 1903, has 800 members.

Mrs. Annie Peaks Kenny is Chicago campaign director for the 1919 sale of Red Cross Christmas seals, which will be held next month. Mrs. Kenny recently returned from overseas, where she was engaged in reconstruction work for several months.

GETTING OFF THE STILTS.

Napoleon's "hundred days" cost France 6,000,000,000 francs on top of the enormous waste occasioned by the revolution and the succeeding Napoleonic campaigns. The foreign trade of France in 1820 amounted to only $163,610,029. By 1861 it had mounted to $874,744,600.

It is difficult to get much music out of figures. But we cite these simple statistics of the post-Napoleonic period by way of reminding ourselves that the world has been on stilts before and that it adjusted itself.

Thoughtful persons are advising coolness. Nervous folk seem quite convinced that everything is upside down and never will be righted. We urge upon these excitable natures the wisdom of glancing back along some prominent milestones in history for reassurance.

Human energy, even in the prosecution of the most violent war, cannot endure forever. There must be calm after the storm. Just because our boat is being jerked about by the fag end of the tidal is no reason to fear that the sea will never again be smooth.

Many are anxious for readjustment, forgetting that there are certain laws to be obeyed before we can return to normal. These same laws compelled obedience in the post-Napoleonic period. For years the great powers were torn by external and internal conflicts. Blood and treasure were spent prodigally. Not in such quantities as in the great war, but in just as great proportion.

In the beginning of the nineteenth century the magnificent systems of modern communication had not been brought into use. Manufacture lacked the aid of modern invention. Agriculture was laborious. Wealth was produced by infinite toil. But it was expended with the wildest extravagance. In short, poverty and industrial depression were just as hateful as now. And yet the afflicted nations bent grimly to the task of reconstruction, with the result that prosperity speedily displaced panic.

In the face of appalling disasters such as the complete defeat of Napoleon and the indemnities laid by the powers as the result of the emperor's "hundred days," in less than five years France, to a man, was back at work and piling up wealth. The foreign trade expanded as we have shown almost to eight-fold before Louis Napoleon plunged the nation into the disastrous Franco-Prussian war. France had developed from the most unfortunate of the European powers to first place again.

England emerged from the Napoleonic wars in a sad state of unrepair. The burden of the conflict had fallen upon the British. If ever a people had reason to despair it was the English in 1815. For three years ensuing crops failed, business was bad, employment was retarded, and wages scanty. Beginning with 1821, agriculture responded to great energy. For three years crops were bountiful. Manufacture increased under a protective system.

English exports in 1820 were down to $17,045,125. The year 1859 saw exports increased to $126,697,320. In the period of readjustment—covering five years—there was despair and anxiety. Then came the turn for the better.

It is well to point out, as will be shown in subsequent editorials on the Franco-Prussian and civil wars, that the return of prosperity brought with it what seemed an inevitable frenzy of speculation and financial panic. And in just the same degree as we are able to take advice and solace out of the certain readjustment of industry after great wars we should be guided by the disasters that followed heedless extravagance and speculation.

Wars have been followed by chaos and fear. Chaos and fear have been followed by resolution and determination to mend what was broken and build anew. And the return of prosperity always has been accompanied by financial plunging and the extravagance of individuals.

Thus far we have had our share of chaos. By keeping steady we shall survive it. Prosperity and adjustment will return. We should hold fast to what we have; not fling it away in foolish buying and questionable investment. We should get along with fewer garments, less bounteous meals, by getting all the heat out of our coal and thus using less of it, by curbing the desire for luxuries.

Wars have been followed by financial panics. Let us repeat this. Financial panics find money fleeing from the grasp. Our savings banks are filled with deposits. The people are rich in Liberty bonds. The deposits should not be touched. The bonds should be guarded jealously. If depression comes, those who have deposits and Liberty bonds will sit on the top of the world.

Extravagance will fetch trouble. Shun extravagance. Money will abolish trouble. Save it.

NOBODY HOME.

The record of our Russian enterprises is incomplete and we fear will not gain grace as it gains exposition. It is a futility which warns against American rashness in certain phases of European and Asiatic movements with which the American is incompetent to deal because he does not know the circumstances in which he begins and cannot possibly foresee the place where he will emerge.

Accounts multiply to reveal the detestation in which American and Canadian soldiers held their duty. Their perplexity and anger was real, because their duty involved action. The perplexity at home was a disquieting doubt, but at home there was a presumption that there was a purpose and in action there was a certainty that there was none.

There has not been a disastrous failure in a military sense because the forces employed never were sufficient to make a disaster possible, but the futility condemns the policy and its authors.

In Russia, in Fiume, in Armenia, and Turkey can be seen undertakings proceeding from an interallied council operating under certain of the powers which would be vested in the council of the league of nations. If the council of the league of nations were able to proceed upon such a confusion of purpose as the interallied council has proceeded the result would be to keep Europe constantly embroiled.

OPEN THE GREAT LAKES TO THE ATLANTIC.

We urge upon Chicagoans, regardless of their immediate interests, the importance of arousing the great middle west in support of the project to throw the great lakes open to the ocean.

This is the middle west's own offspring. It was first proposed in this community. It has been incessantly agitated from the beginning in these columns and is at the head of THE TRIBUNE'S program for middle west development.

Strong efforts are needed. Chicago expects to gain its share of the benefits. Therefore Chicago must be foremost in developing the campaign. The city must be represented by every interest within its borders. The industrial associations are expected to go to the front. The Chicago Association of Commerce has made some headway. Its efforts must be reinforced by the energies of all civic and political organizations. The city's official family should speak out plainly.

As already has been suggested by THE TRIBUNE, there will be sectional jealousies. In fact, the prediction is being substantiated even now. But so long as the middle west is urging a vast national benefit, a boon to all America, this fact ought to set aside the quibblings of provincial antagonists.

There is as good reason for unhampered navigation from the sea into the great lakes as for the construction of the Panama or the Suez canals. This, too, we have said before. We repeat it because we think there is no more fertile or productive region in the whole world than that in the basin of the Mississippi river. And there is no more reason why the coal and grain and manufactured products of this great territory should be carried overland in freight cars than that other world necessities should be carried round the Horn.

The cost is not to be considered as against the enormous advantages. No matter what the expense of construction, it would be offset in a very short time by the burden of traffic. Many millions have been poured into Salt creeks.

AMERICANS ARE ASHAMED OF REALITIES.

Gen. Ludendorff told the German national assembly committee investigating war responsibility that the Germans took American prisoners who had "an entirely wrong or vague conception of what they were fighting for." In the war the Germans said frequently that American soldiers did not know what their own cause was.

Except in instances of great stupidity, which would be found in any large body of men, this was not true, but what the soldiers must have known were the basic causes of the United States in the war, and what they constantly heard were the causes, were so different that they probably were vague in their answers. It was their business as soldiers to be so on matters of military intelligence, but their replies can be explained by national psychology.

The American people are ashamed of facts. Their reticences, when reality is involved, control their expressed opinions. Luckily, these reticences do not always control their acts, but they nearly always make the acts more dangerous.

A realist hardly escapes being immoral in the United States. If he says that from certain causes will come certain consequences, he immediately seems to want the consequences to come from the causes; and if they are disagreeable he is condemned as a factor in their unpleasantness. If he recognizes a fact, he approves of it. Disapproval of a fact is indicated by denial of it.

This psychology is operating now in the United States to complicate the deliberations which have to do with international relations and the future of the United States.

When America went to war with Germany it went to war to preserve the security of the United States. It could not have had a better cause. It was the only cause which could justify conscription. But that best of causes entered so little into the explanations of American position that it is no wonder the soldiers who knew it was the reason did not feel that the American position had been defined if they stated it.

We had to sweep the empyrean for causes, and to find more in illusion than in reality the justification for war. Naturally the men who had to risk their lives did not warm up to these generalizations, and nevertheless they knew that they formed the main current of the civilian palaver and oratory.

The fact that if we did not fight Germany with allies we would have to fight her alone was a reality. It was a reality in American conviction and opinion, but the American sense of shame when confronted by a reality forced the national sentiment to seek somewhere else for a declaration of purpose and intent.

Thus we adopted an altruism which, having mostly blown off in froth, still has left a sediment in opinion and keeps our ideas of international relations from becoming clarified. We set out to free the world. It is perplexing to find that it is not free. We set out to make universal and abiding peace. It is disconcerting to find that we have not done so.

We remain ashamed of realities, however, and will continue to deny them if we hazard the prospects of the United States in doing so. That is why the United States is so dangerous to itself when it sits in a council of European nations. Europe uses emotions and illusions as war medicine, but when its elder statesmen sit in council they play poker.

Editorial of the Day

OCTOBER STRAWBERRIES.

[Ohio State Journal.]

We had yesterday a fine dish of October strawberries from the fruitful garden of our friend, Mr. Claude Meeker. It was a rare experience, while the winds were moaning through the trees and the clouds were filled with icy raindrops, to sit down to a feast of strawberries gathered in the open garden that chilly day. It seemed almost that June had come back with her smiles and offered you some rare gifts that she had completely forgotten. Yes, they were June gifts, for one could taste in them glimpses of blue skies, of soft and sweet south winds, and an atmosphere filled with many a pretty bird note. The berries looked good, were crimson and tasteful, and bright with the memories of past days. In the collection was a quantity of green berries and little blossoms, which, however, might not have found it possible to reach their rotund and crimson glory. While the strawberries were a curiosity, they were also a joy.

LESSONS FROM PANAMA.

THE health history of the population of the Canal Zone has many lessons for those who live elsewhere under the dominion of our government. In the 1918 annual report of the health department of the Panama canal Col. A. T. McCormack, chief health officer, says:

"The health department of the Panama canal is a model of its kind, entirely devoid of politics. One hundred per cent of the time of all of its employés is given to health work. As a result the Canal Zone is probably the healthiest section of the world today. In the cities of Panama and Colon violations of the sanitary regulations are punished by a fine or imprisonment by the health officer. The certainty of punishment makes resort to this power rarely necessary. It seems a pity that the great lesson of the sanitation of the canal cannot be carried to every home in America, so that the favorable results secured in this pest hole might be obtained at the very much smaller purchase price it would cost in our more favored climate."

The people in the zone are not all under the control of the government all of the time. Those who stay in the zone all the time are well protected. Such are most of the people along the canal and in the American towns near the native cities. In addition to these there are a considerable number of employés who work in the jungles and swamps. They are exposed to malaria and dysentery, at least when they are at work away out in the wild woods.

The two cities, Panama and Colon, are not under American supervision in quite the same sense the Canal Zone itself is. It is true that on health matters the authorities of the Canal Zone have great powers in both Panama and Colon, but at that their power is not equal to that they have on the zone itself.

Finally, there is the hazard which visitors bring. Because there is good sanitation and health protection in the strip of land ten miles wide and forty miles long, and two healthy cities adjacent, the people are not entirely safe. People who come into the zone from forty miles away bring in some malaria and typhoid, just as in this country in the old days typhoid ridden cities radiated typhoid into the country, and just as now almost typhoid free cities absorb typhoid from the country round about. As a part of the same consideration both Panama and Colon are ports of call for steamers coming from nearby north and west coasts of South America, where plague, yellow fever, and smallpox are at home.

In 1913 there was a population in the zone of 22,290. The maximum population was 90,434 in 1911. The death rate among employés was 8.11 per 1,000. American cities in the most favored sections are satisfied with rates of 14, but then they include young children and old people—two groups which furnish a large part of the deaths and which are practically not existent among the employés of the Canal Zone. This 8.11 is split into 7.13 for deaths due to disease and .98 for deaths due to external causes.

For a long time the death rate due to accidents was high. It has reached a fair level at last when we consider that much of the work is of the railroad construction, canal digging type—necessarily hazardous work. The death rate of employés fell from 41.73 to 5.77 in 1915. Since 1915 it has risen slowly and steadily. What might be termed the sickness rate fell from 28.48 in 1906 to 9.20 in 1916. It has risen to 11.19. Malaria was at its worst in 1909 with a rate of 8.21, and a death rate of 7.45. By 1917 this admission rate had fallen to 14 and the death rate to .06. The malaria admission rate has risen to 18 and the malaria death rate to .08.

The health of the people of Panama City and Colon has likewise continued to improve. Panama had a death rate of 44.75 in 1906. In 1918 this has reached 21.41. Panama has a population of 61,369.

Colon, with a population of 26,978, had a death rate of 51.42 in 1906, which fell to 23.62 in 1918.

The completer control over the employés of the Canal Zone caused their death rate to fall much more rapidly than did those of Panama and Colon. But, on the other hand, when the world war somewhat disorganized affairs in the zone, the rate rose. The death rates of Panama and Colon continue to fall. They responded more slowly to efforts at improvement in the first place, but they also continue improving. The death rate of the employés in the Canal Zone is abnormally low and much effort to keep it so is required. The death rates of Panama and Colon are more normal.

The great interest attaches to malaria. There is still considerable malaria in Panama. The number of cases of malaria in the sanitated area of the Canal Zone and in the two cities was 505 in 1916, 264 in 1917, and 182 in 1918. A total of 182 cases of malaria in a year among about 100,000 people, mostly Negroes and Central Americans, is not great, but it is still considerable. But there is need for workers in the jungle and about 2,000 men are constantly thus employed. The number of cases of malaria among these rose from 42 in 1916 to 173 in 1917 and 260 in 1918. The rate among the jungle workers was 130 per 1,000; among the other workers it was 7.7. Among the 2,000 jungle workers blood examination showed the presence of 32 malaria carriers. Complete cure of these should lessen the malaria rate among the jungle workers.

They have learned that in the tropics open ditches must have a concreted bottom and sides. They dig small drainage ditches and lay in them a concrete lining devised by one of the inspectors. This concrete half circle is ten inches in diameter and each segment is thirty inches long and weighs 100 pounds. Each segment is beveled to fit into the adjoining segments and to fasten to them with an iron pin and with concrete. This ditch lining can be rapidly laid, can be recovered if the ditch is changed, and in addition makes a self-cleansing, weed free, mosquito free ditch. The report again emphasizes the fact that mosquitoes breed in cow tracks in boggy pasture land. They do not allow cows to pasture on low lands within one and a half miles of human habitation during the rainy season.

In most parts of the cities and along the canal zone there are no mosquitoes. However, there are still a few marshes which cannot be drained and which must be filled in to get perfect results. Col. McCormack says:

"The absence of flies in the Canal zone is one of the most striking things to a visitor. It is even more remarkable that they are practically non-existent in the city of Panama. This is because all manure and garbage are removed and disposed of once a day."

At one hospital they have what they regard as model manure compost pits. There are six of them, square in shape and built of concrete. They are located in the side of a hill and are filled at the top and emptied on the side near the bottom. When a pit has been filled it is closed and left standing for six or eight weeks. The fermenting manure kills all fly larva and the product when distributed on the land is free from flies. Stables are very closely watched. No fly breeding stable is allowed to operate.

The report contains this statement: "No deaths from typhoid fever among employés occurred during the year." Two facts should be borne in mind in connection with this statement. The canal is in the tropics and typhoid fever was a great scourge there in the earlier days of the canal building.

Influenza appeared on the isthmus in September. It was supposed to have come from Porto Rico, to which island it came from Spain. There were 1,530 cases in the zone, principally among soldiers. There were no deaths in this outbreak. All cases of influenza were sent immediately to the hospital and there held in quarantine until well; 1,530 cases was a small ratio for a population of which young men formed so large a part. Col. McCormack says the fewness of the cases was due to prompt isolation, and the mildness was due to the fact that the sick were made to go to bed. Later nine ships having influenza aboard were held in quarantine at Colon. There were a good many deaths from pneumonia among their passengers and crews, both on shipboard and on land, while in quarantine, but the epidemic never again got a foothold. In the Colon hospital of twenty-two soldiers taken from the transport Kilpatrick, on account of influenza, ten died.

Smallpox appeared on the isthmus at the time of opening of the schools. The general vaccination against smallpox had not been done for four years. A fresh supply of vaccine was obtained and general vaccination was done. The disease was quickly controlled. The fresh supply of vaccine was necessary because it was found that the supply on hand had become impotent on account of heat. Smallpox vaccine loses its potency unless it is kept cool.

A Japanese passenger steamer with a full passenger list developed meningitis among its people while en route from Yokahama to Callao. It touched at Balboa and was allowed to proceed on its way. When it got to Callao there had been sixteen deaths aboard due to epidemic meningitis and the authorities would not allow the boat to dock. Permission was given them by cable to return to the canal zone. All cases were sent to the hospital and given injections of meningitis serum.

Cultures were made from the noses of 602 passengers and crew. Meningococci were found in the noses of 103 of these. The noses of these were irrigated with Dakin's solution followed by a spray of dichloramin-T in oil, 5 per cent. The bacteria disappeared from all the noses and throats except three. These were sent to their destination, but under observation and control.

The patients in the insane hospital conduct a dairy, a piggery and a poultry farm with profit to the government and with benefit to themselves.

ALLEY MUST BE PAVED.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The alley east of St. Louis avenue, south, between Sixteenth and Eighteenth streets, is unpaved and full of mudholes, which are almost impassable for an automobile after a rain, and, in fact, nearly all of the time. Further, glass and rubbish are thrown in them until it is a disgrace for any civilized community. Cannot this condition be remedied in some manner, either by filling up the holes or paving the alley? A. L. J.

Ashes and garbage are being removed once a week at this address. We find upon investigation that the alley is now above grade, and the only remedy for the condition complained of is to have same paved, as it will not stand more filling.

THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

NOW HOW ARE THE TIRES?

Chicago, Nov. 23.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The alley just south of my property is a regular mud hole. Is there a way to get the city to dump a few loads of cinders or broken concrete in the holes, the public school being just two blocks over and they surely have cinders to haul away?

It makes it hard on the tires of my machine coming through from Fifty-fourth street. I would appreciate it very much if the holes were filled in.

E. R. S.

Holes in the alley have been filled in with ashes, as requested. THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

HOW RAMBUNCTIOUS.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise through your column whether the following offense is punishable by law and whether the offender can be forced to pay the expense incurred. On Halloween an adult in our neighborhood painted in large black letters about a foot high the following words, "Out with the Jew; he lives here." This was painted on the sidewalk leading up to the steps and on the garage. It disfigured the entire sidewalk and, the paint being ineradicable, it necessitated repainting of our steps and recementing the sidewalk. M. G.

AMERICAN LEGION.

Headquarters, 29 S. La Salle, Chicago, Ill.—The membership in Illinois of the American Legion has passed the 100,000 mark, including both paid and unpaid memberships. Three hundred and seventy-five posts are established throughout the state, over one-third of which are located in Chicago. Many applicants do not understand that in order to become a full fledged member of the American Legion the yearly dues of $2 must be paid. It is possible that within a short time the dues will be increased to $3, which will include a paid membership and a paid subscription to the American Legion Weekly. Ordinarily a subscription to this paper costs $2 per year.

The new booklets being prepared by the Legion will not be ready for distribution until the first of December. For this literature showing the history, activities and general information about the American Legion send a stamped, addressed envelope to the Friend of the Soldier, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

The blank form above is an authentic copy of the American Legion application. Any soldier, sailor or marine, serving honorably during the late war is eligible, regardless of rank and rating, and may clip the coupon, fill it out and mail it to the American Legion headquarters, 29 South La Salle street, Chicago, Ill.

INSURANCE PREMIUMS.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 18.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—It is very interesting to watch the different rates quoted on insurance. My age at present is 31 and I wish to convert my policy of $5,000 into another form and probably reduce it at the same time. Will you please tell me how much a month I shall pay on each policy? If I should join the service again will it affect my policy in any way? Or if I should go to another country? B. F. N.

The monthly premium per $1,000 at 31 is $1.51; thirty payment life, $1.73; twenty payment life, $2.14; twenty year endowment, $3.37; thirty year endowment, $2.19; endowment maturing at age 62, $2.09. Policies are free of conditions as to residence, travel, occupation, military or naval service.

Manlius, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—By some mistake in accounting I failed to receive $7 due me from the paymaster while a private in France. When discharged from the service I asked for an adjustment, but they told me it would take extra time, so I let it pass. Please advise if I could now get this money, and, if so, what department to write to at Washington for adjustment. N. W.

O. K., "PUSSYFOOT."

Westerville, O., Nov. 18.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I think it only just to William E. Johnson, the Anti-Saloon League of America, under whose direction he is working in England, the United Kingdom Alliance of Great Britain, and the students who engaged in the prankish attack on Johnson, to say several things:

First, Mr. Johnson is in England at the express invitation of the alliance and other dry organizations which are older than the Anti-Saloon league.

Second, while the drys of the United States are helping the drys of England, the wets of the United States are over there helping the wets of England.

Third, although the United States has adopted prohibition, English wets are in the United States helping the American wets to set aside prohibition.

Fourth, the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain has declared that Mr. Johnson has a perfect right to speak over there. So all the talk of "butting in" is pure "punk." J. H. LARIMORE.

FROM DR. LYDSTON.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Under date of Nov. 12, Dr. John Dill Robertson replies, with answers that do not answer, to my criticism of the various legal measures proposed for the prevention of venereal diseases. I would suggest to Dr. Robertson that he read Spencer's "Study of Sociology," pp. 84 to 90, in which he describes the campaign that led to the passage of the contagious diseases act; acts so stringent as to annul all those safeguards built up to protect the rights of the individual, which the slow struggle of centuries had evolved. In racing parlance, one forms opinions largely on "form." Let us see how such corrective legislation has worked in the past.

In 1864 the contagious disease act was passed in England. Amendments were added in 1866 and 1869 establishing the compulsory examination of suspected persons, similar to the measures now advocated in the United States. In 1886 the contagious disease act with the compulsory feature was repealed after being in force twenty years.

A feature of the English act was the establishment of venereal clinics to which all infected persons were obliged to go.

In 1913 the British parliament appointed a royal commission to again investigate venereal diseases. The commission reported March 2, 1916, after a two years' study, in which over 25,000 inquiries were made. This commission reported that compulsory registration and medical notification of infected persons was a failure and advised against repeating these measures. It recommended general education as to the seriousness of these diseases and the dangers of their transmission and that the government provide the best opportunities possible for the examination and treatment of infected persons on their own volition.

America, of course, never learns any sort of lesson. We can't be convinced that the stove is hot until our own fingers are burned. But if America wants "martial law" I suppose we must have it. I am curious to see how statutes, laws, and regulations having their origin in army camps will work out in civil life. G. FRANK LYDSTON, M. D.

GREECE AND SMYRNA.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I take the liberty to call your attention to the fact that we have every reason to believe that your public statement referring to the effect that the allied council has refused to promise Greece permanent occupation of Smyrna, though a supposition, leaves the impression that the allies are not in harmony with Greece, which is not so just as much as said statement is supported.

Please let it be known that the Venizelos government and the Greek people have entertained a true feeling towards the allies ever since the world war has been declared in order to help to preserve the ideals of freedom and liberty and that the "world may be made safe for democracy," and as long as that was the real object of the war Smyrna, the devoted and true daughter of Greece "must be in it." VIEWS of a TRADE UNIONIST (4)
by George J. Knott

Mr. Knott is an ex-president of the Chicago Typographical Union

Radical Unionism

UNION men frequently paraphrase Decatur's famous declaration—doubtful in its expediency but loyal in its fealty: "My union, right or wrong, but my union." Or, "Whether the union is right or wrong, if I could not support it, I would at least keep silent." In this attitude the ground is taken that the union must always be right; that industrial peace is impossible; that the settlement of a wage dispute or a controversy is at best merely an armistice arranged for the time being; that capital is intolerant toward labor; that the union, to make effective progress, must be just as alert for points of vantage, just as watchful for loopholes through which to inject guerrilla warfare; that, right or wrong, the union must be supported.

A union man may esteem his fraternal societies, his church or personal associations, but his obligation to his union is his bread and butter, his standby in adversity, his friend in sickness and death. That he believes his union is his mainstay in the industrial struggle, and should be supported, "right or wrong," is illustrated in the raising of the defense fund for the McNamaras. Class consciousness is eating into his skin. It has been preached so persistently that he responds willingly to appeals for financial aid, "right or wrong." It is his fight against the system.

Radical unionism is a gourmand for trouble. It overrates its own capabilities and underrates the strength of its opposition. Then, when it finds itself in the swirl of defeat, comes the cry that "the fate of unionism is in the balance—the crisis is at hand when the union must fight for existence." With a little foresight and sane judgment the fight and the "crisis for unionism" would not have existed.

THE dissensions among union men are the result of personal grievance, simple enough at first—the sequence of discipline, infraction of established usage, or personalities that have no bearing on and should be separated from the common cause. They grow until they become a part of union politics to such an extent that incalculable damage is done the cause through injection of foreign issues. Cloaking a personal grudge in the livery of unionism to achieve personal satisfaction is too common a practice and leads to violations of the civil code for which the trade union movement is held responsible.

Men of peaceful, law-abiding convictions tacitly indorse slugging in trade unionism through failure to condemn it. The inner conscience condemns it, but either through pique or as a loyal union man he fails to condemn what he knows within himself is wrong. He hopes it will not become dangerous to the cause, consoling himself with the thought that, while it may be a violation of the law and good citizenship, it will be curbed before it becomes too common. So he compromises with his conscience by neglecting to condemn it. If it is a jurisdictional quarrel, he will express the opinion that the combatants should be placed in a ring to fight it out until one or the other is annihilated. Failure to condemn the practice, which his better manhood should dictate, is an open indorsement, although it be a practice he may inwardly shrink from. He excuses himself by asserting violence is the work of others outside the union, but his responsibility is none the less.

When he lacks the moral courage to condemn it he should blame no one for the stigma under which trade unionism rests when ruffianism is laid at its door. A trade unionist can be proud of his organization when the officials and membership condemn physical force, declining to practice it, either through their own or hired agencies. Trade unionism as a business proposition is a powerful force. As a sandbagging proposition it is gravitating toward the penitentiary and retribution.

It is unfortunate that organized labor is handicapped by the egotism of radicals, but the acquiescence of the membership is responsible for it. It takes no one, no interest except its own into cognizance.

RADICAL unionism continually dwells upon the dangerous mines laid by the "capitalistic class." He has no friendship for the employer who has demonstrated his friendship toward organized labor. He believes every man who is ambitious to become a factor in the world of business, who saves a few dollars to begin with, immediately becomes an enemy to the cause of labor. The new employer, notwithstanding his sympathies have been with his union, finds himself forced to the other side of the imaginary line. No matter what he may do or say, he is, perforce, an enemy from this time on. As a natural consequence he begins to erect barriers around his business, becomes a greater or lesser opponent of his trade union, in the desire to protect himself from the rabid measures urged by his erstwhile companion, from whom he has a right to expect the kindest remembrances.

The conservative man is not easily carried away by flights of oratory. While he acknowledges there is a diversity of interest between himself and his employer, he believes that if he gives a reasonable amount of service for his wage there is no reason why amicable relations should not continue. He recognizes the employer has some rights, and that collective bargaining means a give and take disposition with a view toward maximum benefit at a minimum of economic destruction.

Still, he is impressed with a vague belief that he is the victim of a conspiracy. It makes little difference whether he gets $5 or $10 a day; in time it reverts back to the unseen, inexorable power that clutches his existence. It makes little difference whether he spends his money in caring for his family, like a model, industrious citizen, or whether he spends it in booze and riotous living. It is all sweated out of him in some form, leaving it merely to his tastes as to what he will choose in exchange.

The trade unionist realizes this state of affairs. He reasons, he talks, he strikes; he may be a philosopher in a sense, and urge peaceful methods in struggling for his birthright, or he may be the most radical of the extremists in his methods for retaining his meager hold on life. Collectively he knows he is up against a powerful, overwhelming force. Individually he differs in the ways and means to overcome it; it only remains for time to demonstrate the most potent influence in righting the wrongs he suffers. From the present outlook the radical has the upper hand in the argument. He assumes the spotlight, and the moths and millers among the wage earners, who know something is the matter, but are unable to fathom the cause, are attracted to the glow-worm that offers a remedy, whether efficacious or no.

WHY FOREIGNERS are RADICALS
by S. M. Mattlich

[This article is printed as written.]

TO EVERY AMERICAN CITIZEN.

THAT he may know why and how the foreigners are led to go on strikes. Take the ordinary type of the foreigners. Most of them are the sons of peasants and farmers. In most of the cases are like this: Born on a farm and probably raised with some or without any education. Living under the form of Government. Government of tyranny and oppression. Country where no one has any voice excepting titled men, such as Dukes, Counts, and Byrans. When a young man is grown to an age where he may be called to the army, to be nothing but the slave, and defend the "Titles" of his Masters. He begins to think and how to avoid and get away from this. He heard so much about the "Golden America." He made up his mind to go there, but he has no money. He talks it over with his father or some relations how to get the necessary funds.

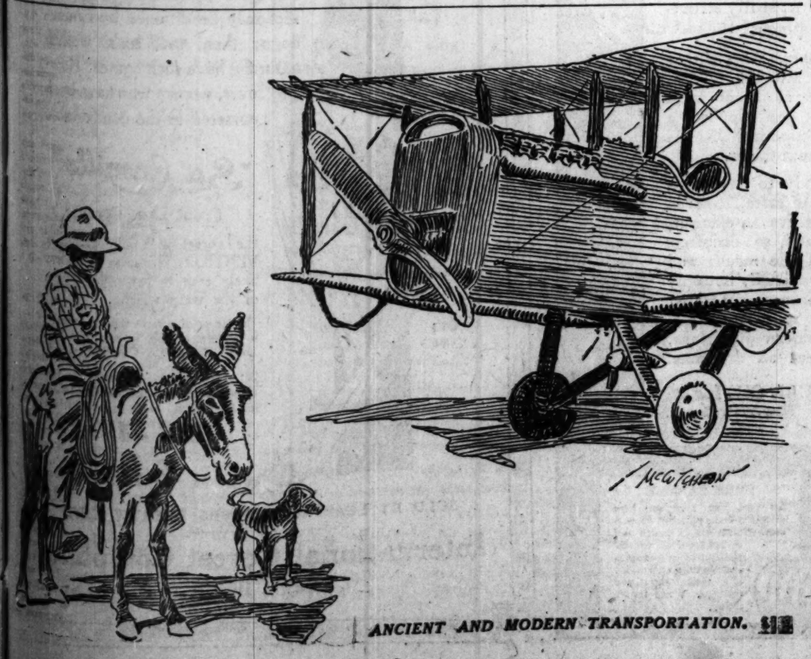
Well he goes and mortgages his farm that he has and everything he has on it with a twenty-five per cent interest, with the agreement that he is to pay this money back with interest in a year's time. Well, he gets the money and starts for "America." He lands i.. New York, faces the emigration authority. May be he has no more money left with him, if he has any, it is very little, and the first place he goes to is the industrial and manufacturing and mining. He is ignorant to the language and the ways and laws of the country, probably is met by some agent, who directs him to the most unconditional places to work. He is treated the worst. He is called a "Dago," "Macaroni," and everything imaginable.

He is put to work. Men bossing him treats him the worst. The more work he can get out of him and less money and after he makes that hard earned few dollars. There are always some sharks trying to separate it from him. Perhaps he fails to pay the money back he has borrowed from the man to come over on. Mortgage has taken his home. He has nothing over there that he left and gained nothing over here. After staying a while in this country he gains a little knowledge of the English language, so he is able to hold a conversation and perhaps the agitator or the Union organizer comes to him. This man may be the type of a Socialist or Bolshevist or propaganda, whatever he may be and this agitator has no troubles to convince him these ideas that he wants him to follow. Perhaps he approaches him in a nice and polite way. This poor laborer thinks this is my friend and sympathizer.

In the first place his agitator starts him off with a story, telling him—look here good man, you are in a class of labor, so am I. You are making millions for others and nothing for yourself. Look at those great buildings, who own them, and the swell automobiles and men riding with their wives and friends, all dressed in silk and furs and diamonds, and a bunch of pet dogs and monkeys with them. They think more of their pets and dogs than of us, and we are ones that are making the luxuries for them. Let us quit that and join the Union and organize the Labor of the World, so that we may have the voice of the nations for everything produced in this world, belongs to us the laboring man.

This is the story the agitators tell him and he has no trouble to convince him to his ideas. He becomes a Union member and striker. In the majority of cases you will find in all the largest in the leading industrial centers, mining and manufacturing those places are filled and operated by such a class of labor. Reading the article and the criticism against the foreigners and in other ways you will find the majority of the organizers and strike leaders and men that hold offices are the Americans and American born citizens.

I, as a foreigner of fourteen years in America, I have no criticisms, I am perfectly satisfied with my adopted country, but I am bringing this article before the American public where I have a practical experience in life from the water boy in the construction camps, Foreman and interpretor, also a contractor. This article will serve to the intelligent American public as a key so that they may see and know how to judge the foreigners and a foreign situation.



ANCIENT AND MODERN TRANSPORTATION.

PATROL on the RIO GRANDE
by John T. McCutcheon

WE arrived in Marfa in the darkness just before dawn, and had to walk the unimposing streets until a little eating house opened at 6:30. Here we were joined by John Kerr, the government scout, who was to be our guide on this trip through the Big Bend district. And if there was anything or anybody there that he did not know about, I did not discover it.

Kerr had been in many expeditions across the border; had, in fact, ranched in Mexico before the region became too threatening for Americans. It had been Villa himself who warned him to get out and save his 700 cattle by driving them up into Texas. His observations on border conditions were therefore representative and interesting.

He feels that Villa has certain qualities of leadership which give him a more loyal following than Carranza; when he gives his word he keeps it, in spite of being an ex-bandit with rough ways. Kerr is convinced Mexican conditions cannot be stabilized until the United States goes in and cleans things up. This view receives monotonous repetition along the border today just as it did in 1914 when Frederick Palmer and I were studying conditions in Mexico.

But Kerr admits that all devilry is not confined to Mexicans. Some discreditable work has been done by deserting American soldiers who have joined the roving Mexican bands. Americans do much of the smuggling of arms. The day before I left two were caught in the act of taking a machine gun and ammunition across the border.

As we drove along the trails Kerr retailed to us with endless variety and interest the lore of the Big Bend.

WE had expected to stay in Marfa long enough to call upon the C. O. of the district, Col. Hornbrook, and then start for the border in a motor car loaded to twice its capacity with bedding rolls, supplies, extra tires, and a battery of rifles. Our party consisted of Capt. J. M. Patterson, Capt. Kent Hunter, John Kerr, and myself.

At the colonel's suggestion, however, we altered our plans, and with the telegraphed authorization of Gen. Dickman, in command of the department at San Antonio, Capt. Patterson and I arranged to fly down next morning with the air patrol. The flying field is a couple of miles from town. Lieut. Railey is in command with a detachment of forty pilots, mechanics, wireless men, etc. Eight canvas hangars are ranged in orderly whiteness at the edge of a level stretch of prairie, from which the bear grass, Spanish bayonets, and other vegetation have been removed.

I spoke in a former article of the two "beats" these air patrols cover on alternate days unless the weather is absolutely prohibitive—one to El Paso and back; the other to Presidio, then down the river to La Jitas and back to Marfa—each about 200 miles across desolate, dangerous country and mountains. Forced landings are thus attended by considerable peril, always to the machine, often to the flyers.

We asked if the air patrols had accomplished much of practical military value.

"I hardly think so, directly at least," answered the aviator, "but as a moral force I think the patrols have a real value. The Mexicans see that we are on the job day after day, and I'm sure it has a restraining effect."

"How low can you fly? Can you scout the country from the height you have to fly at?"

"We often come down to 200 feet if we see anything suspicious. But from our usual flying altitude of 2,000 feet we can spot any movement or group of men on the hills. And we can command a much wider view than the cavalry could possibly do."

THE day was dull, with gray, low hanging clouds, but promptly at 10 our two De Haviland 4s arose from the field, Lieut. Moon piloting Capt. Patterson's plane, Lieut. Harold Peterson piloting mine. Peterson is one of the two aviators who were recently held for ransom in Mexico by the bandits under command of Jesus Renterias. Both he and Moon are masters at the flying game.

The planes quickly reached 2,000 feet and for several miles flew wing and wing, with scarcely twenty feet separating them—very neighborly flying. The first thirty miles was over the high table land of the cattle ranges, with the narrow ribbon of Alamito creek winding between the vast grazing herds. Then mountains—Frenchman hills, Black hills, Chinati, and Cienega mountains, the latter a continuation of the Sierra Vieja mountains, or, as they are better known, the Rim rock. We picked up the upper course of Cienega creek and saw far down on our right, snuggled in the mountains with Cibolo creek winding through it, the town of Shafter, where Texas' only silver mine is located.

Fifty-five miles as the crow flies from Marfa lies Presidio. A scattering of adobe houses and the few stores and homes of the Mexicans constitute this little army post. The normal population is about 100. A mile away across the river is the Mexican custom house, and farther back the town of Ojinaga, which has figured so often in the Villa and Carranza fighting.

A wide sweep, which carried us over the river, and a slanting glide landed us on the rough and barren field behind the military section of the town, where Capt. MacKinley leaped out of a jitney ambulance to extend the hospitality of the post. Although originally a Chicago man, the last time we had met was in the Camarines campaign in Southern Luzon when he was a member of Col. Dorst's 45th volunteer regiment in the Philippines.

CAPT. MacKINLEY asked if we cared to go over and visit the Mexican general in command at Ojinaga. Mr. Gourley, the immigration inspector and the Mexican consul in Presidio, arranged the passport formalities, and we left with the injunction that we must be back on the American side before 4:30 in the afternoon. None of us was allowed to take fire arms across the river.

A team of mules, an ancient surrey, and a primitive ferry formed our means of transportation, and after reporting at the custom house we secured a Mexican conveyance to climb the rocky slope up to Ojinaga. This town is, in the main, roofless and battered to a state of woeful dilapidation; it strongly suggests a village of northern France. In a little adobe house on the main street were the headquarters of Gen. Cardona.

This gentleman proved most affable and at once sent a staff officer for refreshment. The officer shortly reappeared and from various pockets drew forth bottle after bottle of Chihuahua beer—warm but wet. A group of staff officers solemnly watched and a clerk at a desk worked furiously over masses of reports.

Capt. MacKinley has had long experience with Spanish speaking people. He not only speaks it himself like a native, but has mastered many of the Indian dialects of Mexico. With this invaluable equipment and his knowledge of native psychology, he is a most excellent man for liaison work on the border. Our visit became a social event, with apparently the best of relations existing.

WE returned via Marfa to El Paso by automobile. As our trip had been immediately preceded by the greatest rainfall ever recorded in Texas, we suffered in consequence. Big army trucks traveling those soft dirt roads had churned them into frightful chuck holes. A few days before a train of twenty-eight heavily loaded trucks were all mired in one place and a tractor tank had to go and pull them out.

We had two punctures in the first hour after leaving Presidio and passed one big army truck on its side. It took us three days to motor through the Big Bend, and not till we reached Sierra Blanca on our way westward toward El Paso did we strike good roads. Around El Paso they are splendid. And after the towns of the Big Bend, El Paso itself seemed like a Paris or London in size and brilliancy.

Lieut. Harold Peterson, one of the ransomed American aviators.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW
By Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"Jeremy" (Doran), by Hugh Walpole.
"Linda Condon" (Knopf), by Joseph Hergqeshelmer.
"Colas Breugnon" (Holt), by Romain Rolland.
"The Builders" (Doubleday-Page), by Ellen Glasgow.
"Light" (Dutton), by Henri Barbusse.
"Mrs. Marden" (Doran), by Robert Hichens.

NONFICTION.

"Theodore Roosevelt" (Houghton-Mifflin), by William Roscoe Thayer.
"The Abolishment of Death" (Cosmopolitan), by Basil King.
"A Childhood in Brittany" (Century), by Anne Douglas Sedgwick.

"PINK ROSES"—that is the very appropriate title of Gilbert Cannan's story of how the war came to Matthew Trevor and a few others in London; appropriate if one thinks of those garishly pink, blatantly tawdry artificial flowers which dazzle the weak and disgust the sensitive which are the peculiar property, when soiled and frayed, of the inebriated charwoman's bonnet in English plays and novels. While the world was a madhouse of hate and a deeper, finer love than men had ever felt for one another, of strange scuttlings for safety and undreamed of courage, of griefs which shattered faith and sorrows which brought God close, of horror and ugliness and exaltations of spirit which lifted man into the realms of absolute beauty; while the world was so wrong that it never could be right again and so right that it never could go back into its wrongness, Trevor Matthews shut out the world and lived in his pink, rose scented paradise with a girl whose only redeeming decency was her loyalty to him.

Theirs is such a tawdry story. There is no fineness in the thing anywhere. It would be a grubby tale at any time, but to be written down as a tale of London in the great war—somehow it leaves one sick at heart that such should be the contribution of any man of literary power toward the fictional record of the war. When Gilbert Cannan began writing novels he was looked upon as an extremely logical person upon whom to pin one's faith in the future of the English realistic novel. He has been increasingly disappointing lately. "Pink Roses" might have been an unpleasant but a good novel if Gilbert Cannan had been the genius that it was once hoped he would be. Its subject matter is, however, no less appropriately "Pink Roses" than its literary form.

"Jurgen" [McBride] is the most fantastic tale in all literature, probably. It is so fantastic that I, for one, am lost in the mazes of symbolism and mysticism. Beautifully written, rich in mythological lore, with a gay, swashbuckling pawnbroker as hero of adventures various and multicolored, it is, however, a tale that leaves me with a feeling that I am hopelessly unsophisticated and that I must needs cry, "What does it all mean?"—for it certainly means something more than it actually says. Mr. Cabell answers such voices in the wilderness with: "This is a story with precisely as many meanings as the reader has brain cells." I'm going to accept it as the thousand and second and third and later Arabian nights' entertainments and not consider my mental state too seriously impaired. By the way, the first edition of "Jurgen" was exhausted two weeks after its publication in September and the second edition is held up by the printers' strike, not, as some one facetiously suggested, by the suppressors. To Chicago belongs the honor of using up more copies of the first edition than any other city.

"The Theater Through Its Stage Door" [Harpers] is a group of informal talks by David Belasco on phases of his work and of a stage career in general. He writes very simply and sympathetically of the ardors of a career, of the joys of success, and shares some of the secrets of his own methods. More of those secrets, more of the mechanics of the art of acting, more of the mysteries of stage effects unveiled would have made an even more enjoyable book. He says that he has written it for the countless eager souls who write to him for advice or plead for audiences.

"Art and the Great War" [Dutton] is a comprehensive reproduction of the work of the great artists of the United States, Great Britain, and France, selected by Albert Eugene Gallatin and printed in a handsome large quarto volume with 200 full page prints. It is an expensive as well as a beautiful volume. A book of pictures which brings the war back to every one and which is within the financial reach of all is C. Le Roy Baldridge's "I Was There" [Putnam], reproductions of the famous Stars and Stripes cartoons, the work which Roy Baldridge did as the official artist of the men who were there.

A translation of the 1916 Goncourt prize book, "L'Appel du Sol" ("The Call of the Soil"), by Adrien Bertrand, has been brought out in this country by John Lane. Compared with the later Goncourt war books, "Under Fire" and "Civilization," it seems more of a record of the martial spirit of the new France of the great war than an inherently great piece of literature. It has a decided warmth of patriotism in it which the later volumes do not have, a love for the soil of France as well as her spirit. But it would not live, as "Under Fire" and "Civilization" will live, because it is a masterpiece, despite its timely appeal. M. Bertrand, of whom it was predicted that he would become one of the great figures in French literature, gave, as many another artist, his life on the battlefield, fighting, as Lucien Fabre says, "for all this soil that has brought me under the influence of its mysterious will to live."

There are rumors that the Saturday Evening Post will go into the publishing business next year and bring out in book form the serials, political, fictional, and otherwise, that have run in the magazine. The Cosmopolitan has just started such a publishing firm. They have brought out thus far three books—Elsie Janis' story of her work in the A. E. F., Basil King's arguments for the deathlessness of souls, and James Oliver Curwood's "The River's End."

"For Days and Days" [Stokes] is the dull title of one of the most charming books of verse for children that has been written since the days of "A Child's Garden of Verse." Annette Wynne has made all of the delightful rhymes which make "For Days and Days" a thesaurus.

"In the Sweet Dry and Dry" [Boni & Liveright], by Christopher Morley and Bart Haley, is the most gingenuous tale of the future of prohibition that has been written. It makes of that noble state a quaffing-stock, to quote the authors.

A book which any one who is interested in this jolly business of writing books cannot miss is William Webster Ellsworth's "A Golden Age of Authors" [Houghton Mifflin]. It is a treasure trove of personalities and impressions of the men we read and wish we could read more about.

"The Face of the World" [Moffat Yard] is another of Johan Bojer's charts of a soul at war with the world. "The Great Hunger" was one of the great books of the year. This one is no more than a resteeping of the same leaves of thought. It makes one wonder if all of the great Norwegian's ten novels are alike, and if his four plays tell the same story. His four volumes of fairy tales must have a different theme. They are all in the process of being translated so that we shall soon know. Mr. Bojer may tell us himself next year. He is coming in March, and for his visit there will be an English translation of a biography and critical study of him.

E. Temple Thurston has a genial, chatty style, with a bit of whimsy to give it zest. He has a gypsy spirit in his style, somewhat akin to his characters. "The City of Beautiful Nonsense" was, in plot as well as in style, as whimsical as its title. The sequel to it, however, "The World of Wonderful Reality" [Appleton], has a plot so thin in places that it is threadbare. Only the occasional whimsical style of the author saves it from being a dull and dowdy tale.

"The Two Crossings of Madge Swalue" [John Lane] is the fictionization of the true story of the marriage of a Belgian and an Englishwoman, of their desertion of the husband's native land, of the war, his death, and the return of his wife to the old home in Bruges that the child of her martyred husband might be born there. It is a simple tale, told by one of Belgium's most distinguished novelists, Henri Davignon, and translated into English by Tita Brand-Cammaerts, the wife of Emile Cammaerts.

Alexander Black, author of "The Great Desire" [Harpers], was known for many years from coast to coast as "the picture play man." Before moving pictures happened—there was such a stone age—Alexander Black made photographs to illustrate stories, put them on a screen by means of a special stereopticon and stood in the dark and spoke for all of the characters. His "novels on a white sheet" drew among their audiences for first nights such men and women as William Dean Howells, Edward Everett Hale, Margaret Deland, Frank Stockton, Augustus Saint Gaudens.

"A Damsel in Distress" [Doran] is P. G. Wodehouse's latest literary frivol, and a completely diverting frivol it is, too. P. G. Wodehouse has that delicate quality of insouciance that was the charm of the deft Oscar Wilde. Added to that he has a genius for complicated situations in his plots. The clearest drive, straight into the sunset, will suddenly be bunkered by a literary earthquake, and a putt for happiness, so short as to seem scarcely worth the time to click it off on the typewriter, will be stymied by a well played visitor. He has a magician's hand when it comes to picking plots out of his sleeve. And they are all so frittering and foolish and wholly amusing. I never find a Wodehouse book dull—either printed or sung and spoken. That same quickness of repartee that makes his musical comedies certain hits makes his stories best sellers. And it is a real art to do a light thing lightly and artistically, an art in which American writers need practice.

Henry Justin Smith, late city editor of the Daily News and later realizing the ambition of every newspaper man in the world to get a shot at the war stuff, is in Paris, probably waiting for his copy of his first novel, "The Other Side of the Wall" [Doubleday Page]. It isn't a book which will get the sweepstakes as the great American novel, but it has sincerity and a point of view—and that's more than most first novels have, or later ones, either. It is a story of Chicago, of that gay, unstable, new rich part of the upper north side which Mr. Smith veiledly calls Lakeside. When the war comes to Lakeside, the grand scheme of things muddles the lives of all of the "crowd," wrecks a few, but the phoenix of fineness arises from the ashes. Mr. Smith evidently thinks there's something rotten in the Denmark of flat buildings, but something fundamental and real, too, that flat buildings are life. Novel point of view, and Mr. Smith exploits it with real sincerity.

"The Awakening of Asia" [Boni & Liveright], by H. M. Hyndman, was held up two years by the English censor. Mr. Hyndman holds the unpopular view that European trade interests, European religious propaganda, European administration, and European domination have been almost wholly harmful.

I saw a most interesting bit of "Penrod" manuscript the other day, including instructions to the illustrator, with sketches by Booth Tarkington, who, you know, wanted to be an illustrator before he began a life of slavery to the pen by writing a prize story at Princeton. The special instruction which pleased me most was this, "Always, except Penrod be indoors, represent him as accompanied by 'Duke.' George Buchin's 'Duke' is almost right, though not quite meek enough." And he always signs his initials, N. B. T.

Cast an eye over Booth Tarkington's prospects for this year. In August "Ramsay Milholland" [Doubleday Page] was published. It has thus far had a greater sale even than "Penrod." At the same time "Up from Nowhere," written in collaboration with Harry Leon Wilson, was being played in New York. Another play, "Clarence," has been produced in New York and been hailed by critics as the best American light comedy in captivity. Still a third play, "The Gibson Upright," like "Up From Nowhere," written with Harry Leon Wilson, is soon to appear on Broadway, and as it will be published in book form, Mr. Tarkington will have an audience limited only by the rigors of the mental test. To break the long suffering back of the w. k. dromedary, "Monsieur Beaucaire" is coming to New York as a musical comedy, fresh from a London triumph. And they say that love and cheese and kisses is the prescribed fare of the man who seeks fame and fortune by his pen. Nowadays those who seek find—and their diet is not Ramazanical.

In an open eyed, copy book, carefully wavering hand there is a proud signature in a book which occupies a place of honor in my library. The hand is none other than the hand of the Tabloid Book Reviewer at the age of 8. The book is "Beautiful Joe," and it sits in regal state because it was one of the first real books I ever owned and it has always been beloved with "Black Beauty" and "The Silver Skates." Quite frankly, I'm afraid to read those three books again lest they show clay. In the same spirit, I am afraid to read Marshall Saunders' new book, "Golden Dicky" [Stokes], lest the memory of "Beautiful Joe" be, like the magnolia, marred by the touch of a too sophisticated mind. But I tried "Golden Dicky" on an eager little tot, who said: "It's jus' bewful."

Randolph Bourne, a scholar and a gentleman of letters, died all too soon for the good of American literature. His judgment on a book was always worthy of respect, though one did not always agree with him. But if he said two weeks before his death that "Iron City" [Boni & Liveright], by M. H. Hedges, was the finest first novel he had ever read and "one of the few great American novels," as the publishers of "Iron City" say he did, his critical judgment must have had a prescience of the end. "Iron City" is just like other mediocre first novels—eager young man makes fame and fortune through difficulties, tries to uplift the world, has strong enemies, capital, women, gambling (the enemies are always one of the three), talks like the captions in a movie, and nowadays comes out heroically for the holy war while others are scoffing and saying, "It is not our war," and finally (though Cosmos does not) goes off to battle, a noble volunteer. And such an absurdly cosmic name for a hero!

Thanksgiving Day to Be Observed in All Churches

By the Rev. F. L. Gratiot.

The Rev. Hugh Elmer Brown

The Rev. Hugh Elmer Brown, D. D., is pastor of the First Congegational church, Evanston. The church celebrated its fiftieth anniversary last Sunday and during the following week.

THANKSGIVING day will be observed in practically all churches by special services and sermons. In the Roman and Greek Catholic churches high masses will mark the day; the Congregational descendants of the Pilgrim founders of the day will gather in accordance with the president's proclamation for worship in their churches; the celebration of the Holy Eucharist in Episcopal churches, and services of song, prayer, and sermon in Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, and other Protestant churches, as well as Jewish synagogues will carry out the spirit of the day, and the time honored request of the Thanksgiving day proclamation that Americans "unite in their homes and in their several places of worship in ascribing praise and Thanksgiving to God, the author of all blessings and the master of our destinies."

The president calls attention to the fact that a year ago our Thanksgiving was for the cessation of the great war, "that through divine aid the right was victorious and peace had come to the nations which had so courageously struggled in defense of human liberties and justice."

We have no less to be thankful for in the events of the last year. "In spite of the confusion of our economic life we have prospered," he says. "Our harvests have been plentiful, and of our abundance we have been able to render succor to less favored nations. Our democracy remains unshaken in a world torn with political and social unrest."

For the future he asks that "the American people reconsecrate themselves to those principles of right which triumphed through God's merciful goodness," and that with the same spirit of unselfishness with which we entered the war "we should strive to aid by our example and by our cooperation in realizing the enduring welfare of all peoples and in bringing into being a world ruled by friendship and good will."

In the giving of thanks for God's blessings and benefits in the past, and in the aspirations for world-wide peace and brotherhood, churches of all kinds will unite in obeying the decree.

The Rev. Simon Peter Long will preach a Thanksgiving day sermon at the downtown Lutheran service this afternoon at the Studebaker theater. The service begins at 4 o'clock. The subject will be, "How We Can Be Thankful All the Time for Everything."

The Rotary club will hold a Thanksgiving day service at the Cort theater at 10 a. m.

A sixteen day evangelistic campaign is being conducted by the First Church of the Nazarene, Sixty-fourth street and Eggleston avenue. The Rev. R. T. Williams of Nashville, Tenn., will be the preacher. Services will be held every evening and on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoons.

The union ministers' meeting at the Association auditorium tomorrow morning at 10:30 will be addressed by the Rev. Frederick Shannon, D. D., pastor of the Reformed Church on the Heights, Brooklyn, N. Y. The meeting is held under the auspices of the Chicago Church federation.

The Methodist church of Forest Park observes its anniversary today. The Rev. John Thompson, superintendent of city missions, will deliver the address.

The Sunday school of the Auburn Park Swedish Methodist church, Seventy-eighth street and South Racine avenue, will hold a Thanksgiving day service at 9:30 a. m.

Thanksgiving week marks important stages in the "drives" of several churches. For the Presbyterians it is "ingathering week," when "members and money" will be called to the service of the church.

The Lutheran churches conduct this week their every member canvass for the purpose of locating "lost and strayed" Lutherans, who are resident in the community, but not connected with their churches, and also for the purpose of subscribing for their $2,000,000 budget for benevolence. They hope by means of this campaign to double the present amount.

The home missions council, representing thirty-nine Protestant denominations, also announces this week as set apart for a special purpose. The theme is to be discussed is "The Soul of Democracy—Personal and Social Service."

In every Roman Catholic church throughout the world today "Peter's pence," the annual offering made for the pope's charitable funds, will be taken up. Originally the gift of a penny a family, it has now become an offering on the part of every communicant according to his or her means. Last Sunday a letter from Archbishop Mundelein appealing for a generous offering was read in every Roman church in the archdiocese of Chicago.

ALMOST A MIRACLE

By Guy F. Lee.

Pa's radical as all git-out: he loves Lenine and Trotzky;
He favors shorter hours or none; he rails and rants a lotzky
At Capital. The Proletariat, the Toiling Masses
Are ground beneath Oppression's heel, crushed by the Ruling Classes.
Pa sizes up Bill Haywood as the proper kind of neighbor
And thinks the I-Won't-Works have got the right idee of labor.
Pa mostly talks like patrons of Ex-Barkeep Billy Dorgan,
But jes' 'fore Christmas Pa's conservative as Morgan.

For 'leven months each year we hear Pa give the Boss the devil,
But when December looms his voice takes on a kinder level;
As Winter nears, with promise of a rake-off, a transition
Is noted in his attitude that baffles definition.
The month of Yule breeds charity of spirit in Pa's gizzard
And there's a transformation that is worthy of a wizard.
Yep, Pa's a Red, a Bolshevik, a wild and woolly plotter—
But jes' 'fore the Bonus Week, Pa's mild as milk and water!

Breathing Germ-Laden Air

IF in the very streets, open and wind-swept, we cannot help inhaling myriads of germs, how much more danger must there be in the crowds such as we mingle with in stuffy street-cars and other crowded places!

Crowds mean germ danger. The throat is the germs' easiest route into the system. Throat protection, therefore, is of vital importance. And science has supplied a trustworthy means of protection in FORMAMINT, the germ-killing throat tablet.

It is a little tablet—handy to have with you at all times—pleasant in taste. Sucked like candy, it frees in the saliva an efficient, yet harmless, germicide and so disinfects every nook and corner of the mouth and throat. A tablet taken occasionally not only soothes away irritation but insures that throat "cleanliness" so necessary to health. Endorsed by over 5,000 American physicians. 50 tablets for 50 cents—at all druggists.

Are Big Hips and Tight Waists Coming Back?

The small waist and large hip effect may be attained by camouflage; then, too, some women naturally have such figures. However, women who have been corseted in the comfortable

THIS CUP FREE

This Jiffy Measuring Cup is free to users of Jiffy-Jell. Just send us the end labels from two Jiffy-Jell packages—the labels naming the flavor—and we will mail the cup.

This aluminum cup holds exactly one-half pint. Fill twice with boiling water to dissolve one package Jiffy-Jell. It also holds exactly one cup, as called for in many recipes. Ordinary cups so vary in size that many recipes are spoiled. So this exact cup, with markings showing fractions of a cup, is essential in every home.

Crushed Fruit Desserts
Delightful Dainties at Trifling Cost

Free Dessert Molds
These Individual Dessert Molds come in assorted styles, six to the set. The six will serve a full package of Jiffy-Jell. We send the full set for 5 end labels. The molds are aluminum, and the set is worth 60c.

We make these offers to show more women what Jiffy-Jell means to them.

Jiffy-Jell differs vastly from other quick gelatine desserts. Each package contains a bottle of condensed fruit juice.

We crush the fruit, condense the juice, and bring you real fruit in abundance in these Jiffy-Jell desserts.

That's the important point. Flavor is mere taste, and often artificial. The fruit itself is rich in earthy salts. Everybody needs it every day.

For a Few Cents

Fresh fruit and canned fruit are expensive. Here are rich fruit dainties which are not.

And they are rich in fruit. Half a pineapple, for instance, is used to flavor one Jiffy-Jell dessert. Then almost a whole lemon is used to acidulate the mixture.

Yet a package of Jiffy-Jell serves six people in mold form, and twelve if you whip the jell—all for a few cents.

It is also quick. Simply add boiling water, as directed on package, then the fruit-juice flavor from the vial, and let cool.

Millions are using these quick, economical fruit desserts, and no home now should miss them.

Try These Flavors

Try Loganberry and Pineapple for desserts. Try Limefruit flavor. It makes a tart, green salad jell. Mix in your salad before cooling. Or mix in meat scraps and make an appetizing meat loaf.

Try Mint flavor. It makes a zestful mint jell to serve with meats or as a side dish.

Try them now. Then send us the end labels which mention the flavor, and get the Jiffy Cup and any of our molds.

See the coupon. Cut it out so you won't forget.

Reasons Why Bright, Ambitious Girls Should Become Comptometer Operators

FIRST—SHORT COURSE OF PREPARATION
Six weeks' training will make you a Comptometer operator—much less time than stenography or bookkeeping.

SECOND—PLEASANT, AGREEABLE WORK
There is none of the drudgery of mental figuring. The work is interesting. You are placed among high class business associates and in offices convenient to your homes.

THIRD—SALARY ABOVE THE AVERAGE FROM THE START
A good Comptometer operator can do more figure work on Bookkeeping, Billing, Payroll and Cost Work than two or three people working mentally, thereby conserving man power and eliminating costly errors due to mental fatigue—that's why the trained Comptometer is worth more.

FOURTH—BIG DEMAND FOR COMPTOMETER OPERATORS
Our customers are calling on us for over 60 operators per week—some of these we are unable to fill. Increasing sales of the Comptometer assure every girl a position who completes the course and receives a diploma.

"Oh, it might be all right on a young girl; not on a woman of your age." It was the proud boast of Waldron's mother that she was going to stay young for Waldron's sake, but the frankness of the second generation proves somewhat of a damper on the lady's efforts.

"Oh, dear, I can't find any play that sounds fit for Mabel's friends—I do wish they would revive 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm' — you could take anybody to that!" Getting up a theater party for the young people is not the easiest thing nowadays.

AMONG US MORTALS

The Second Generation

By W. E. HILL

(Copyright, 1919, N. Y. Tribune Inc.)

Eddie's roommate from school being due for a week end, Eddie removes the "Siege of Sebastapol," in the velvet mat from the sitting room wall. What looked all right to the old folks seldom passes muster with the second generation.

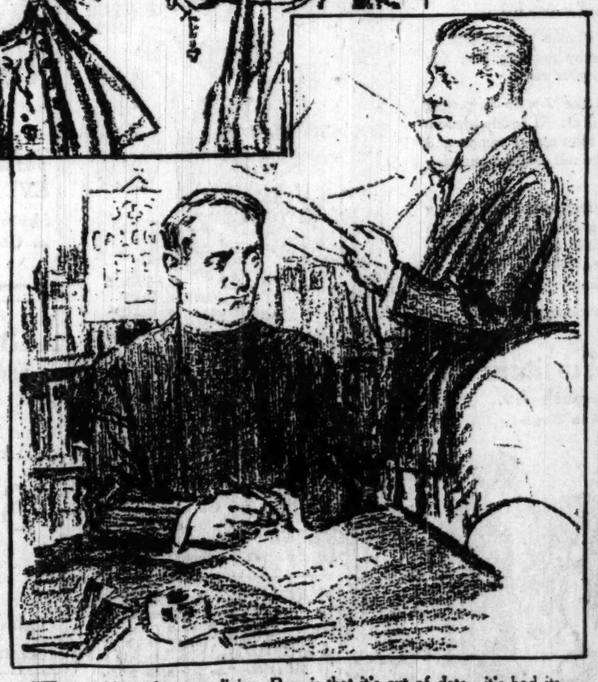
Mrs. Orff, a fond mamma, has been asked to chaperon the second generation at a college prom. Mrs. Orff is watching her only son, in whom are centered all her hopes and ambitions, being angled for by a young lady of whom Mamma Orff does not quite approve.

"Oh, mamma, I do wish you wouldn't work so hard—I hate to see you do it! Why can't you just let things go?"

"You never told me you were going out this evening! You'll be awfully sorry when you look back years hence after I am dead and gone!" The tearful mamma, who finds the second generation most neglectful.

Pity the sad plight of Addie, who loves books and whose ambition is to live on a farm and raise chickens and pigs. Addie's papa and mamma, however, love the gay life, and Addie seems doomed to be forever carted around from one swell hotel to another.

Trying to get an inside track on the young folks' conversation is no simple matter these days, what with snatches of Freud, Karl Marx, and Havelock Ellis being handed back and forth; at least so Mr. and Mrs. Rutt find it, with three very modern offspring to keep up with.



"The trouble with your religion, Pop, is that it's out of date—it's had its day." The second generation of the minister's family hands his father a few ideas on religion.

THE THEATERS

By Percy Hammond

ONCE more the stern curators of youth upon the stage have wielded a beneficent rod and penalised the children of the theater. "Daddies" is banished from Chicago because its chief actors are not of an age desired by the factory laws, and it is now on its way to communities less moral. The overseers of the Juvenile Protective league were generous though resolute in their enforcement of the ordinances in the case of "Daddies." They closed Powers' theater for a night, but permitted a few further performances on condition that the offending drama be removed as soon as another city could be discovered to give it sanctuary. Our conservators are not usually so liberal in their methods of doing us good.

A disinterested bystander finds it difficult to participate in a criticism of the officers who forbade the children to play in Chicago. Theirs was an ungrateful employment and they must have undertaken it with reluctance. Fulfillment of their duty meant a mystified unhappiness for the youthful players who were taken into court, and a loss of money to them, to their fellow actors, and to their managers. It meant discomfort and annoyance to many persons who, going to the theater, found it shut, and it deprived a larger public of the play's salubrious, though infantile, instruction in charity and unselfishness. The grimmest of our crusaders do not relish a mission, however healthful, which entails such sacrifice and unrest.

The chief result of the episode is that a law has been enforced. It might be a wiser law were it less arbitrary and more flexible, seeking to serve each case according to its circumstance. There are, no doubt, children whose lives are better upon the stage than they would be elsewhere. They, it seems, should not be molested. But a law has been enforced—and the small actors in "Daddies" are playing in Philadelphia instead of Chicago. The advantage to them is thus inconsiderable in the minds of those unskilled in juvenile benevolences.

Mr. Arliss views with patient disapproval THE TRIBUNE'S report of his gloomy opinions of Louisville, and says that he complimented rather than aspersed the playgoers of that friendly center in his speech at the Blackstone the other night. News of his imputations having reached Louisville, frowning Kentuckians assail him in choleric editorial and correspondence, until he wearies of silent suffering for a fault another's, not his own. Following a gracious preamble Mr. Arliss writes:

"You said in THE TRIBUNE last Sunday: 'Having played three nights in Louisville, Mr. Arliss confessed to Chicago that he was glad once more to appear before human beings.'

"What I really said was: 'This is a new play, new to you, and new to us. This is not actually our first night—we really produced last Monday. When a play is produced in the one night stands it is generally called "trying it on the dog," so with the exception of three nights in Louisville, this may be called its first human experiment.'"

Mr. Arliss' remarks were the topic of general conversation at the Blackstone between the acts, and there was no question about their contents being as THE TRIBUNE reported them. However, Mr. Arliss is an honest man and when he says he did not say it, he knows he did not. Louisville's anger, therefore, should be none the less tempered by the fact that I and many, many others are sure that he did.

The Lord's Day Alliance and the Sabbath Committee propose to put a stop to Arthur Hopkins' contemplated performances of Russian plays on Sunday nights in New York. Mr. Hopkins thinks he breaks no law when he sells his seats by subscription, instead of at the box office or through the ticket brokers.

John Barrymore slipped out of the cast of "The Jest" in New York the other day and set sail for London. He will be absent four weeks. Meantime his rôle will be acted by Miss Gilda Varesi, hitherto the impersonator of the blind woman in the play. Other women have acted the character in European presentations, among them Mme. Bernhardt.

The story to be told tonight at the Princess in "39 East" is that of Penelope Miller, daughter of an indigent middle-west parson, who goes to New York to get rich by singing. Washington square is its locale, a boarding house its scene, and its characters are the inmates of that institution. Miss Constance Binney, known to the screen and to dancing comedy is the heroine, and Henry Hull is the youth who embraces her with objects matrimonial at the end of the play. Miss Alison Skipworth portrays the head of the pension, a lady of patrician lineage, but bourgeois environment.

Miss Marie Dressler, whose recent ardor in aid of the chorus girl has rendered more bearable the unhappy lot of that young person, reaches the Olympic tonight. She will play "Tillie," a revival of a musical comedy used by Miss Dressler years ago.

James Forbes is the author of "The Famous Mrs. Fair," which Henry Miller and Blanche Bates will produce in Baltimore Dec. 15.

"Daddies" and "Dark Rosaleen" exchange places tomorrow night, the Irish play coming from Philadelphia to succeed the lawbreaking infants at Powers'. After "Dark Rosaleen" departs on Dec. 20, David Warfield will come to Powers' in "The Auctioneer," and after Mr. Warfield there will be a season of Edward Knoblauch's "Tiger, Tiger," with Miss Frances Starr in the leading rôle.

The roster of the Ziegfeld Follies, which will begin its occupancy of the Colonial Dec. 21, contains Marilynn Miller, "Johnny" Dooley, Ray Dooley, "Eddie" Cantor, Bert Williams, George Le Maire, John Steel, De Lyle Alda, Van and Schenck, the Fairbanks Twins, Florence Ware, Phil Dwyer, Olive Vaughan, Ruth Taylor, Eddison Young, Florence Taylor, and the customary crowd of coryphees de luxe.

The sober galleries of the Art institute have been invaded by so antic a muse as Richard Carle, whose portrait bust by Richard P. Riswold has just joined the masterpieces on exhibition there.

Following the season of "Friendly Enemies" at the Woods, Louis Mann, the star, announced the prediction that the receipts of the play would never be equaled in the history of that theater. Last week Mr. Rosenthal, manager of the Woods, mailed to Mr. Mann the following comparative statement of the incomes of "Friendly Enemies" and "Up in Mabel's Room," for the first twelve weeks of both plays:

Weeks.	"Friendly Enemies."	"Up in Mabel's Room."

Music and the Musicians

By W. L. Hubbard

THE first presentation in America of Montemezzi's "The Ship" last Tuesday evening at the Auditorium brought to the attention of the Chicago public an opera of distinct interest and of no inconsiderable musical beauty. Repeated hearings later in the season will make possible more definite and exact estimates of its inherent and lasting worth than could be formed from listening to the first performance and the preceding dress rehearsal.

Until such decision has been reached, opinion as to the Montemezzi music may justly be held in abeyance, save perhaps to state that the score is one which every musician will enjoy hearing and should hear, and is one which contains much that will appeal more or less unconsciously to the lay music lover. There is virtually nothing of the long-spun, sustained melody and tunefulness which make the older Italian operas immediate in the power and charm they exert.

Montemezzi fashions melodies which are attractive and which have individuality, but they are short melodies, and he uses them orchestrally and vocally in symphonic manner, interweaving them as does the purely instrumental writer. The result is a constant shifting of shade and line, and the resultant music is less easy of grasp than is the more frankly tuneful. Yet such is the composer's skill in handling his material that he produces tonal waves and masses, the power, color, or sensuous quality of which is such that even the indifferent listener is impressed and moved.

There seemed from the superficial hearing thus far had that the score is not the equal in beauty and potency of the one which first made Montemezzi known to us—that of "The Love of the Three Kings," but something of this impression may be due to the difference in the quality of the dramas used as basis for the two operas. Sem Benelli's gripping tragedy of the invasion of mythical Alturia moves with so much more swiftness, clarity and directness than does Gabriele D'Annunzio's symbolic drama of the building of old time Venice that its accompanying musical score naturally takes on a compactness and vividness that are not possible in the later one.

The chief shortcoming of "The Ship" as a grand opera will be found to lie, it is believed, in the libretto that Tito Ricordi has fashioned from the D'Annunzio tragedy. Italians familiar with the tragedy in its integrity claim that as a drama enacted on the stage, it is of exceptional beauty and of compelling forcefulness. The claim can easily be credited, for the skill of the Italian poet in the handling of his native language is well known and is masterly. And even from the skeletonized drama which the opera brings us, it is readily believed he would fashion a play rich in color and movement, strong in character drawing, and not only fine in its symbolism, but appealing in its immediate human interest.

It is therefore no belittling of the D'Annunzio skill or creation to say that "The Ship" is not suited to grand opera libretto use. The fault lies not in the work itself but in its quality. Symbolism may be all right in the spoken drama, but it is virtually lost and useless in grand opera.

No one thinks, for example, of the symbolism that is contained in "The Love of Three Kings" and yet it is there, and its poet wished the tragedy considered as an allegory of Italy. But it is the human interest and the swift moving drama that make the libretto so valuable for grand opera purposes and it is these alone that appeal to the opera patron.

"The Ship" in libretto form is ambiguous and confusing. There are big holes in the drama which may have been well filled for the minds of Mr. Ricordi and Mr. Montemezzi, but which the person unfamiliar with the original drama of D'Annunzio has no way of leveling up.

We know that the Faledro family had been punished by the Gratici brothers, the father having been blinded and his four sons not only blinded but having had their tongues cut out. Just why the daughter, Basilola, should have escaped is not made clear.

Miss Jordan is the piquant youngster who plays the subaltern rôle of Janet, the nursemaid, in Mr. Stone's "Jack o' Lantern" at the Colonial. Though of a tender age, she knows her short way about the extravaganza, and she aids it with her good looks and unaffected charm. "Jack o' Lantern," by the way, renews itself like a classic, and is as fresh and full of wonders as ever. Its dress is rich, clean, and of many colors, its players competent, and its chorus comely and good at dancing. The marvelous Stone is, this time, more acrobatic than usual. He has new steps to his dances, and his ice skating at the end is funny and graceful. Last week.

News of the Theaters

Ernest Truex, Edward Douglas, and Miss Nancy Fair, who went down with "A Bashful Hero" at the Princess not long ago, are up again, this time in Otto Harbach's farce, "Ready to Occupy." Dallas Welford also belongs to the cast.

Edward Streeter's "Dere Mable" letters have been turned into a musical comedy, and Marc Klaw has engaged Louis Bennison to play the rôle of Bill Smith.

Sir Arthur Pinero's "Quick Work" had its first performance on any stage Thursday in Poughkeepsie. Miss Grace George appeared in it.

Francis Adair, Miss Janet Mansfield and the De Paul university dramatic club will present "The Peacemaker" Monday and Tuesday evenings at the University auditorium. The cast will include Homer A. Johnson, Irving Shuster, Halpin Farrell, Henry Balaban, Prof. James Drain, and Misses O'Connell and O'Neill.

Music, dancing and a chorus are to be added to "The Seven Sisters," which Miss Laurette Taylor and Charles Cherry played years ago at Powers' theater.

Harry Lauder will be an unwelcome visitor for the Shubert-Studebaker Dec. 28, when he is scheduled to oust the prosperous "Take It From Me." They are trying to persuade him to defer his Chicago season, until after the musical comedy has run its course.

Miss Caroline Kohl, daughter of Mrs. Charles E. Kohl and niece of Miss Julia Arthur, became a member of Mr. Mantell's company Friday evening. Miss Kohl appeared with Mrs. Fiske in "Madame Sand," and last season played a sketch called "No Sabe" in vaudeville.

Marion Green, the young Chicago singer, who has participated with Miss Maggie Teyte in the London triumph of "Monsieur Beaucaire," came to America yesterday to get ready for the New York production of the opera, Dec. 11.

APOLLO
Player Piano

The Apollo Will Make You An Artist

AFTER the first five minutes with the Apollo Player Piano, you can give masterful interpretations of the works of the great composers.

With the Apollo you can mould music to suit your mood or fancy. The Dynaline device makes it possible to play any selection as you like it.

The transposing device enables you to change the key of any selection whereby you may play any word roll in a key suitable to your voice.

The melody flows from the Apollo in perfect time and yet it is not mechanical. The Metronome motor of the Apollo governs the time or tempo and also enables you to rewind the roll without pumping with the pedals.

Folks who want real human music are willing to pay a little more than the average price for an Apollo. You will be surprised to find how low a price you will have to pay for this wonderful instrument in comparison with ordinary player pianos.

We will gladly demonstrate the Apollo at any time.

Good Play Made from Irish Legend of "Lost Leader"

By Burns Mantle

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Those who take the theater seriously, or believe they do—and there are several hundred of them in this populous center—are just now turning their attention to the Greenwich Village theater, where "the Lost Leader" is being played.

You may have read something of this work, seeing it has been frequently spoken of as a feature of the London season. It is cleverly builded on the legend that no man or woman ever saw the face of Charles Stewart Parnell after his death was reported; that, in reality, the Irish "martyr" did not die but with the help of friends thus escaped from the slurs and stings and bitter reproaches that bedeviled him after his unfortunate fall from grace in the affair with Katherine O'Shea.

Written by the Irish playwright, Lennox Robinson, it has the advantage of starting off with the finest first act that has been revealed in any drama these many years. In this act there are gathered in the smoking room of a small hotel tucked away in the hills of Ireland, at Paulmour, three men. Two of them, a somewhat famous psychoanalyst of London, who combines hypnotism with his treatment, and a young journalist, sent to report the Sinn Fein activities, fall into a discussion of the newer phases of mental science. Out of the discussion springs an offer on the part of the physician to help the journalist to a good night's sleep by the power of suggestion.

He is holding the young man's gaze upon a silver disk and droning his commands that he sleep, when the proprietor of the hotel, one Lucius Lenihan, an aged, stooped old man, wanders into the room. Sitting at the opposite side of the table, he slowly comes under the influence of the experiment and falls into a deep hypnotic slumber.

Turning his attention then to Lenihan, the doctor attempts to learn something of his past, which has long been a mystery even to his intimates. Under his probing Lenihan confesses that he is haunted by memories; ghosts that disturb his rest; ghosts that have to do with "a coffin; a woman; my name." If only he could be free of them he would rest.

They can be "put away," the doctor assures him. "See," he says, "I shall put them all in this box. Here they go. The coffin! The woman! Your name, Lucius Lenihan!" Slowly the old man straightens up. "That is not my name," he says; "I am Charles Stewart Parnell"

He is permitted to sleep again and then restored to his normal state. As he is about to leave the room the doctor calls to him: "Mr. Parnell!" Lucius Lenihan stops in the doorway and, turning slowly, his head thrown back, answers with a commanding "Sir."

The element of mystery is strengthened in the second act. The news spreads around the countryside and the mystified neighbors gather to confess it. Lenihan's niece explains that her father had warned her never to question her uncle; that he had for years been an inmate of an asylum and that his delusion had been that he was Parnell. The doctor himself doubts that the living Parnell has been revealed, and none of the neighbors had known Parnell, none save a blind street singer and he is the only one who accepts him. Still, the old man's story is straight both as to dates and facts. He is "The Lost Leader," he insists, and he feels that he has been called by God to bring Ireland through her present difficulties.

In the last act there is to be a meeting at which men are to come who knew Parnell to settle once for all whether Lenihan is he. At the meeting Lenihan addresses representatives of the contending Irish parties, the lusty young Sinn Feiners, the Nationalists, the Unionists, and the rest of them. Victory will come to Ireland, he insists, only through a spiritual rebirth, all material revolutions will fail her in the future as they have in the past.

The contending representatives fall to quarreling over this bit of propaganda, and in the mêlée, as the "risen Parnell" seeks to restore peace, he is struck down by his one faithful follower—the blind man. When the men who had known Parnell in life arrive they are uncertain. The likeness, they agree, is perfect, but——

And so the play ends. It is beautifully written and splendidly played. And though it slopes off in interest as it must after that fine first act, it remains a fascinating work. Frank Conroy plays Lenihan and the supporting cast includes Robert T. Haines and J. M. Kerrigan.

The best comedy of the month, and one of the best of the year, is called "Wedding Bells." But whether it is a good comedy because it is gracefully and smartly written on a trivial theme, or because it is wonderfully played, none of the experts are agreed.

Interesting and wisely chosen players have saved many a play for New York that, venturing later into the hinterland with a makeshift organization, has proved a terribly boresome affair. It is just as easy for interesting personalities on the stage to lift a dull play out of its rut as it is for a group of interesting people in a drawing room to turn a sad party into a gladsome revel.

Margaret Lawrence is at the head of this cast, though she is jointly featured with Wallace Eddinger. She is the young woman who returned to the stage after an absence of several years when her husband, Lieutenant Commander Munn of the navy (and of the Philadelphia Munns, who publish the Scientific American, incidentally) went away to war. Since then she has been playing in "Tea for Three," and this is her second part. She is an actress of exceptional charm, a funny little Chinese smile that wins adorers by the minute, and a natural technical proficiency.

Miss Constance Binney IN "39 EAST" PRINCESS PHOTO BY ABBE

Miss Binney, leading actress of "39 East," was bred in a Parisian convent, becoming later a dancer in the ballets of New York. For a time she was prima donna of "Oh, Lady, Lady," and she appeared with John Barrymore in "The Test of Honor," a screen drama. Tonight's appearance at the Princess will be her first in a Chicago theater.

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

It is comprehensible, however, that Basiliola, realizing the cruel punishment that was meted out to her father and brothers, should plan the using of her beauty as means for avenging herself on the Gratici brothers when they arrive from their campaign against the barbarians.

The prologue, therefore, while wanting in the obvious action that is desirable for grand opera, is still understandable. But the first act which follows is mystifying even to a person who has studied the libretto and is a complete blank to any one who merely views the performance.

What are the men who cry for bread from behind the pile of things that obstructs the center of the stage? They are supposed to have insulted Basiliola, but when and why and where? Why does she come there? Why does she hesitate about killing them? Why does she finally do so? And in the next act when we see her reveling with Sergio instead of with Marco, when and how did she gain her influence over him after vamping Marco throughout the preceding acts? And when the time comes for her to die does she go willingly to her death or should she resist?

These and many other points are unclear and remain so throughout the performance. The result is confusion, lessening of interest, and final apathy or irritation on the part of the opera patron. In the spoken drama it would be easy to keep before the spectator the fact that Basiliola's fascinating of the Gratici brothers is purely vengeful, and that even in the midst of the exerting of her powers, she gloats over the downfall she is bringing to them. But in the opera she seems doing it solely for the pleasure she derives from the fascinating. The result is complete loss of sympathy to her as a woman and a character.

And to this ambiguity and confusion which the shortening of the drama has created, the settings and costuming supplied by Norman-Bel Geddes for the American production furnish further obstacles. Mr. Geddes has fashioned stage pictures and costumes that are undeniably beautiful, and viewed solely as pictures and costumes are certainly effective. But they hinder rather than help understanding of the story and with a libretto as confusing as is this one and with opera sung to us in foreign tongue, all the help that scenery and clothes can lend needs to be utilized.

Mr. Geddes possibly might argue that it is not the province of stage enframement to further comprehension of the drama presented. This may be true, but the American operatic stage, held in darkness as it is through lack of understandable language, cannot afford to utilize anything that hampers and prevents that comprehension.

The prologue of "The Ship" for example should be a picture of almost feverish labor activity. The cathedral is being built, ships are coming and going, the workmen of every kind are plying their craft. The watchman stands announcing the movements of the vessels, and Venice is being taken by force from the sea and is being builded.

What of all this activity is suggested by Mr. Geddes' beautiful back drop of yellow sail, against which a figure clad in green stands on a pedestal, and when he is not saying something unintellible poses there in ineffective attitude? And what do the two reddish curtains, which inclose this yellow glory and which are seen in all the succeeding acts, have to do with such a scene of albor? The symbolism may be there, but it conveys nothing whatever to the opera spectator.

And the same misapplied beauty which is found in the settings is discoverable also in the costumes. An Adonis could not be anything other than ludicrous in the tin-plated costume that has been supplied for Mr. Dolci in the opening act, and the double blanket robe which he has to wear in the second scene surely has nothing of beauty to it, and its shade of red may be futuristically correct when placed side by side with the pink of Miss Raisa's gown in the same scene, but it is not pleasing to old fashioned eyes.

And the Raisa gowns are in themselves interesting and beautiful, but seem wholly out of keeping with the demands of the drama. As the drama reads Basiliola charms the Gratici brothers by using the same means that have been employed since female first exerted her wiles on male—by revealing her physical beauty rather than by hiding it. Mr. Geddes has Basiliola constantly more solidly and heavily clothed than is the average woman on the street or in the home today, and whenever she makes up her mind to vamp either of the men, he has her take off a veil and show her substantial gown worn under it, instead of arranging for her to remove a cloak and show veil-like garments as the poet clearly wishes.

The costumes kill the whole effect and significance of the act and inasmuch as Mr. Montemezzi has compelled his heroine to sing most of the time when she should be dancing, and since Miss Raisa has not mastered the art of dancing any more than she has the method of shooting an arrow, the scenes fail where they might by judicious use of dress and training be made clear and reasonably convincing.

The repertory announced for the second week of the opera is varied and attractive. The French members of the organization have now arrived and operas of other than the Italian school thus become possible. The list as it now stands is as follows:

Monday night a repetition of "The Ship" with a cast identical with that of the opening night, Miss Raisa appearing as Basiliola, a part which she sings admirably; Mr. Dolci as Marco, Mr. Rimini as Sergio, and Mr. Arimondi as Orso.

Tuesday night "La Boheme" will have its first hearing, Evelyn Herbert, the young soprano from Brooklyn, of whose abilities much in praise is spoken, appearing as Mimi. Miss Pavloska will be the Musetta, Mr. Bonci the Rodolfo, and Mr. Rimini the Marcello.

Wednesday evening Lerotix's "Le Chemineau" will have its revival, and will bring Yvonne Gall again before the Chicago public. With her in the cast are Miss Sharlow, Miss Claessens, Mr. Baklanoff, Mr. Huberdeau, and Mr. Dufranne.

Thanksgiving day a special matinee will be offered, "Mme. Butterfly" being the bill. Mme. Miura will be the Cio Cio San, Miss Pavloska the Suzuki, Mr. Lamont the Pinkerton, and Mr. Baklanoff the Sharpless. In the evening Mary Garden will make her reentrance, appearing as Cleopatra. Associated with her will be Miss Noe, Miss Eubank, Mr. Maguenat, Mr. Fontaine, and Mr. Pavley.

There will be no opera on Friday night, but Saturday afternoon Puccini's three one act operas will have their initial presentation here. In "The Cloak" Miss Jardon and Mr. Johnson and Mr. Galeffi will have the leading parts, and in "Sister Angelica" Miss Raisa and Miss Gordon will appear. Saturday evening at popular prices Miss Garden will be offered, appearing in "Thais," with Mr. Baklanoff and Mr. Fontaine supporting her.

Following the performance of "La Boheme" on Tuesday eve, Felix Borowski's ballet "Boudour," which was announced for last Thursday but had to be postponed owing to changes being necessary in the costumes, will be given.

Nina Tarasova

She is the young Russian who is to sing the folk songs of her country at the Kinsolving morning musical next Tuesday.

A page of pictures of Chicago Opera stars will be found in the rotogravure section of "The Tribune" today.

This afternoon at 3:30 Hazel Harrison will give a piano recital in Kimball hall. She has chosen for performance the Bach-Busoni Chaconne, two Nocturnes and the B-minor Scherzo of Chopin, Liszt's transcription of the Beethoven "Adelaide," the Liszt B-minor Sonata, "At the Spring," "Will o' the Wisp," "St. Francis Walking on the Waters," transcription of the Schubert "The Trout," and the Waltz on themes from "Lucia."

Reinald Werrenrath, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera, will be heard in song recital this afternoon at 3:30 in Orchestra hall. He has placed on his program a group of two old Italian songs and a recitative and aria from a Bach cantata, a group of old English and Irish folk songs, Poldowski's "L'Attente," Duparc's "Le Manoir de Rosemonde," Ravel's "Sainte," Fourdain's "Promenade à Mule," Keel's setting of three Masefield poems, Rogers' "The Time for Making Songs Has Come," Forsyth's "Tell Me Not," Manney's "Consecration," Penn's "Smilin' Thro," and Aylward's "Khaki Lad."

Nina Tarasova, a young Russian woman whose skill in presenting the folk songs of her country has won for her lavish commendation in the east, will be the star of the Kinsolving Morning Musical next Tuesday in the Blackstone at 11 o'clock. She will be associated with M. Dambois, the French cellist, in the presentation of the program.

Next Tuesday evening in the Medinah temple the Central Concert company will present Mme. Matzenauer, the Metropolitan Opera contralto, and Max Rosen, the young violinist, in joint recital.

The Wednesday morning musical in the Ziegfeld theater this week will bring forward Louis Cornell, pianist, who at 11 o'clock will play a program containing the G Minor Ballade and two Preludes of Chopin, four Preludes by Debussy, the Liszt B Minor Sonata, and selections by Ganz, D'Albert, Schubert-Liszt, and Liszt.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra will have the assistance of the harpist Carlo Salzedo as soloist in its regular concerts next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening in Orchestra hall. He will play an Introduction and Allegro for harp and string orchestra, flute, and clarinet, by Ravel, and his own Symphonic poem, "The Enchanted Isle," which will on these occasions have its first public hearing. The symphony of the week is the Glazounow No. 4 in E flat. Other selections are the "Fingal Cave" Overture of Mendelssohn, Roussel's "Evocation," and the Alfven Swedish Rhapsody "Midsummer Wake."

The Chicago Symphony orchestra will offer its third popular concert on Thanksgiving evening in Orchestra hall. The program includes Dvorak's Carneval Overture, Godard Adagio Pathetique, the Prelude to "The Deluge" by Saint-Saëns, Massenet's Scenes Napolitaine, Grieg's "Peer Gynt" Suite No. 1, the Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria," the Waltz from Tschaikowsky's "The Sleeping Beauty," and Herbert's "Irish Rhapsody."

Jascha Heifetz will be heard in his first recital here this season next Sunday afternoon in Orchestra hall.

A distinguished concert by

Margaret Matzenauer
—The Magnificent

Famous diva of the operatic stage. Queenly Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York. Margaret Matzenauer of the mellow-sweet contralto. Hear her

Tuesday Night—Medinah Temple
November 25th 14 East Ohio St.

Some artists are great of voice. Others are merely great of stage performance.

To judge how truly great is Margaret Matzenauer, hear her outside of her physical presence. Hear her voice as it is literally Re-Created by the New Edison.

Only then will you be able to appreciate fully its sublime beauty.

It is actually true that music lovers have heard Matzenauer compare her voice with the New Edison's Re-Creation of that voice, and could distinguish no difference.

No Needles to Change.

The NEW EDISON

Even records of all other makes sound more human when played on the New Edison.

Come in and let us prove to you in this interesting way the greatness of Margaret Matzenauer.

NEW NAMES ON OLD PICTURES.

By Mae Tinée.

A GREAT many people have been writing in lately complaining that they have been hoodwinked. Their grievance is that a certain picture bearing the trademark of a famous producer is nothing more nor less than an excerpt from a spectacle by the same producer which has been widely shown throughout the country. The excerpt bears an entirely different name and people have spent their money to see it, thinking that something new is in store for them, and they receive old stuff for their good money.

It seems to me that the complaint is entirely justified. Every once in a while old pictures are palmed off under new names. Following is a letter from a correspondent which I find voices the sentiment of many. Besides bringing up the fact that the film under discussion is ancient, the writer introduces other salient criticisms which it might be well for the producer to take note of:

Dear Miss Tinee: A middle aged gentleman of my comfortable dimensions finds life itself sufficiently a problem without adding to its distractions by viewing hypothetical distress on the screen; which superimposed problem is the one that arouses me to such a frenzy of composition as this.

I do not mind—on the contrary, rather enjoy—soothing my troubled spirit with photoplays elaborating our somewhat card indexed sensations of sex and the personal emotions. But I do view with profound vexation the ridiculous efforts of producers to expand the social contract into situations so obviously absurd as to make the serious efforts of life hardly worth employing.

My respectable and middle aged ire has lately been excited by a picture called "Mother and the Law," a social drama of most extravagant bad taste in America. In the first place, it is offered as a first run feature, while the most absent minded instantly must recognize it as an excerpt from the monumental brainstorm called "Intolerance." And, in the next place, it is a preachment against human eccentricities so patent and obvious as to make it ludicrous.

Soldiers are seen shooting down honest workmen because the honest workmen will not accept $2.75 a day. Perhaps the producer had in mind $2.75 an hour, so we forgive him the error. The mean old thing of a mill owner is real peevish because his workmen dance as late as 10 o'clock. Perhaps they were just beginning at 10 o'clock; so we forgive this error, too.

The picture tries to make us sorry for a young crook, who simply can't help being a crook. As if such a thing is the fault of people who don't like to be robbed. And we are led to hate female busybodies because they take an infant away from surroundings pictured as too vile for a chimpanzee.

But, worst of all, we have to sit through all this flapdoodle without nary an actor or producer to throw an egg at.

VOX POPULI.

"The Butterfly Man" will be the name of Lew Cody's second production. A rose cotilion, it is said, will be shown which will employ the services of 400 extras. Poor butterfly's a fly boy now!

An announcement of considerable interest to film folks is the one that Thomas H. Ince, Maurice Tourneur, Allan Dwan, Mack Sennett, and Marshall Neilan have agreed to associate themselves in the motion picture business upon the expiration of their present contracts.

Charles Ray will be supported by Winifred Westover in his next picture, "Watch Out, William."

A correspondent from the Pacific coast is authority for the statement that Roscoe Arbuckle drives a pink car with blue wheels.

The nation at large will be feverishly interested to know that J. Warren Kerrigan and his brother Wallace have organized a League of Nations club in support of the president's policies.

Fame breeds trouble, it seems, and now Douglas Fairbanks is being sued. One of his actors, Ernest Butterworth, is in the courts for $100,000 damages for injuries claimed to have been received in a scene in which he worked for Fairbanks.

Charles Chaplin has at last consented to put in a day's work and will soon turn out a picture entitled "A Day's Pleasure."

Miss Eileen Huban
WHITE PHOTO

Miss Huban came from rural Ireland four years ago, entirely ignorant of the drama and its people. She had never been in a theater. An appearance in an Irish pageant in New York led to her engagement for a small part in Whitford Kane's "Lonesome Like," and she did so well that employment more important followed at once. She will have the leading rôle tomorrow night at Powers' in Mr. Belasco's production of "Dark Rosaleen," an Irish racing play by Whitford Kane and W. D. Hepenstall.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

MRS. F. J.: George Cohan produced the play "The Miracle Man." While a great many people like you object to the long programs at the neighborhood theaters, there must be a majority in favor of them, otherwise the management would not see fit to continue them. Personally, I'm rather with you.

A. D. H.: Edna Purviance is Charles Chaplin's leading woman, when there's anything for her to lead in—he certainly being the slow poke lately with his productions! It was she who played opposite him in "Carmen" and "The Floorwalker." No, Mr. and Mrs. Chaplin have never been featured together in a production.

MRS. E. S. P.: I would certainly love to oblige so up and coming an "old lady" as you say you are. I'd loce to see your album, Mrs. P. Could I help you out with a list of addresses or anything?

ANXIOUS: Whether or not a star has any choice of the production in which he or she is to appear depends largely on the prominence of that star and the reading of that star's contract. Awfully glad you enjoy the column. Thank you for your nice letter.

BETTY C. D.: It is Betty Compson, not Betty Compton. Address Harold Lloyd in care of Rolin Film company, Los Angeles, Cal. A letter sent to Betty Compson in care of George Loane Tucker, Los Angeles, will reach her.

VIRGINIA B.: Well, 13 years old, I'm awfully glad to hear from you again. Vivian Martin is married to Thomas Jefferson, Jr. We'll see what we can do about the pictures you want in the rotogravure. Alice Brady is married to James L. Crane. You're welcome.

P. F. M.: Yes, it is a world, indeed! However, though we may not entirely approve of orphan asylums, let's be glad that there are orphan asylums. Many of them are excellently conducted and most of them are preferable to the streets.

BEATRICE S.: The fact that the actress in which you were interested sent you two pictures, one after the other, shows that somebody made a mistake—probably her secretary. I haven't a doubt in the world but that she would like to correspond with you. I don't know just what you could say to her to arouse her wild interest in you. Why don't you send your letter by registered mail in an aeroplane? That ought to make her sit up and take notice. Address Miss Williams at 264 South Kingsley drive, Los Angeles, Cal.

MAURICE H.: Do I ever grant favors? Do I ever do anything else! I don't know whether the picture you mention can be reproduced, but I'll look it up and see what's what. Awfully glad you like the department.

JUDITH S.: We forwarded your letter to Miss Pickford. Glad to do it.

ONE WHO IS INTERESTED: Thanks for the information.

A. S.: If you will address Mildred Harris in care of the Louis B. Mayer studios, 3800 Mission road, Los Angeles, she will receive your letter.

BOBBY UMPH: You're the slango kiddo, aren't you? Don't believe I saw the picture you mention. Of course you enjoyed "The Miracle Man." So did we all. I bet you were "tickled to pieces" to get back to Chicago. I know I always am when I've been away.

RICHARD J. R.: We forwarded your letter. Glad to do the service.

D. H.: I'm sorry if you were disappointed. Had I known that many desired an interview I would certainly have gone out of my way to secure it. And you were wrong about one thing—I did not always disapprove of her film work. Thank you for writing. I appreciate your interest.

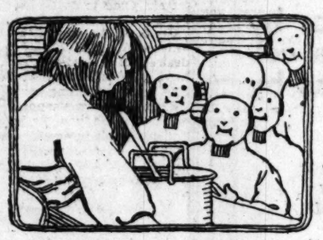
Once upon a time there was a CANDY MAKER



Once upon a time there was a Candy Maker, from whose great white kitchens came sweets of such rare delicacy that millions of children became his friends, but none knew his name.

One day he called in council his many Happy Helpers and said to them: "For fifteen years we have made candy of surpassing excellence. Our experience is so ripe that we may attempt now to crown our life's work by making the Perfect Milk Chocolate Almond Bar."

—who made with mellow MILK CHOCOLATE

Now, good milk chocolate is very rare indeed. So, first, dusky cacao pickers by the far-away Caribbean Sea selected with skill the finest of cacao beans for this Candy Maker.

Then passed a hundred days, during which these cacao beans were ground and blended in many secret ways with the purest of rich milk, until one day the Candy Maker realized that he had attained his dream of a perfect blend. Four times the grinding went on through the ponderous refining rolls ere he found the velvety smoothness that he sought—a fineness never before known. For fourteen days and nights the milk chocolate was stirred in shining copper kettles, until the chocolate mellowed into a blend of appealing flavor.

—the Perfect ALMOND BAR

Then the luscious, white-meated almonds from sunny Sicily and southern Spain were given in generous measure to each bar. And the wise critics, who sat in judgment, spoke their praise of this chocolate with the velvet-like smoothness, the exquisite mellowness, the silken lustre, the perfect blend.

—and now it waits for you

From big and little candy places, Brach's Milk Chocolate Almond Bar beckons to you. It costs no more than the ordinary bar. Stop today—and from the beautiful CANTERBURY Box select this Brach's Almond Bar, which has been so carefully made for you.

ART

American Exhibit Reviewed in Detail; News and Gossip

By Eleanor Jewett

IT may be just as well that every now and again a lack of fresh subjects of interest in art draws the attention to exhibitions already reviewed, though perhaps reviewed without that fullness of detail which can only follow upon the most close inspection. Such review has been given the exhibition of American oil paintings at the Art institute.

Given this week a breathing spell from new openings, we returned with zest to those pictures to find in them a renewed pleasure. For, granting the fact that there is little of startling importance in this group of canvases, yet one may enjoy in many of them charm, delicacy, freshness, and a slim beauty.

The value of notes struck off at a moment's notice is, perhaps, questionable, but, on the other hand, first impressions are often of more interest than those secured after thought or discussion, because the first are undoubtedly original and the others too apt to be tinged with borrowed opinions. Working on this basis, I shall give that which the pictures meant to me at white heat, as I walked through the galleries.

"But Yesterday," by Adam Emory Albright, is a canvas which could never be mistaken as coming from another brush. It is in Mr. Albright's most characteristic vein. An intense blond-haired little boy is caught fishing with a crooked wood pole in the waters of a placid stream. The hush of a burning summer day lies over the picture. One wonders if a shirt not quite so incomplete might not afford more comfort and protection from the sun's rays to its wearer, but with that trifling criticism dissatisfaction ends, and content, matching that of the lad's, is born in the heart of the spectator.

Frederick Clay Bartlett is showing two paintings gay in these and treatment, alive with color, and joyous with the sense of summer smells and sweetnesses. The one is "Blue Tea House, Soochow" and the other "Coral Bridge, Canton." Evidently, from their titles, they originated in foreign lands, but the radiant blues and pinks and the vivid sunshine are the same that danced in the pictured scenes of places nearer home which we saw last year in an exhibit of Mr. Bartlett's work at the institute.

"On the Porch," by George Bellows, shows an attractive group of children on, as one might expect, a porch.

Jacob Binder gives an interesting portrait of an aged Jew in "The Old Talmudist." The quality of the flesh tones is striking. To go from this, which seems to show the separation of the soul in as far as possible from the body, one turns and is amused by the portrait of Prof. E. B. Titchener, by Olaf Brauner, a portrait that touches the heights of self-complacency and in its richness of flesh and robes denies the spirit for the world.

Two charming landscapes are "Springtime, Southern California," by Maurice Braun, and "Autumn, New England," by George M. Bruestle.

The pictures contributed by Claude Buck differ from any others that I have seen in a long time. They resemble the illuminated illustrations found in old books. They are charming with a quaint, old world charm. They would fit admirably into the text of ancient Persian or Greek tales. Perhaps the best example of his art is seen in "Villalume," where peacocks and lovers are inextricably mingled.

An excellent still life is seen in "The Jade Bowl" by Dines Carlsen, the shimmering qualities of the brass basin are in an inexplicable degree haunting, if one may be properly haunted by such an intangible property.

"San Juan Mission" and "Whitefish Bay" by Alson S. Clark, are charming. Equally lovely is the landscape "Hillside and Valley" by Eliot C. Clark.

A decorative panel in dainty pastel shades is the Japanese idyll, "The Heavenly Lotus Time," by Florence Fairman. It is so full of such a multitude of things and persons that several moments must be spent before it before the richness of its design is appreciated.

Indiana Giberson shows a dusky, gay little sketch, which she calls "Jade Bowl," but which to my mind deserves a much more suggestive title.

Because I want to quote an article which I found recently in Il Momento and which seems to me of interest from its unusual content, I shall break off this running fire of comment on the American oil exhibition for this week, finishing it possibly, space permitting, next Sunday. The article I wish to quote follows, and the concluding sentences will bear consideration, it seems to me, by all those who are interested in the new movement towards developing an artistic commercial art:

Catching snowflakes as they fall, and then photographing them in order to obtain beautiful and novel designs of every description, is being successfully accomplished by science. The falling snowflakes are caught on a black screen, and the best results are obtained by photographing them out of doors.

Snow crystals, said Dr. Whitlock, curator of mineralogy at the American museum, New York, for many years have been successfully photographed and studied by W. A. Bently of Jericho, Vt., a naturalist of the old school. Mr. Bently has devoted many years to the study of water in all its forms in nature. In the course of this study he has taken several thousand photographs of such objects as clouds, dew, and mist on natural objects, frost, ice, and particularly snowflakes. He has been successful in bringing out the beautiful and intricate structures of these composites of snowflakes and his work has been recognized by such a high authority as the United States weather bureau.

Beautiful as these natural objects are and interesting from a scientific point of view, they possess a distinctive value as motives for a base design of a geometrical character. A glance over the many hundreds of photographs will show that here lies practically an untried field for the design of oil cloths, wall paper, textiles, art embroideries, laces which can be extended to such applications as cut and etched glass, jewelry designs, and even to such conventional forms as stained glass rose windows, and carved or frescoed medallions.

The utility of these natural geometric art motives should be emphasized at this time when designers are searching for new materials to give originality and character to applied art work, which is to play such an important part in industrial reconstruction.

A movement in which every citizen of Cook county at least should be interested is that which leads to the protection of wild life—bird, flower, and beast—in the Skokie district. On last Thursday afternoon an exhibit of paintings by H. Van Hofsten, dealing with the Skokie valley, was held in Glencoe at the Woman's Library club, and Mr. Kennicott, president of the forest preserve board, spoke. The pictures included a number which we have enjoyed before at other exhibitions and the value of the propaganda was made manifest in their appeal to the eye.

On Tuesday afternoon there was an interesting meeting of the Chicago Historical society at which various gifts to the society's library and museum were shown. Among them are portraits by Healy of the First Presbyterian minister and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. John Blatchford, and portraits, by Healy also, of Lincoln, Grant, and Sherman. A number of other paintings have been given, too, and a collection of interesting old samplers.

A notice was sent to me last week of an exhibition in the Touchstone art gallery of New York City of paintings by Julie Stohr. I feel I must at least mention it here because Miss Stohr belongs properly to Chicago and has many friends here—all of whom are undoubtedly wishing, as am I, that her pictures will come to Chicago later. I remember one of her earliest pictures was a portrait of my black dog, Max, and after him she painted me, and any number of other friends who would sit for her. I think at this time she was not more than 12 years old. About eight, maybe ten, years have passed since then. It will be a great pleasure to see what the years have done with her talent.

THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving day, I'm fondly told,
Occasion is when I should hold
A thankful heart and humbly fold
My hands in praises,
For blessings that have gaily rolled
Through all my dayses.

I'm told I ought to shout and sing
And do a light fantastic fling,
For all the gifts that coyly swing
To bless and cheer, sir;
But I can't sing for anything
Somehow, this year, sir.

For when I feel in glee immersed,
And get my lips all nicely pursed,
For a sweet, harmonious, praiseful burst,
How sad my lot is,
The words can't navigate for thirst
My epiglottis.

I find no sustenance for hope
In boobo and the others; nope,
In vain for thankful thoughts I grope
Each drink much worse is:
Where do they get that "thankful dope"?
Thanksgiving—curses!

JOHNSON'S FREEZE-PROOF

is easy to use—is non-inflammable—inexpensive and guaranteed. It does not evaporate so one application will last all winter.

Read This Guarantee

We guarantee that Johnson's Freeze-Proof has no more effect than water on the metals of the radiator or on rubber.

If Johnson's Freeze-Proof is used according to the simple directions in the proportion shown on our scale, it will absolutely protect your radiator against damage from freezing.

We do not guarantee Johnson's Freeze-Proof when used in cars with aluminum manifolds, although it has been used satisfactorily in hundreds of such cars. Water alone often has an injurious effect on aluminum.

Testimonials!!

We have handled Johnson's Freeze-Proof for the past two seasons and will continue to handle it during the 1919-20 winter.—THE AUTOMOBILE SUPPLY CO., 1335 Michigan Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
November 10th, 1919.

We have been using Johnson's Freeze-Proof for two or three years and have found it to give satisfactory results. We have purchased a supply again this year for use in our cars and feel certain now that with the use of the Freeze-Proofometer we can adjust the solution to the needs of the weather.—THE ILLINOIS SEED CO., 349-369 E. North Water St., Chicago, Ill.
November 1st, 1919.

I have used Johnson's Freeze-Proof in my Overland Six, which is a regular type Continental motor. Although this was a very severe winter, Johnson's Freeze-Proof stood the test.—H. E. GNADT, 3133 Boscos Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
Feb. 13th, 1918.

Our General Manager is using Johnson's Freeze-Proof in his car and it seems to do the work very nicely.—CHALLENGE COMPANY, Belvidere, Ill. (58 miles from Chicago).
Jan. 11th, 1918.

I wish to tell you I am using Johnson's Freeze-Proof and selling it. I have no garage and my car stays outside—rain, shine or freeze. This morning I looked in the radiator—it was as fluid as ever. I looked at the thermometer and it was 32 below zero.—WILLIAM V. KAHN, 1545-1545 Central St., Evanston, Ill.
Feb. 4th, 1918.

Directions Must Be Followed

Johnson's Freeze-Proof will give perfect satisfaction if used according to directions on label. It requires just a little time and care to comply with these instructions—then your worry is over for the whole winter.

1st—Clean all dirt, scale, sediment, etc., from the cooling system by using a boiling solution of ordinary washing soda. Flush out thoroughly.

2nd—Repair all leaks. Unless hose connections are new, replace them. Tighten all packing and gaskets.

$1.50 Protects a Ford

One package of Johnson's Freeze-Proof (Cost $1.50) will protect a Ford to 5° below zero, and two packages to 50° below zero. For larger radiators or to protect to a lower temperature, use additional Freeze-Proof according to the scale on the package.

ASTRONOMY

LIFE ON THE MOON.

THE question of life on the moon is a fascinating thought to some minds and hopeless as it seems to hope that a living thing will ever be discovered there, many astronomers continue to watch for any stir or motion upon the face of that desolate land.

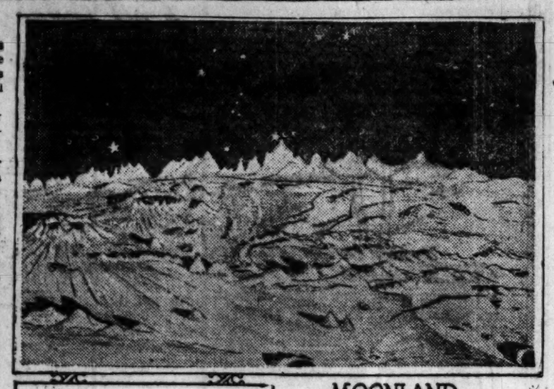
The moon is our satellite, and our nearest neighbor in space. It is a sphere 2,160 miles in diameter and 240,000 miles away. The face which is always turned toward us is a little larger than the United States. Both the earth and the moon receive the same amount of heat from the sun, but in their climates and appearance there is the most extreme difference imaginable between them. Three-fourths of the earth's surface is covered by water, while the moon is an unutterably barren, parched, airless desert. Burnee dust lies on the naked rocks there just as it lay when it fell.

The volcanic fires which pitted the whole face of the moon land with great holes have long since died away, leaving a desolate expanse of craters and lava folds. It is often said and with a close approximation of the truth, that nothing ever happens on the moon. There are no winds to stir the dust or waters to moisten them. No cloud ever moves in the airless sky nor flash of fire come from an erupting peak. The land is cold and stark and dead, the realm of the terrible emptiness of planetary space.

How then, you exclaim, can life be even believed to exist in such an awful place? The thread of evidence is slender enough, but here it is. Certain of the smaller volcanic vents occasionally give evidences of being obscured by escaping steam. Systematic observations seem to show that in a few isolated spots there are some traces of lingering activity, and it is around these warm holes, where air and water are escaping from the rocks down deep in the interior, that life is supposed to cluster. Enthusiastic astronomers invite us to make a mental journey to the surface of our satellite and search there the last lingering traces of life on the moon.

The day on the moon is fourteen of our days long. The sun comes creeping with snail-like pace over the east rim of the jagged mountains, and when its gathering rays have shortened the inky black shadows, we see a deep cup shaped basin spread out before us, a mile or more across with a black yawning hole in the center. White deposit of crystals lies like thick hoarfrost about the vent.

As the sun creeps lazily up in the sky and the rocks begin to grow warm the crystals sublimate into vapor that



THE SIZE OF OUR SATELLITE

MOONLAND

DRAWN BY S.F MAXWELL

before long the whole basin is filled with a soft white mist. Then plants of a kind we know not of unfold themselves and bask in the warm sunshine for the ten or twelve days of sunshine that remains.

When the sun sets over the sawtoothed rim of the western hills, a stygian night closes down, and during the long dark two weeks the temperature falls fearfully low. The plants draw themselves together, and the creatures, if there are any, retreat into the warm bottoms of the cracks, to await the coming of another day.

This account may be true, and possibly is, so far as the vapors are concerned. It would not be surprising if some traces of vulcanism still linger in that land that was once so tortured by fire. But the evidence for any living thing there hangs by a slender thread.

PACKARD TWIN SIX
Enclosed Models

ONE who is accustomed to the exquisite coach work of certain European makers can appreciate some of the unique things which Packard enclosed cars present today.

The Packard Company considers that an enclosed car should represent something more than mere protection against the elements. For instance, interior finishings which bespeak good taste and infinite pains in the making—exclusive mechanical features providing for greater comfort—individualistic handling of exterior design to express the owner's personal feeling.

Despite these unique Packard standards it has been possible for them to produce in considerable volume and effect great saving in expense as compared with the European body work.

Possibly this is why Packard today stands for something better than one might expect from any maker, regardless of price.

To make the Maxwell light they used the quality steels

THE story of Maxwell is a story of metallurgy. This great science makes possible a 1960-lb., 109-inch wheelbase, 25 h.p. car, whose common denominator is Quality.

It has made possible a vehicle weighing but 1960 pounds itself to carry 750 to 1000 pounds of human weight a distance of 100,000 miles or more—to carry it at low cost and to carry its 5 passengers in comfort.

This is about 2 to 2¼ pounds of vehicle weight for a pound of "human freight."

When you stop to compare weight for weight with other cars, and size for size you will quickly realize that the Post-War Maxwell takes a leading rank on the subject of light weight.

But this light weight of the Post-War Maxwell is not a matter of "trimming the weight," but a matter of metallurgy.

The use of this science in building 300,000 previous Maxwells has developed lighter but stronger steels, and that is one reason why the Post-War Maxwell has caught the public fancy as few cars in recent years have done.

The demand is in excess of 140,000 for the current year. Only 100,000 can be built. Therefore, an early visit to look over the Post-War Maxwell may save disappointing days later on.

Laying Up Car for the Winter Needs Some Work

A General Inspection Necessary if Adequate Job Is Done.

BY ROY E. BERG.

IN laying up the car for the winter one can spend a great deal of time in going over the different parts, and much of the time will appear to have been spent in vain, because of the lack of apparent changes. In giving this outline the most important parts are treated first, and these should be taken care of, and then, if time permits, the other things should be given consideration.

Start with the engine and remove all of the old oil from it. Pour about a gallon of kerosene through the engine, running it for a few minutes with this in it, and then drain the kerosene off. After this has been done fresh oil should be put into the engine and the engine run a minute or two to thoroughly splash this new oil in contact with all of the surfaces.

The car should be thoroughly drained. There are a number of places to look for in doing this. For instance, the radiator must be drained, but merely draining the radiator does not mean that all of the water is out of the cooling system. Many cars have a supplementary drain attached to some part of the engine to drain all of the water from the engine jackets, and on cars of this type care must be taken to see that this water is also drained. Otherwise, during an exceptionally cold spell the water jacket of the engine is apt to freeze and crack. If the engine is equipped with a water heated carburetor, then the water cock on the carburetor should be opened and this drained. The gasoline system should also come in for its share of draining, and in doing this do not forget that there are several reservoirs or containers on the car. First, of course, there is the rear tank; then there is the vacuum tank, and, lastly, the bowl of the carburetor. All of these should be drained.

Now, dependent upon whether the car is to be stored in a heated garage or an unheated one, the care of the battery will be determined. If the car is to be kept in a cold place, then the storage battery must be removed. It is probably the best of all procedures to take the storage battery to a dealer's shop and have him give the battery a thorough charging, after which it should be filled with distilled water and kept in a moderately warm place throughout the winter. Specific readings of the battery should be taken about once a month while it is standing idle, and if the gravity registers below 1.200, then the battery should be given a fresh charge. This treatment will generally suffice to maintain the electrical system in a good condition. However, there is one important thing to remember, and that is when the storage battery is removed from the car the engine must never be run, because serious injury to the generator will result.

The car is now ready to be placed on small jacks or modified carpenter's saw horses. They should raise the car high enough from the floor to permit the wheels to be turned without touching. While it is not absolutely necessary to remove the tires from the wheels, the wise motorist does so. The reasons for this are many. Water accumulates on the surface of the rim and thus rusts the rim, which is detrimental to the surface of the tire, so it is best when the rim is removed from the tire to thoroughly sandpaper the surface of the rim and paint it with a coat of rim paint. A very good preparation can be made by any one by mixing a small amount of lampblack with a good grade of spar varnish. This is a very durable preparation and protects the tire fabric because of its rust preventive qualities.

Regarding the tires, these should be cleaned with soap and water and then the surfaces gone over to carefully remove the small stones which have been driven into the rubber, and the cuts filled with some tire compound. The interior of the casing should be liberally sprinkled with talc or mica, the inner tube placed in the casing and filled with just enough air to keep the inner tube round and free of cracks.

The body of the car, it goes without saying, should not be left in a dirty condition. One of the very best preservatives and finishing materials (and which, by the way, is recommended by America's highest grade car manufacturer) is good lubricating oil. This should be applied with a soft cloth and should not be rubbed off. The bright work on the car should be covered lightly with vaseline.

By placing a canvas or tarpaulin cover over the whole car it is now ready for the winter.

My Funniest Motoring Experience

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Automobile Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. Manuscripts submitted in this contest cannot be returned. Wet and Mad.

One hot Sunday afternoon my brother and I went out in the country for an automobile trip.

When we were about twenty miles from the city my brother speeded up the car to see how fast it would go. We were going about fifty-five miles an hour when we saw a goat standing near the road and in front of the gate to a farmhouse.

I sounded the horn, at which the goat jumped over a fence, ran against the farmer's wife, and knocked her over into a tub of water.

We stopped the car. When the farmer saw this, he picked up a hay fork and started toward us, while his wife, being all wet, went into the house. We saw that the farmer did not mean to extend any friendly greeting with the hay fork, so we drove off. G. T.

Feeding the Mule.

One Sunday morning three couples went for a ride in the country. We got out all right, but on the way back we had engine trouble. While the men worked on the engine the girls gathered flowers and hay to decorate the car. When we again got started we could not drive more than twelve miles an hour or the engine would stop. When we got in the city we noticed people watching and laughing at us. We thought it was because we were going so slow, but when we looked back we thought differently. A mule was following us, chewing the hay from the back of the car. A. G. S.

Not Trunk Movers.

During the war my husband and I lived in Washington and for my bit of war work I drove a light truck for the war camp community service. I had been driving a truck with large signs on each side to identify it, but had just been given a new one and had had no time to have the signs put on. One of my co-workers, an especially pretty girl, was with me this particular morning and we were speeding down Connecticut avenue when a woman stepped from the curb and hailed us. We stopped, of course, and she asked us whether we moved trunks. Why she thought two women in a truck were in the transfer business is a mystery, but she seemed quite peeved when we told her no and went on our way giggling. W. V. P.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—By High Speed

Please inform me through your columns what to do relative to a vacuum gas feed system when storing a car for the winter; also a bolt is missing from my transmission case, but no damage is noticed.

F. A. COYLE, Chicago.

Ordinarily there is very little trouble given by the vacuum tank, and for the winter time it is sufficient in most cases to drain the vacuum tank only, but, of course, a thorough cleaning after a season's use will certainly not do it any harm.

The tank should first be drained, and very often it is found when opening the small drain cock at the bottom of the tank that gasoline does not flow from it as it should. This is caused by the accumulation of sediment in the bottom of the tank, which clogs the outlet to the drain. A small wire, however, easily opens this passage and allows the gasoline to be drained out. There are three pipes that lead to and from the vacuum tank: one is from the rear tank to the top of the vacuum tank, another is from the intake manifold, and the third is from the carburetor float chamber to the bottom of the vacuum tank. All of these should be removed by loosening the union couplings, where the tanks are connected to the tank. The bolt holding the tank to the whole tank can then be taken from the engine.

At the top of the tank you will note that there are eight screws, which hold the cap to the tank proper. These should be removed. The small gasket between this jon and the tank should be held very carefully because if it is knocked or injured in any way its power to maintain a vacuum will be destroyed. When the top is removed the upper tank then can be lifted out. This with its contained valves and mechanism should be soaked in kerosene for about a day, after which all the accumulation from poor gasoline and road dust will be loosened. The small upper tank has the flapper valve secured to it at the bottom. There is no need to attempt any adjustment of this valve except to see that it is clean and that it works freely on the two screws by which it is supported. The whole tank can now be reassembled.

Regarding the bolt on your transmission, it certainly must have had a purpose when the manufacturer placed it there. The fact that no damage has resulted is not an indication that damage will not result because of the bolt's absence, so because it is such a small and inexpensive part you had better see the dealer handling the car and procure this bolt from him.

I notice a "four speed ahead and two reverse" transmission for Ford cars advertised. Can you give me advice as to their reliability or usefulness? A. A. HALL, Coal City, Ill.

Auxiliary transmissions for Ford cars have been perfected and are on the market. However, one sees very little of them in this part of the country, their use being confined chiefly to western sections, where the topography is hilly. It is found in these hilly sections of the country that the two speed transmission of the Ford does not offer as great a choice in selection of speeds as it might.

A 50 Per Cent Boost for 1920 State Auto Fees

New Increase Makes 100 Per Cent Since 1917.

BY JOHN L. SPELLMAN.

STATE automobile license fees go up another 50 per cent next year. This makes an increase of about 100 per cent in these fees since 1917. The fees take care of the principal and interest on the $60,000,000 good roads state bond issue.

The table is based on the N. A. C. C. horse power rating, which the state law requires. On this to determine the horse power of an engine take the bore of the cylinders squared, times the number of cylinders, and multiply by four-tenths.

The schedule of fees for 1920 is:

Passenger cars—
25 h. p. and less	$ 8.00
25 h. p. and more than 25	12.00
50 h. p. and more than 35	20.00
More than 50 h. p.	25.00
Electrics	12.00
Motorcycles	4.00
Trucks—
5,000 lbs. and less, including weight of vehicle and maximum load	12.00
12,000 and more than 5,000, including weight of vehicle and load	22.50
15,000 and more than 12,000	35.00
More than 15,000	60.00

Motor busses are figured on the same basis as trucks.

If you have previously registered your car in Illinois, the annual fee must be paid, no matter what month you reregister. Application for registration must be made by Jan. 1, 1920.

In the case of first registration the owner is allowed but twenty-four hours' time after purchasing a car to make an application for a license. In the case of trucks the fee must be paid before the truck is used.

Only machines purchased after July 1, 1920, are entitled to the semi-annual fee. Heretofore this was divided into four periods.

To be reregistered under the same license number as you now have, you must file your application with the office of the secretary of state, Springfield, not later than Dec. 11 of this year.

WHAT YOUR 1920 LICENSE WILL COST

Following is a list of the license fees required for nearly every make of car. It is based on 1919 models, but there has been little change in the horsepower rating of older models, so the list is substantially correct:

Let Your Auto Try These Three New Hard Roads

A LOT of Chicago motorists are today praising George A. Quinlan, Cook county's superintendent of highways.

Three stretches of new concrete road, built under Mr. Quinlan's supervision, were opened to the public yesterday. They are:

Desplaines River road, from Milwaukee avenue to Desplaines.

Crawford avenue, from city limits to Lincoln avenue, in the village of Tessville.

Higgins road, an additional mile to the west.

"We intend to open up all the new roads as soon as they are safe for motor travel," said Mr. Quinlan.

"This department is not letting any of the roadwork be delayed, where it can be helped. The voters approved the good roads bond issues submitted to them, and we want to do all we can to get new roadways opened as soon as is possible."

If the weather remains as it is for a few days the last finishing touches can be placed on more concrete stretches before the work must be stopped until spring.

Good Cops.

Out in Spokane, Wash., the police are highly successful in recovering stolen automobiles. Perhaps for the reason that there are not the chances for getaways like in Chicago and other congested centers of the country. Spokane's record for 1918 showed 98 per cent recovered.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

THE Automobile salon will be held in Chicago the week of Jan. 24 next year. It will be in the Elizabethan room of the Congress hotel. The higher priced American cars and some of the famous European makes will be displayed.

Officials of the Illinois Motor club have laid out an extensive campaign for betterment of conditions for the motorist. They want Wabash avenue repaved to relieve the congestion on Michigan avenue and want the former thoroughfare used exclusively for motor vehicles. They also urge the setting back of the elevated railroad columns in the loop to the curb line.

More than 200 service station distributors of the Prest-O-Lite company attended the company's two days' convention at the Hotel La Salle last week. The distributors were told that the company is to spend $600,000 for advertising to show that more use can be had from a battery with the proper care.

Percival Dodge has been made sales manager of the Denby Motor Truck company of Detroit.

The Buick company reported that Mr. and Mrs. A. Roe of Seattle, Wash., made a 6,341 mile transcontinental trip at a total cost of 50 cents for repairs.

Harry Barnstetter, local Kissel distributer, has a display, beginning tomorrow, of the new Kissel four passenger coupé.

The Chicago Motor club is laying plans for having about 1,000 of its members tour to Knoxville, Tenn., next June, to be present at the dedication of the Dixie highway between there and Lexington, Ky. The party will camp out along the roads instead of sleeping in hotels.

Stewart McDonald, president of the Moon company, in commenting on profiteering in most lines of industry, pointed out that only about 25 per cent has been added to the cost of most motor cars through increased material and labor prices. He said this was about 100 per cent for other lines.

The Associated Ford Dealers of Chicago held their second annual banquet at the Congress hotel last week.

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber company has opened a "motorize the farm" bureau to give information to the farmers on the efficiency of motor trucks.

H. H. Quigley resigned as Chicago manager of the Service truck.

At the second annual convention at the Congress hotel last week of the American Tire Filler Industry, Inc., it was proposed that the federal government conduct a test of all rubber tires used on motor vehicles.

Official announcement was made by the Garford Motor Truck company that the Willys interests had not purchased any part of the Garford company.

J. M. Stockfisch has been made Chicago district sales manager for the National Wire Wheel Works, Inc.

The Maxwell roadster used as the first pathfinder on the Dixie highway is to be preserved by the Maxwell company, said A. J. Banta, manager for the Chicago branch.

George F. Cone, president of Cone, Schubert & Cone, 1958-62 Lawrence avenue, announced that his firm has been made north side Essex dealers.

The National Cycle show, held at the 1st Infantry armory last week, was a big success.

Quality First

You Can Tell a Chalmers By Its Silence

A piece of machinery, often like a great business executive, expresses efficiency in its silence.

The engine of the Hot Spot Chalmers does its work so well, offers so little complaint to its tasks that you are won at once by its modest absence of noise.

And gears, universal joint, driving shaft, differential and rear axle perform in perfect harmony with the engine.

The reason for this silence is a lack of vibration.

Vibration is the origin of trouble in a motor car.

Hot Spot and Ram's-Horn are the underlying causes for this absence of vibration in a Chalmers.

They "predigest" the low grade, heavier gas of the day, "pulverize" it, "take the throb out," and supply high efficiency.

You know what to expect from a talkative man or a noisy piece of machinery, but until you have ridden in a Hot Spot Chalmers you cannot guess its smoothness nor its silence.

Fine Entry List for Horse Show; Opens This Week

By Frank Ridgway

AUTOMOBILES may have supplanted the horse in more ways than one, but the high stepping, blue blooded steed, hitched to a light wagon, still attracts admiring attention wherever he goes. To see a manifestation of this one has only to go to the annual horse show at the International amphitheater which starts next Saturday night, and extends through Dec. 5. Here one can see in what popular favor the light horse is still regarded.

Spirited, gaited horses, driven to light rigs, are a rare sight on the highways and byways these days, for they have been crowded out by the automobile. Fortunately the light horse sport, which is filled with an individuality and a life that appeals to everybody, is kept alive by the Chicago Horse show and other annual shows about the country. Because of this unique quality of the horse the automobile can never entirely supplant it, for the trimmings and trappings of shining harness and wagons flashing under the powerful lights in the arena give a thrill that is entirely lacking in the automobile world.

The pick of the basket and the cream of the western stables are always at the International, stepping out on the tan bark competition for the ribbons. One of the leading strings of the country which always is heavily represented at the Chicago show is that of John R. Thompson, whose stable is unusually rich in harness winners at shows all over the country.

Last season his Argo, Lord Brilliant, and Sir Edward, captured ribbons galore. Mr. Thompson's Ebony King, a magnificent black stallion, has been noted in the trotting class shown to road or speed wagon.

Daniels & Gross usually have a fine string of licht harness horses at the Chicago show. Their beautiful bay mare, Martha Wilson, is remembered by those who attended the show last year, where she gave a wonderful exhibition in the road wagon class.

Walter Schuttler has a dashing, three gaited harness horse in Chieftan, which has several ribbons to its credit.

The runabouts are always a popular division and among the leaders in this event have been John R. Thompson's Jack Tar, William E. Dee's Cleo, and Zambo, and the Broad View farm's chestnut gelding, Masterpiece.

Local entrants are usually closely pressed for prizes and ribbons by out of town enthusiasts who enter heavily in the various classes. Those who attended last year's show will recall the splended pair of harness horses, Hamilton Star and Fairy Tread, nominated by R. Lawrence Smith of Smithtown, L. I.

Of course, the saddle classes are showy, and make a big hit with those who love good horseflesh. But for downright interest there's nothing like the sight of the well gaited harness horses when they come from behind the white barred gate into the brilliantly lighted arena, with the reins handled by masterly drivers, whether they be men or women.

Heavy horses, those big fellows that look like giants not only in the tanbark arena, but on the field and meadow, are always a leading attraction at the International Live Stock exposition. They are of interest to both town and country folk, because back of all other factors in food production the horse stands.

It is the mission of the International to direct the modeling and molding of animal form with the view to increasing utility values. In this work certain improvements have been aimed at, and success has been attained. In the beef cattle the aim has been to increase weights and lessen cost of production. In the mutton breeds of sheep it has been to increase the value of their fleece and carcasses. In the hog it has been to encourage early maturity and improve the fiber and flavor of ham and bacon. In the stately drafter or heavy horse it has been to increase weights without sacrificing quality, thereby giving added beauty to present day draft horse types.

The big drafter, guided by man, produces the grains and roughage that feed cattle, swine and sheep, and the bread grains that feed mankind. Without the motive power existing in horses the production of food would be greatly curtailed and its cost enormously increased. It is the use of many horses per man on farm machinery of large capacity that has enabled American farmers to produce more in crop yields per capita than the producers of any other nation in the world. Few realize that the available power on farms is greater by far than all which exists in manufacturing industries. Most of this power is in horses.

The horse as a power unit has come in competition with every other source of power. Despite this competition, it has held its own. Horses are more numerous and higher in price than ever before. Proof of the way they have held their own and the increasing interest that is now being taken in the heavy horse will be brought out at this year's International.

Nominations of these fine bred animals are greater than ever for the live stock show. No less than 221 breeding Percherons have been nominated, and the entries come from the leading farms and estates of the country, making a specialty of these magnificent animals.

Of the Clydesdales there will be 139 on exhibition, six of them being sent all the way from Cedadoc Mains, Belle Plain, Saskatchewan. Eighty eight Shires, 167 Belgians and fifty Suffolks complete the list.

In addition to the above there are numerous entries in the "draft in harness" breeding class. Included will be the splendid animals of Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Wilson & Co., and the Union Stock Yards and Transit company.

There has been a great scarcity of fine bred horses overseas because of the devastation wrought by the war. This is especially true of the Belgians, and that brave little land has almost been stripped clean of these splendid animals. They were used for artillery and transport purposes in vast numbers, and the breeding stock is now limited. It is fortunate indeed that America has sufficient breeding stock to help Belgian restock its farms with work animals.

With the present congested travel conditions, tourists who have not the advantage of expert guidance are liable to encounter many unexpected difficulties.
Right here is where T & S expert service is invaluable. Wherever you want to go—whether you prefer to be one of a personally escorted party of congenial people or whether you are planning to go alone or with your family—we can arrange every detail of your trip for you, so that there will be no delays, no difficulty in securing accommodations, no wasted time or money.

Plenty of Time—No Extra Expense

You will have plenty of time to see everything worth seeing, because you will waste no time on things not worth seeing. You will not have to "look up" where to go and how to get there or "find out" what is the safest boat and when it sails. All these details will be arranged for you by travel experts—men who know the routes, the trains, the boats, the hotels—men who can secure accommodations for you that you yourself could never secure. You will have nothing to do but enjoy your trip. And it won't cost you a cent more—probably less.

Wherever You Want to Go

Whether you want to take one of the wonderful West Indies Cruises—Cuba, Panama, Colombia, the Canal Zone, Jamaica—or a tour under escort to California and Hawaii, or Florida and Cuba, we can arrange it for you better than anyone else can. And, if you want to go farther—to Japan—China—Europe—the great battlefields, Bermuda, South America—anywhere in the world—our expert service is just as invaluable.
Stop in at our office in the Western Union Building, call us up, or write. We have an interesting story to tell, and we are glad to tell it.

On Secret Service —in Mexico

BY DR. PAUL BERNARDO ALTENDORF.

[Late Agent A-1 in the Military Intelligence Department of the U. S. Army.]

ARTICLE 21.

WHEN the test came Waberski failed to carry out his chief's instructions to commit suicide rather than be arrested. He might easily have done so by making a show of resistance. Instead he turned deathly pale and remarked with a sickly grin:

"I suppose you think you have caught a German spy."

"We know what we have caught," was the reply.

The captive was hustled into a waiting automobile so quickly and quietly that the few street loungers had no opportunity to realize what was up and hurried to the office of the military intelligence department at the camp of the 35th infantry, where he was searched. The papers found on him tallied with the list I had inventoried and copied while he lay in a drunken stupor at Guadalajara.

The Ambassador's Message.

The one document of transcedent importance was a message from Von Eckhardt, the German ambassador to Mexico, addressed to German consuls in the German imperial code. It was by decoding this message that the American government came into possession of the German imperial code. Here is an exact copy of the message as it was written in the German imperial code:

rnal

Months of labor by the experts of the United States government finally reduced this apparently meaningless jumble of letters into the following:

An die Koenigliehen Konsular Behoerde in der Republic Mexico Punkt
Strenggeheim Ausrufungs Zeichen
Der Inhaber dieser ist ein Reichs Angehoeriger der unter dem Namen Pablo Wabirske als Reise reist Punkt Er ist deutscher Geheim Agent Punkt
Alesta Ich bitte ihn auf Ausuchen Schutz und Beistand zu gewachen Komma ihn auch auf verlangen bis zu ein Tausend Pesos Oro National vorzuschiessen und seine Code Telegramm an diese Gesandschafts als Konsular Amtliche Depeschen Abzusenden Punkt.

VON ECKHARDT.

What It All Meant.

Translated into English the foregoing was found to be the following:

To Imperial Consular Agents
In the Republic of Mexico period
Strictly secret countersign
The bearer of this is a member of the Empire who travels as a Russian under the name of Pablo Waberski period He is a German secret agent period
Therefore I ask that upon solicitation you give him protection and support comma and also upon demand to pay him up to one thousand pesos oro National and to send his code telegrams to these headquarters as official consular dispatches period

VON ECKHARDT.

When the search had been completed Waberski was taken to the guardhouse, a flimsy wooden structure, and given in charge of four guards, who received their instructions from Col. Fryer in these words as he pointed to the prisoner:

"Do you see that fellow? He is a blanked German spy. He might as well be dead as alive. If he makes a wrong move shoot him."

Death Sentence Unfulfilled.

On Feb. 16 Waberski, manacled and under heavy guard, was taken by train to San Antonio, Tex., and thence in a closed car to the military prison at Fort Sam Houston, where he was kept in a steel cage under constant guard until August, when he was tried by a military court martial, the trial lasting two days, and condemned to death. The Negro, William Cleaves, also testified. He had not discovered that I was an American agent, but had reported me as a German spy.

Waberski's sentence was never executed. At last accounts he was in solitary confinement at Fort Sam Houston under close guard.

Meanwhile, to return to the day of the arrest, I felt as if a great weight had been lifted from my heart when I saw the handcuffs snapped on Waberski's wrists. Butcher came in after his prisoner had been disposed of and congratulated me on my handling of the case. Then he said I must be tired out and should have a rest.

It transpired that Butcher's idea of a "rest" was to have me make out a full report on my operations in Mexico to date.

Wrestles with English.

I "rested" fifteen days, for my report filled 100 typewritten pages and was in English, a language with which up to that time I had had little more than a bowing acquaintance. To be honest, the English language pounded me all around the ring, and on more than one occasion I nearly took the count, but with the kind assistance of the dictionary I won in the end. Now the English language and I are on very good terms outwardly, but I would not speak it farther than I could see it.

When that infernal report was finished I was still required to stick around in order to be handy when the military authorities got ready to try Waberski. The long delay was to enable the experts to decode the circular message to consuls in the German imperial code, already referred to, although I did not know it at the time.

Just to kill time I helped the military intelligence department out in its laborious task of dealing with the constant stream of deserters, slackers, German agents, smugglers, I. W. W. agitators, and anarchists under other designations flowing across the border in both directions, or perhaps it would be more accurate to say attempting to flow. Beyond doubt many did get across, but the tireless watchers caught a lot.

Disciples of Kultur.

Being able to speak eight languages, I was in constant demand as an interpreter, and at times as an examiner. When not needed in these capacities I was out as an investigator. I ferreted out two I. W. W. agitators and no fewer than fourteen German agents and had them locked up, though I made no arrests myself. I did not want to be so publicly identified as an agent of the intelligence department.

A great many Germans were trying to get to the training camp at El Claro to prepare for the prospective drive against their adopted country, for information about it seemed to have been pretty thoroughly circulated among former subjects of the kaiser on this side of the border. Others were traveling on more sinister errands; few, if any, had any honest business. Queer things developed in examining these disciples of kultur.

For instance, every German caught trying to get across the border carried a Bible and maps of the United States. It transpired that the Bible was extensively used in transmitting code messages. Words or verses inconspicuously marked could be quickly worked out by any one in possession of the key into messages of any length on any subject.

A Conscientious Liar.

One typical case was a German machinist who gave the name of Hubelek, who said he had been working in the railroad shops at Sacramento, Cal., earning $7 a day, who was caught trying to sneak across the line after dark. He had the usual Bible and map. His outfit consisted of fifteen days' provisions, a wig, a quantity of chemicals, machinists' tools, and two revolvers.

He said he was going to Sonora to buy a mine, although his capital consisted of $180. He was carrying a stolen passport which had been issued to a Bohemian. I tried at intervals to get him to tell the truth, but he was such a persistent though clumsy liar that I gave it up and he was interned for the duration of the war.

Francisco Duran, already described as one of Jahnke's agents, came up from the south on March 10 to try to find out what had become of Waberski. He went to the American consul at Nogales, Sonora, and began asking questions. He was immediately recognized and every facility was placed at his disposal to cross into American territory, where he could be arrested, but he became panic stricken and fled without finding out what he came to learn.

Two days later an order from headquarters in Washington sent Agent "A1" into Mexico again, as a message had been received from Mexico City saying that an unusual number of German spies were going from thence into the United States.

"How sweetly the whippoorwills are singing in the treetops! Why, that isn't a whippoorwill. That sounds more like a mudlark. I'll just wake him up." (Talking in his sleep.) "Please, Wilhelmina, keep your finger out of my eye. For the second and next to last time I tell you, Wilhelmina, enough is too much."

"Here, wake up! Ain't you afraid a thief might break in?"

THE SPREAD OF PELMANISM

The Story of a Great Movement That Has Captured the Imagination of Forward Looking Men and Women

By GEORGE CREEL

PELMANISM is one of the most important things that has come to the United States in recent years. With a record of hundreds of thousands of successes in England, this famous course in mind training has been Americanized at last, and is now operated by Americans in America for American men and women. Pelman sm is neither an experiment nor a theory. For twenty years it has been teaching people how to think; how to use fully the powers of which they are conscious; how to discover and to train the powers of which they have been unconscious. Pelmanism is merely the science of thinking; the science of putting right thought into successful action; the science of that mental team play that is the one true source of efficiency, the one master key that opens all doors to advancement.

I heard first of Pelmanism during a recent visit in London. Its advertising matter filled pages in papers and magazines and "Are you a Pelmanist?" was a common question.

It was T. P. O'Connor who satisfied my curiosity and gave me facts. By 1918 there were 400,000 Pelmanists, figuring in every walk and condit on of life. Lords and ladies of high degree, clerks and cooks, members of parliament, laborers, clergymen and actors, farmers, lawyers, doctors, coal miners, soldiers and sailors, even generals and admirals, were all Pelmanizing, and heads of great business houses were actually enrolling their entire staffs in the interest of larger efficiency. In France, Flanders, and Italy over 100,000 soldiers of the empire were taking Pelmanism in order to fit themselves for return to civil life, and many members of the American Expeditionary Force were following this example.

As a matter of fact, with many who took the training the thing had all the force and sweep of a religion. It went deep into life, far down beneath all surface emotions, and bedded its roots in the very centers of individual being. It was an astonishing phenomenon, virtually compelling my interest, and I agreed gladly when certain members of parliament offered to take me to Pelman House. A growing enthusiasm led me to study the plan in detail, and it is out of the deepest conviction that I make these flat statements:

Pelmanism can, and does, develop and strengthen such qualities as will power, concentration, ambition, self-reliance, judgment, and memory.

Pelmanism can, and does, substitute "I will" for "I wish" by curing mind-wandering and wool-gathering.

Not a Mere Memory System

Viewed historically, Pelmanism is a study in intelligent growth. Twenty years ago it was a simple memory training system. Time has broadened it. Today it does not confine itself to the training of just this one function of the human mind, but scientifically exercises and develops all of the mental powers.

The founder of Pelmanism had an idea. He went to the leading psychologists of England and also to those of America, and said: "I have a good memory system. I think I may say that it is the best. But it occurs to me that there is small point in memory unless there's a mind behind it. You gentlemen teach the science of the mind. But you teach it only to those who come to you. And few come, for psychology is looked upon as 'highbrow.' Why can't we popularize it? Why can't we make people train their minds just as they train their bodies? Why can't you put all that you have to teach into a series of simple, understandable lessons that can be grasped by the average man with an average education?"

And the eminent professors did it! Pelmanism today is a known course in applied psychology, a course that will build mind as a physical instructor builds muscle. There is nothing really new in it. All of its truths are as old as the hills. But it reduces these truths to practical use. It puts them into harness for the doing of the day's work.

It teaches how to develop personality, how to build character, how to strengthen individuality. Instead of training memory alone, or will power alone, or reasing power alone, it recognizes the absolute interdependence of those powers and trains them together.

It is not, however, an educational machine for grinding out standardized brains, for it realizes that there are wide differences in the minds and problems of men. It develops individual mentality to its highest power.

The course comes in twelve lessons—twelve "Little Gray Books." They are sent one at a time and the student fills out work sheets that are gone over with pen and ink by a staff of trained instructors. There is nothing arduous about the course, and it offers no great difficulties, but it does require application. Pelmanism has got to be worked at.

There is no "magic" or "mystery" about it. It is not "learned in an evening." Brains are not evolved by miracles. Just as the arms stay weak or grow flabby, when not used, so does an unexercised mind stay weak or grow flabby.

You can take a pill for a sluggish liver, but all the patent medicines in the world can't help a sluggish mind. Pelmanism is not a "pill" system. It proceeds upon the scientific theory that there is no law in nature that condemns the human mind to permanent limitations. It develops the mental faculties by regular exercise, just as the athlete develops his muscles. It gives the mind a gymnasium to work in; it prescribes the work scientifically and skilled educators superintend the work.

The Science of "Get There"

IT is the science of Get There—getting there quickly, surely, finely! Not for men alone, but for women as well. Women in commercial pursuits have the same problems to overcome as men. Women in the home are operating a business, a highly specialized, complex business, requiring every ounce of judgment, energy, self-reliance and quick decision that it is possible to develop.

I say deliberately, and with the deepest conviction, that Pelmanism will do what it promises to do. Followed honestly, it will give greater power of self-realization and self-expression, in word, thought and action. It will stop wool-gathering and mind-wandering. It will develop mind, character, personality, giving ambition, energy, concentration and self-reliance.

Americans need it as much as England needed it. There are too many men who are "old at forty"; too many people who complain about their "luck" when they fail; too many people without ambition or who have "lost their nerve"; too many "job cowards" living under the daily fear of being "fired."

Original thinking is almost a lost art. We look at games instead of playing them. The less the mental demand the more popular the play. There is music in restaurants because it is too much trouble to talk intelligently. Life is cut to pieces by deep ruts, with the people in them never looking over the sides. Greater driving force and higher powers of concentration will add to the nation's assets.

There is nothing more true than that success and failure are next-door neighbors. The success of today may be the failure of tomorrow, and the inefficient can rise to efficiency when he wills it. No one can mark time in modern life, much less stand still. We go forward or drop back.

Increased Incomes

TALK of quick and large salary raises suggests quackery, but I saw bundles of letters telling how Pelmanism had increased earning capacities from 20 to 200 per cent. With my own ears I heard the testimony of employers to this effect. Why not? Increased efficiency is worth more money. Aroused ambition, heightened energies refuse to let a man rest content with "well enough." Business demands ever-increasing efficiency and employers are quick to recognize it and reward it.

But Pelmanism is bigger than that. There's more to it than the making of money. It makes for a richer and more wholesome and more interesting life.

Too many people are mentally lopsided, knowing just the one thing or taking interest in only one thing. Of all living creatures they are the most deadly. I have seen eminent scholars who were the dullest of talkers; successful business men who knew nothing of literature, art or music; people of achievement sitting tongue-tied in a crowd while some fool held the floor; masters of industry ignorant of every social value; workers whose lives were drab because they did not know how to put color in them, and I have heard men and women of real intelligence forced to rely on anecdotes to keep up a conversation.

The emphasis of Pelmanism is on a complete personality. It does away with lopsided developments. It points the way to cultural values as well as to material success. It opens the windows of the mind to the voices of the world: it puts the stored wealth of memory at the service of the tongue; it burns away the stupid diffidences by developing self-realization and self-expression; it makes unnecessary the stereotyped in speech and thought and action.

GEORGE CREEL.

America's Answer

Every Occupation, Trade and Profession Represented in the Swift Rush of Pelmanism

Pelmanism is not bound by sex, class, creed or circumstances. Its benefits are as broad as the needs of mankind. Any man or woman, no matter whether rich or poor, skilled or unskilled, will find strength and advancement in Pelmanism. The truth of this claim is proved by the books of the Pelman Institute of America. A study of enrollments shows that every state in the Union has its growing group of Pelmanists, and that the list includes every field of human endeavor. The home, the shop, the farm, the bank, the store, the factory, the bench and bar, the office, all have their representatives, and the letters show that this great system of mental training comes as an answer to a tremendous need. The following occupational survey is submitted as showing that the driving, conquering spirit of America is not the property of any one class, but is found in every walk of life. During the month of October alone, men and women of these trades, professions and occupations enrolled as Pelmanists:

FAMOUS MEN ENDORSE IT

Great Figures in International Life Put Themselves Squarely Behind Pelmanism

Major Gen. Sir FREDERICK MAURICE, K.C.M.G., C. B.:—

"The PELMAN System is not cram or trick, but a scientific method of training which has proved its value to the soldier in war, and it would, I am certain, be of the greatest benefit if it were adopted to Army training generally."

Sir H. RIDER HAGGARD, author of "She," "King Solomon's Mines," etc., etc.:

"I recommend PELMANISM to those who, in the fullest sense, really wish to learn and become what men and women ought to be."

Admiral Lord BERESFORD, G.C.B., G.C.V.O.:

"I judge the PELMAN System from the experience gained during the fifty years I was associated with the training of officers, men, and boys in the Royal Navy. . . . I should describe the System as inculcating self-reliance, and the perfecting of the mind, memory, and mental equipment generally."

Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR, Member of Parliament and one of the most brilliant writers and orators of modern times, is an enthusiastic believer in Pelmanism. He says:—

"Of two young men in business, one takes the PELMAN Course and the other does not. Other things being equal, the young man who takes the PELMAN Course will quickly pass the one who has not availed himself of this advantage in the race of life.

"Not one person in a thousand who takes this Course but will find it a distinct benefit, as many thousands have done before him. The PELMAN System is not only unique in itself, but deserves well of the country and of the world."

Judge BEN B. LINDSEY, world-famous founder of the Juvenile Court of Denver, Colorado:—

"I first heard of PELMANISM while in England on war work. It was the topic on every tongue. I investigated PELMANISM and came to firm belief in it. There is no earthly reason why the mind should not be trained as the body is trained, why it should not be strengthened as muscles are strengthened. It is a big thing to have PELMANISM in the United States, because it will carry a message of courage and ambition into every life willing to receive it."

Dr. FREDERIC C. HOWE, Author of "Privilege and Democracy in America," "The City," "European Cities at Work," "Why War?" etc.—

"It is one of the great misfortunes that many of the single truths of life are hidden under high-sounding names. Psychology and psychoanalysis, for instance, have values for the humblest, holding benefits that are as good and tangible as government bonds. PELMANISM can, and will, teach self-knowledge, and with self-realization is bound to come self-expression."

To Members of the A. E. F.

Hundreds of American soldiers and sailors become Pelmanists while in Europe, sending their enrollments to London. Returning to the United States, they find themselves faced by problems of distance and mail delays. Scores of letters, already received, ask the privilege of having instruction transferred from London to New York.

It has been decided to grant this privilege. Members of the A. E. F. who subscribed to Pelmanism while abroad may send their work sheets hereafter to the Pelman Institute of America, 505 Fifth Avenue. This transfer is without charge of any kind.

For service men returning to civil life Pelmanism has peculiar values. It "makes up" the time spent away from business and the professions. One hundred thousand members of the British Expeditionary Force are Pelmanists today.

General Sir ROBERT BADEN-POWELL, Founder of the Boy Scouts:

Now, in PELMANISM I find practically the same principles enunciated as in the Boy Scouts' training, including even a number of the same ideas in detail. * * *

It is because these attributes are common to both Movements that my sympathy has gone out to PELMANISM.

The PELMAN System, so far as I can judge from what I have seen of it, appeals to me because it deals with the individual, and because it offers to him in a practical form the cardinal steps to the development and strengthening of mental character, which is the foundation of success in any line of life. And many, if not most, of these steps are those which have been omitted in the average school training.

How much or how little benefit he will derive from such a scheme depends largely, of course, on the extent of the student's previous education and on his own application. I feel, however, that no man—no matter how educated, or what his age, or what his profession—who seriously takes up the course offered, can go through it without improving himself in some degree, while to many it will assuredly point a path that will help them to successful careers.

Mr. E. F. BENSON, the brilliant Author of "Dodo" and many other successful works, says:—

"My own independent judgment [of PELMANISM] is so amply endorsed that I cannot hesitate about recording my confidence in the soundness of the System and in the result which any one who honestly and consistently follows it may be entitled to expect from it. * * * The PELMAN System is an apotheosis of common sense, and I know no higher praise than that."

By JEROME K. JEROME, Author of "Three Men in a Boat," "Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow," etc., etc.:

"All book learning depends for its usefulness upon memory. We give the boy the books to learn, but we take no trouble to teach him how to remember. We give him the books first, and twenty years later let him, if he chooses, go to the PELMAN Institute to learn how to make use of them. The consequence is that two-thirds of the time he has spent upon his book learning is so much of his life wasted.

"Every youngster comes into this world provided with a fine box of tools necessary for his life's work. It is neatly packed and nothing is missing. He carries it in his brain. It contains Concentration, Observation, Imagination (the Mother of Enterprise), Organization—quite a number of useful tools, mostly ending in 'tion.' And, above all, Memory. Properly employed, they will enable him to accomplish any task to which Fate may call him. But nobody shows him how to use them. 'Oh, that's all right,' we say; 'he'll find out in time.' So he does, with luck, towards the end of middle life, after years of bungling and despair. And by a little help in the beginning, by the help of PELMANISM—I don't care what it's called, I mean by showing him how to employ and become deft in the use of his brain—how to observe truly and perceive rapidly; how to concentrate his attention and arrange his ideas; how to think and how to reason—above all, how to remember, he might have been a useful member of society from the beginning.

"As it is, he has to trust to hearing about PELMANISM. I am more than willing to help in making it known to him. He ought to have been taught it when he was young. The sooner he takes it up the better for him and for the country. It won't turn him into a genius. It won't put more brain in him than the Lord gave him. But it will enable him to make full use of the brain he has been given. Most of us at present are wasting it."

Synopsis of the Course

A Swift Survey of the Twelve Great Lessons.

The Science of Self-Realization

Everything in nature realizes itself; but civilized man often fails to do so. To succeed he must be mentally efficient, and there are many factors which operate to his advancement. Man must understand himself and his surroundings. In this lesson we point out the way. We show how the mind works. We define mental ability and show how it is developed.

Purpose or What Is Your Aim?

This is one of the most vital lessons of the course. Analyze yourself according to its instructions, and you cannot possibly emerge from the ordeal the same man; you see things in a new light, and you see yourself advancing. Interest and purpose are the key words.

Knowledge and the Senses

There are two worlds: one external and one internal. The senses act as lines of communication. Undeveloped senses mean little knowledge and poor ideas; but trained senses spell efficiency.

Will and Effort

There is a good deal of false teaching about will-power. Here we give the truth, arising out of twenty years' reflection and experience. Pelmanism helps put a man in control of himself. It believes control should come daily in the course. This is a lesson which "Shows you how—there is no irritating theory to bother you."

Concentration

Can you focus your attention on anything when you like, as long as you like, and in spite of surrounding distractions? If not, study this lesson. It places the whole subject in a new light. All the great leaders of men have been able to concentrate at will. And concentration enables you to see more and farther than the other fellow.

Mental Connection

Scores of students have said this is the best lesson of the course. Why? Because it teaches the art of thinking in a connected manner. So many persons follow the "anyhow" style; their thoughts are a tangled mass—like the stringbag. This lesson introduces science and order into your mental operations. It helps give you that kind of precise and exact thought which you notice in big men.

Imagination and Originality

Many Pelmanists enrolled to get this lesson because the subject appealed to them. It appeals to all progressive men and women. But it is only a part of Pelmanism; not the whole. Still; it is a vital part, and Pelmanists everywhere swear by it. Its methods, duly carried out, have brought wealth and happiness to thousands.

The Pursuit of Truth

Everybody is seeking the truth about something. The detective seeks it; the inventor seeks it; the trader, the theologian, the financier, the lawyer and the judge are all of them trying to discover the real facts. How is it done? By following the right methods. We give them in this lesson, along with further hints on the principles of connection.

On Personality

There is no country in the world where personality is more deeply considered than in America. In this lesson there is a new treatment of the subject: the aim is to bring out the unconscious element in character, both mental and moral. An attractive personality has powers both financial and social which know no standard of measurement.

How to Organize Your Mental Life

A PELMANIST is a realist first. If he has to earn an income he believes in earning an increasing income. Nevertheless he is not a "Scrooge." Society calls him. He must be able to discuss ideas as well as talk figures. There must be nothing narrow about him. Idealism has its claims, and in this lesson we show how to keep in touch with the more reflective side of life. A PELMANIST'S resources are not all of them in the bank; he carries some of them himself.

Your Subconscious Mind

Our minds may be likened to icebergs which, when floating in the ocean, show only a small portion of their mass above the water's level. The great bulk is below—out of sight. Our consciousness is but a part of our mental life. Deep down in the life which we call subconscious or unconscious, and its immense importance is now being realized. It is as important to you as to the professional student of psychology.

Pelmanism in Action

In the pages of the last lesson we give a resume and an application of the principles previously expounded. We do this in no formal or perfunctory manner. There is a punch in our questions, but it is always friendly. Moreover, the last worksheet is longer and fuller than any of the others. It is a kind of hand-shake at the conclusion of the course, and we have in consequence more to say to each other. We do not want you to miss any of the points contained in Lessons I to XI, and we are anxious to see you firmly established in the new foundations. Therefore, when you have covered the ground of the whole course, and realized it in its unity, the work sheet questions will help make PELMANISM a living element in your personality.

YOUR UNSUSPECTED SELF

How Pelmanism Brings the Hidden, Sleeping Qualities Into Full Development and Dynamic Action.

ARE you the man or woman you ought to be?

Beneath the Self of which you are conscious there is hidden a unsuspected Self, a thing of sleeping strength and infinite possibilities.

That Self is the man or woman you ought to be.

It is the Self of power and pride; the Self of courage, confidence and decision; the Self that will lift you from the ruts of life to the hilltops of ambition; the Self that leaves "footprints on the sands of time."

It is this unsuspected Self that occasionally rises uppermost in some crisis of life after you have set your teeth to go in and win and have won. And then you say, wonderingly: "How strange! I didn't think I had it in me."

Let that Self be always uppermost! Resolve to be always the man you ought to be!

But first discover your unsuspected Self.

Search through all the muddle and chaos of wrong thinking, of doubt and self-distrust, and find those fine qualities, those powerful potentialities, all those slumbering talents which every one of us possesses.

Developed and used, they will lead you to a higher, finer place in life; they will lift you from the dead levels of mediocrity to the broad spaces of progress. The human mind, freed from slavery to slothful habits, and trained to strength by proper exercises, has the drive of a mighty machine. It takes no account of obstacles; it refuses to be stopped by barriers.

Destiny or Decision

THESE statements are not advanced as empty speculation, but are stated as facts; facts that have behind them the testimony of more than four hundred thousand men and women who have studied Pelmanism, that science of Self Realization which bids fair to revolutionize our conceptions of "Destiny" and Possibility.

What Pelmanism has meant to thousands of them cannot be measured in mere money—the benefits are far beyond material computation.

"When I think of what I was a year ago, it does not seem as if I am the same person. Pelmanism has taught me the value of self-expression," writes one man on completing the study of the "little grey books," in which the knowledge is so stimulatingly and lucidly revealed.

"I have got into a position that I should never have managed a few months ago; in fact, I can hardly believe myself," says another.

It is this quality of laying bare unsuspected powers and potentialities in its students which is making Pelmanism a great intellectual movement.

The People's University

PELMANISM takes no account of class, creed or circumstances. Its value are for all.

Business men, from the great captains of commerce to their clerks are ardent Pelmanists.

Professional men—lawyers, doctors, clergymen, teachers, artists, authors—have come to the knowledge that Pelmanism will help them to surmount difficulties and achieve a greater degree of success in their vocations.

Tearing Aside the Veil

THE minds of many men are veiled by misunderstanding. Pelmanism tears aside this veil and shows you how your mind works and how you can make it work more efficiently. When you know your mind you are able to use it to better advantage. Instead of a brake, it acts as an accelerator.

Educationally, Intellectually, and Socially, Pelmanism is a factor whose power must be felt to be fully appreciated. To thousands Pelmanism has meant intellectual rebirth. To thousands it has been the means of discovery of latent mental powers and unsuspected talents. Thousands who would wont to go inarticulate through life have learned the joy of Self-expression. Tens of thousands, after studying the first lessons, have hastened to write glowing terms of the stimulus, sane optimism, encouragement, and energy imparted to their minds by its study.

Whether you measure the value of Pelmanism in terms of the hard cash, intellectual vigor, moral strength or everyday happiness, you cannot fail to be satisfied with its results.

Do not prejudge. You cannot arrive at an unbiased and just estimate of Pelmanism until you have investigated it.

It Fits Your Time

Pelmanism does not ask you for fixed hours of attendance and set times for study. It fits into your time instead of demanding that your time fit into it.

The PELMAN Course is arranged in a series of well-planned lessons in correspondence instruction, based upon over 20 years' experience with all classes of men and women in different parts of the world. A special system keeps the examiners in close personal touch with the students right through the course, and insures that individual attention which is so essential to the success of a study of this character.

All postal and other expenses on the outgoing lessons, etc., are prepaid by the PELMAN Institute, and the student is at no further expense beyond that of postage on communications to the Institute. The Instructive staff includes men and women of the highest qualifications and experience, and there is no question of business, educational, literary, social or psychological interest upon which the PELMAN Institute staff is not competent to give advice. No matter what your calling may be, you can depend upon sound counsel. Consult the Instructors upon difficulties in connection with your everyday work.

This privilege does not terminate with the instruction. "Once a PELMANIST, always a PELMANIST." You are as free to make use of the services of the Instruction Staff in a year or five years as while you are actually studying the course.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

THE McKINLEY PHONOGRAPH

Presents an exterior of Beauty and Refinement, which is essential in a phonograph, but is not so vitally important as

TONE QUALITY.

The greatest marvel of the case maker's art has no musical value. It is alone that counts. While the McKINLEY Phonograph has the finest case work, it also has the more important factor,

THE PERFECT VOICE

THE MOST NATURAL TONE EVER HEARD!

This statement can be instantly proved. The first hearing of the instrument will prove that

IT IS TRUE.

The better tone is due to patented features, the result of long years of research, and these features are found in the McKINLEY PHONOGRAPH only.

Hear this MASTER instrument in our DEMONSTRATING ROOMS, 1505 E. 53th-st., McKinley Bldg.

A1 HEAVY WEIGHT
SPECIALTY AND STOCK
SALESMEN LISTEN!
ARE YOU BIG LEAGUE TIMBER?

We are not selling stock, but have one of the most attractive and interesting sales propositions ever on the market.
We pay you immediately $50 for each prospect you qualify. New men have already qualified as high as ten prospects in a week. We close your prospects for you, and your commission on the average sale we close runs into the hundreds. Some of our men are making as high as several thousand dollars in a week, and a good salesman can do business every week he works.
Our lineup will make any salesman better than $25,000 a year who will qualify only once a prospect a week.
We don't know of any specialty proposition today which is as easy to sell for $250 or more as it is to qualify a prospect on our proposition, and, instead of a specialty salesman making a small commission, as he does on a specialty, you draw immediately a $50 bonus and a commission of upward of as high as $1,000.
We prefer salesmen who have made $10,000 a year or better, and you must have made $5,000 and expenses or more to qualify. This concern has been in business more than a half century, and has assets of several million dollars.
This is a sound business and our salesmen carry hundreds of indorsements from banks, bankers and representative men. We have the strongest and largest organization of its kind, and our business will stand up under the most rigid investigation. We have six sales managers, and each salesman phones in long distance every day at our expense, and is given the strongest co-operation possible.
Write, giving an outline of your experience and earnings, or call from 10 to 12 a. m. or 2 to 4 p. m., Room 301, 109 N. Dearborn-st.

A SPECIALTY SALESman who has sold or is now selling department, hardware, sporting goods, and drug stores can connect with an old established manufacturing concern. We are about to place on the market a new and fascinating product and need a man for Chicago and adjacent territory. We expect to give exclusive territory and pay good salary to right man. In answering, give experience in detail, age, married or single, salary expected, and references. All replies held in strict confidence. Address H C 465, Tribune.

A MIGHTY GOOD CHANCE!
We can use, for all or part time, several good men in Chicago, and a good man (or woman) in every city of 3,000 population not over an hour in the middle west to sell a complete line of seventeen efficient household necessities to the housewife.
The kit is high grade in quality and appearance. Sells rapidly. Our assessed our average $35.20 in weekly commissions. Individuals, working full time, have averaged $48 a week. Inexperienced men have made as high as $60 in weekly commissions for the first three months. Exceptional salesmen run $220 to $160 in commissions for individual weeks.
To qualify applicant must be not over 30 —under 26 years preferred; high school education or equivalent business experience; a man of character, a Protestant, and one whose personality commands confidence on sight. Such a man will be assigned exclusive territory and be guaranteed $50 per week. He is sure to make a success.
In replying describe yourself briefly in all the above particulars. Give your name and address, and appointment will be made for a conference in Chicago. Address H K 115, Tribune.

A CORKING SIDE LINE.
$50 weekly can be earned in commissions by forceful salesman who will work energetically an hour and a half daily selling to advertising managers of newspapers and stores a thoroughly established proposition; printed samples are all carry; proposition in big demand right now; want only experienced salesmen who cover at least three or four cities and make collections; $1,000 upward; prefer men with some advertising experience. Call suite 725, 326 W. Madison-st., between 11 a. m. and 1 p. m. or 3 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. weekdays. Don't take up time or yours unless you are a real worker.

FUTURE OF STEEL HANGS ON RATE F.O.B. PITTSBURGH

Protest of West on $5.40 a Ton 'Penalty' Gains Importance.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

A battle over "F. O. B. Pittsburgh," or the Pittsburgh "base" for steel and iron prices, is getting ready to crowd the steel strike off the screen.

Western fabricators of steel are attacking the present price system on the ground it penalizes them $5.40 a ton for living close to the Calumet mill region. They declared yesterday that W. B. Colver of the federal trade commission in a recent speech indicated that the commission will decide Dec. 2 that it has jurisdiction to make the inquiry into the trade practices of the big steel mills, as asked by the fabricators.

So far the action has been overshadowed by the walkout, but now it comes prominently into the foreground. The principle involved makes it of widespread importance not only to the basic steel industry and its branches but to all industries in which "basing points" are used. E. H. Gary of the United States Steel corporation recently termed it "the greatest lawsuit in the history of the country."

"Internal Protective Tariff."

The "F. O. B. Pittsburgh" system has been called an "internal protective tariff." Middle west consumers of steel products complain that it protects Pittsburgh at the expense of the western manufacturing centers, and of consumers in the farming regions.

Here's how it operates:

The Calumet region produces steel about 18 per cent more cheaply than Pittsburgh because it is closer to the Lake Superior ore ranges without being too far from the coal beds and the limestone. When a Chicago consumer of steel comes to buy his supplies, however, he does not profit from this natural advantage. In fact, the system transforms it into a handicap. He buys steel from South Chicago and Gary at a price equal to the Pittsburgh price, and on top of this he pays a sum equal to the freight charge per ton from Pittsburgh to the point of destination. The goods may have moved only thirty or forty miles, but the Chicago consumer pays as if they have been transported 500 miles. The complainants say it amounts to tacking a penalty of $5.40 per ton upon Chicago fabricators for a freight haul that has not taken place, and, in other words, it makes the net cost of steel delivered from the Calumet region the same as if it were produced and shipped from Pittsburgh. This, they protest, gives their Pittsburgh competitors a great advantage.

Amount of Handicap.

Even in the Illinois field, they point out, Pittsburgh dealers can undersell their Chicago rivals. For example, Chicago fabricators are put at a disadvantage as compared with Pittsburgh concerns amounting to 7 cents per hundredweight at Streator and Peoria; 5 cents at Springfield, East St. Louis, and Centralia; 12 cents at Cairo and Johnston City.

The complainants illustrate the system by saying Chicago used about 3,000 tons of steel on the Michigan avenue improvement. It was shipped from mills not more than thirty miles away, but the city had to pay freight as if it had been shipped from Pittsburgh, or $5.40 a ton for a haul that never took place.

The application for an inquiry was made last July by Attorney John S. Miller on behalf of the Western Association of Rolled Steel Consumers. It has headquarters in Chicago and 790 members in states west of the Indiana-Ohio state line. It is directed against the United States Steel corporation and some of its subsidiaries and other large mills.

Concerns Interested.

Other applicants are the state of Minnesota, the Superior Commercial club, the civic organizations of Duluth, the Southern Association of Steel Fabricators, and the Birmingham Steel Base bureau.

The rolled steel association says its members have a purchasing power of 2,000,000 tons of steel annually. It estimates that the "Pittsburgh base" system puts a burden of $40,000,000 a year on purchasers of steel goods, from wire fence to tractors, in the west and middle west. The petitioners say the price-system is in unlawful restraint of trade and is price discrimination. They declare that "the normal and reasonable price for rolled steel should be measured by the cost of production, with the addition of a reasonable profit, without the addition of a large and arbitrary increase which forms no part of the cost of production." They maintain that if a basing point is to be recognized Chicago should be it.

The system drives manufacturers to Pittsburgh who would build plants in Chicago," said one fabricator. "One reason Chicago couldn't land war contracts at the start of the war was the fact of the fictitious freight toll. This resulted in the swamping of the east with war work and in the car shortage that led to the great coal famine. From September, 1917, to July, 1918, Chicago was made a base point, which helped everybody out, but then 'f. o. b. Pittsburgh' was restored."

Many arguments are advanced by the steel companies for retention of the present price system, which grew out of the fact that the steel industry had its origin in the Pittsburgh district. They say Pittsburgh produces 35 per cent of the steel, and that the Chicago region does not produce enough to fill its own demands. From this they argue there cannot be two market prices for steel in Chicago.

Then, too, based on the f. o. b. Pittsburgh system, manufacturing and fabricating plants have been built and vast amounts of capital have been invested, and to change the practice would be to work havoc among the established manufacturing centers of the Pittsburgh region, they argue.

HESSIAN FLY MENACE.

Decatur, Ill., Nov. 22.—Macon county farmers lose $1,000,000 on the 1920 crop of wheat through Hessian fly damage, County Farm Adviser Sidney Smith announced today. Of the 40,000 acres the damage to fields is from 5 to 100 per cent.

LEADERS OFF TO CAPITAL SOON TO WIN CONVENTION

Guarantee of $150,000 Planned to Clinch Meeting Here.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Chicago moves upon Washington on Dec. 8 to clinch the Republican national convention. Backed by an expense guarantee aggregating $150,000, the best convention hall in the country—the Coliseum—and hotel facilities that can not be touched by any competing city, the Chicago delegation expects to land a decisive victory when the national committee meets on Dec. 10 at the New Willard hotel.

Fred W. Upham, chairman of the Chicago convention committee appointed by the Association of Commerce six months ago, made the flat statement yesterday that thirty-four of the fifty-three national committeemen—seven more than a majority—have pledged themselves to vote for Chicago.

The pro-Chicago campaign has been going on ever since Mr. Upham's committee was organized. It is to present Chicago's proposition formally and to fight off the eleventh hour attack started by St. Louis that the committee has planned a thoroughly organized contest in Washington.

Prepared With Big Offer.

"We will go prepared to offer the Coliseum, arranged as it never has been, and with 1,200 more seats available than in 1916," Mr. Upham said. "We propose to guarantee all the convention expenses, which totaled $110,000 in 1916 and will reach $150,000 next year. We will have the argument of Chicago's unsurpassed hotel accommodations for national convention purposes."

Mr. Upham gave these as the expense figures that were paid by Chicago for the 1916 convention.

National committee bills	$54,860.63
Local committee on arrangements	14,512.70
Rent of Coliseum	10,000.00
Contract to prepare Coliseum	23,400.00
Extra balcony	5,593.95
Music	1,806.00
Total	$110,173.28

His $150,000 Guarantee.

"We stand prepared to guarantee a similar expense account that will reach $150,000 because of the increase in cost of all kinds since 1916," Mr. Upham said. "In 1904, when Roosevelt was nominated, the Coliseum seated 8,700 persons. In 1916 we had seats for 12,200. Our convention hall plans, which have been fully matured, now provide 13,400 seats."

An even dozen of the national committee members, at Mr. Upham's invitation, will accompany the Chicago committee to Washington on a special train that will leave Chicago at 10:30 a. m., Dec. 8, over the Pennsylvania.

St. Louis Grows Active.

The twelve who have accepted are: Will H. Crocker, California; Hubert Work, Colorado; John W. Hart, Idaho; John T. Adams, Iowa; Fred Stanley, Kansas; Thomas A. Marlow, Montana; Patrick Sullivan, Wyoming; R. B. Howell, Nebraska; J. J. McGraw, Oklahoma; W. C. Cook, South Dakota; A. T. Rogers, Wisconsin; Ralph E. Williams, Oregon.

Chicago headquarters have been engaged on the parlor floor of the New Willard, and will be opened on the morning of Dec. 9.

St. Louis has been active within the last ten days. One argument that has been raised against Chicago is that it is in Gov. Lowden's home state. This has been countered in the minds of many of the national committeemen by the knowledge that St. Louis is just across the river from southern and central Illinois, where the sentiment for Lowden for president is said to be practically unanimous.

Here's Chicago Body.

Chairman Upham's committee has Col. William Nelson Pelouze for vice chairman and A. Sheldon Clark for secretary.

The members of the committee that will go to Washington are: H. M. Byllesby, A. Sheldon Clark, Rufus Dawes, John B. Drake, Evan A. Evans, Capt. Marshall Field, Charles W. Folds, E. R. Graham, Edward Hines, Samuel Insull, S. R. Kaufman, D. F. Kelly, L. E. Kuppenheimer, William Wrigley Jr., Charles V. Barrett, Clifford Arrick, Lieut. Gov. John G. Oglesby, Robert H. McCormick, Arthur Meeker, Harry H. Merrick, Col. Pelouze, George F. Porter, George M. Reynolds, Julius Rosenwald, J. Harry Selz, Edwin W. Sims, George M. Spangler, Robert W. Stewart, B. E. Sunny, Louis F. Swift, Thomas E. Wilson, Stewart Spaulding, Maj. E. H. Williams, Seymour Morris, W. E. Hull, D. E. Shanahan, L. L. Emerson, John M. Glenn, and Charles S. Dewey.

Two More Parties to Go.

The Hamilton club convention committee also will go to Washington over the Pennsylvania at 10:30 a. m. Dec. 8, taking a delegation of seventy-five club members, headed by President A. N. Marquis.

Mayor Thompson, member of the national committee from Illinois, will head a party of 150 of his political friends, who will depart for Washington the same evening over the Baltimore and Ohio.

UNCLE SAM AS SANTA RISES TO REMIND YOU OF HIS "BABY BONDS"

WHEN you are thinking of buying Christmas presents Uncle Sam wants you to consider his new "baby bonds," the $100 and $1,000 treasury savings certificates. They are on sale at all the banks at "bargain prices" this month and next. The price for a $100 certificate this month is $84.40; next month, $84.60, and for a $1,000 certificate, this month, $844; next month, $846. On Jan. 1, 1924, the government will pay you the face value of your certificate.

The "baby bonds" are issued only in registered form, with the name of the owner written in at the time of purchase. You can cash them on ten days' notice. They cannot depreciate in value, not being subject to market fluctuations, and as obligations of the government they are absolutely safe. They yield better than 4¼ per cent and carry tax exemption privileges.

Uncle Sam wants these new bonds widely distributed for the sake of the country's financial prosperity. He reminds you that when you finally cash in your bonds the money probably will buy considerably more of anything than it will now.

The Home of your dreams

Rose-clad in January and immune from the rigors of heat and cold, your ideal home is ready for you in San Diego, California, where the sun shines more than 350 days each year.

Here, orchards and plantations of the apple and pear, the navel orange and the fig, the grapefruit, lemon and guava, vineyards and produce gardens, slope to the edge of bay and ocean and rise through upland valleys around a thriving modern city of 85,000 inhabitants.

Warships in the bay, army and navy aviators flying daily over the city, the free out-of-door pipe-organ recital every afternoon in the great park, the early Spanish mission buildings, four hundred miles of splendid boulevard reaching into the mountain passes, combine to make every day an adventure in happiness in

San Diego California

The United States Government is spending more than twenty million dollars in San Diego in permanent stations for its air, land and sea forces, because official tests proved the advantages, in comfort and efficiency, of its equable climate and continuous sunshine.

Through Pullman service between San Diego and Chicago on the new San Diego and Arizona Railway, in connection with the Rock Island and Southern Pacific, commences December 10, 1919. A delightful trip in winter months through mild climate and new and interesting country.

This Booklet tells why. Sign the coupon and get it free by return mail.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

JANITOR WANTS BUT LITTLE HERE BELOW, HE SAYS

Only Hand-Picked Pay-day, Extras and Choice of Daily Tasks.

There is more to the janitor than appears on the sooty surface, it is shown by the new agreement being circulated among flat owners and agents. The agreement defines the janitors' work and "salaries" and tells what they will and will not do.

"The duties of the janitor shall be to keep the building clean and warm and supplied with hot water, compatible with the fuel furnished," it reads. "No janitor shall be required to put in coal or window cords or to put up storm windows and doors. No janitor's wife shall be hired for janitor work. The janitor shall receive his orders from one employer only."

Even Name the Pay Day.

"No janitor shall be required to remove the litter caused by other workmen, or to wash woodwork in the flats. No janitor shall do work which will conflict with any trade union, except in cases of emergency; his employer shall hire only union men to do other work.

"The janitor's salary must be paid before two days after the day the month is up."

The janitors now wish a minimum of $5.25 a month for a flat renting for $30 or less, $5 50 for flats ranging from $30 to $60, and more in proportion to rents.

Roughly this means a raise of $2 a month on each flat instead of the $1.50 the union men at first said they desired. All sorts of scales per flat for different sized buildings are in the agreement. For exclusive service up to and including fifteen flats the janitors ask $150 a month.

Extra! Extra! Extra!

They wish $25 a month extra for answering telephones or bells, $1 for each automobile, $10 to attend to an elevator, $10 for attending an ice machine, and $5 per pump for any pumps around the buildings. They also desire double pay when employed only in the winter, while they will take extra money in lieu of "healthy, sanitary living rooms, redecorated at least once in two years."

Extra pay for handling ashes and fifteen days' notice in case of discharge also are asked. An owner of a building having good basement flats who prefers to rent them is to pay the janitor $50 a month extra in lieu of living quarters.

The Chicago real estate board has determined to fight these demands by ousting striking janitors from their homes.

Ackley Tells Owners' Side.

The situation, which is of interest to both tenants and owners, was explained yesterday by Ivan O. Ackley, president of the Chicago real estate board, as follows:

"We have an agreement with the janitors' union which does not expire until Jan. 1, 1920. If the men go out before that time it is a violation of their agreement. The janitors broke off negotiations with the Chicago real estate board and are now trying to force owners and agents to sign their agreement which binds the owner to pay an increase of 57 per cent and also forces him to agree to employ nothing but union labor in any capacity. Under this plan a man could be fined, or otherwise punished, for washing his own windows.

"At a well attended meeting of owners and agents it was agreed that the demands of the men could not be granted. We are now sending out letters to all agents and owners urging them not to sign the agreements which the janitors are trying to force upon them.

See Higher Rents.

"This matter is of great interest to tenants because if the men succeed in getting their demands the increased cost of operating buildings will be reflected in an increase of rents, because the owners are now carrying as large a load as is possible.

"Janitors are now allowed to have living quarters in buildings they care for. If they strike they will automatically sever their present relation of master and servant, which is recognized by law, and will become liable to instant eviction. If they are evicted, where can they go? We can easily rent their quarters. If any janitor strikes we can quickly get a court order to evict him and put his goods on the sidewalk. We are not courting trouble, but there is no reason why the Chicago people should be coerced into granting unreasonable demands.

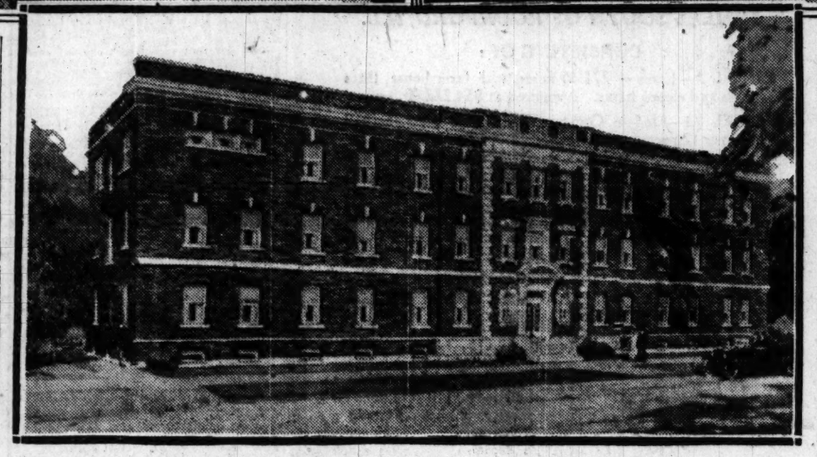
"The janitors now earn from $125 to $200 a month and get their living quarters free. They receive $3.50 a month for each flat under their care, and they demand $5.50, in addition to having rooms free of charge in which they live.

7,000 Janitors.

"There are 200,000 property owners in Chicago and 7,000 janitors. Many of these janitors are unable to speak English. Many of them are citizens of foreign countries, who have no loyalty toward America. Are the people of Chicago willing to allow such men to dictate what the great body of Chicago property owners shall pay?

"Our answer to this, as expressed in open meeting, is that they shall not dictate to us, and that we are ready to fight this thing out. We want to urge upon all property holders and agents the importance of standing together and not yielding by signing the agreements which the men are taking around. We will have the situation well in hand provided individual owners do not weaken, and we are ready to do everything in our power to prevent an increase in rents for such an unjustified reason.

"We are confident that the majority of janitors do not want to strike, and that the matter can be settled, provided the owners and agents do not allow themselves to be coerced into yielding to unreasonable demands, based upon a broken agreement. There would be little use in owners making separate agreements with men who will not keep their agreements."



Here are three buildings, of widely different types, which indicate the variety of construction work now going on in Chicago. The upper building, at the left, is to be put up at the northwest corner of Fifty-third street and Dorchester avenue. It will contain ninety-one small apartments, all furnished. It is to be an apartment building of the semi-hotel class. At the right, upper, is the new building being put up for the Buckley-Dement company, which will be used exclusively for business purposes. The lower picture represents the new Jackson Park hospital, which has much the appearance of an apartment building. It will stand at 7531 to 7541 Stony Island avenue. It will be of reinforced concrete and steel construction and will cost $150,000. Many new ideas of hospital construction will be utilized in this building.

CHICAGO PLAN IMPROVEMENTS BOOST REALTY

The prospect of improvements to be made according to the projects of the Chicago plan commission appears to be having a marked effect on property in the vicinity of the proposed changes. The improvement of Michigan boulevard, north from Randolph street has already had a strong stimulating effect on values, and the prospect of changes along South Water street is now showing its influence.

The great increase in values that will accompany each development has been one of the arguments brought forward by the Chicago plan commission, and the evidences of the benefits that are to be expected in other parts of the city, as soon as the work is well advanced, is coming to notice in a manner that cannot fail to attract favorable attention.

The southwest corner of East South Water street and Beaubien court, 60 by 130 feet, has been purchased by the Northern Trust company, as trustee, from the Chicago Title & Trust company, as trustee, for $320,000. John R. Magill & Co. were the brokers. The east forty feet of this land is improved with a seven story manufacturing building.

Adjoining this property on the west is a strip, 9 x130 feet, at the southeast corner of South Water street and Michigan avenue, which was purchased in April for the same principal by the Northern Trust company, from Robert A. Uhlein for $200,000. This transaction attracted much attention because of the high price paid for a nine foot strip of land. The combined purchases give the new owner 130x69 feet, with three street frontages, 130 feet on Michigan, 60 feet on East South Water, and 130 feet on Beaubien court. The total cost is $520,000, or $59.97 a square foot. A four story building, 29x 130, is to be put up on the west half of the property. It is to contain stores and offices and will be ready May 1.

South Evanston People Push Annexation Plan

Residents of South Evanston are agitating the question of annexation to Chicago. An organization has been formed, which is known as the Ridge Boulevard Improvement association, the members of which live in the district bounded by the Chicago and Northwestern railway tracks, Asbury avenue, and south of Mulford street in Evanston. The association will seek to obtain a number of improvements and will try to bring about annexation to Chicago.

South Shore Drive Site at 69th Brings $60,000

The northwest corner of South Shore drive and Sixty-ninth street has been bought by George G. Brandenberg from De Forrest A. Matteson for an indicated consideration of $6,000, which is at the rate of $240 per front foot, along the boulevard. The tract is 250 x175 feet. Hedberg & Bistor represented both parties in the transaction. It is understood that the purchase was made for investment and that the property will be restricted to private residences exclusively, with building line restrictions.

STILL IN NEED OF CENSUS TAKERS IN CITY'S WARDS

John J. Gaynor, supervisor of the first census district of Illinois, which comprises the thirty-five wards of Chicago, announced yesterday that preliminary work was drawing to a satisfactory close. The thirty-five wards, which have been subdivided into 2,284 districts, require a total of at least one enumerator to a district. Judging from the progress already made in the examinations, Mr. Gaynor expects to finish the work by the middle of next week.

"However," said Mr. Gaynor, "we still have room for more applicants and want to hear from young people who would be interested in the work. Discharged soldiers always are given a preference, and we have a large number of them who have taken the examinations. Ex-service men and students in universities, above 18 years old, are especially desired. Persons capable of speaking two or more languages can always be used."

The examinations, which are being held daily on the tenth floor of the county building, are under the direction of Mrs. Veronica O'Gallagher. Such a large number of applicants to take the examinations for the position of census enumerators appeared yesterday that an additional room had to be used.

FLAT PROPERTY AND BUILDING SHOW ACTIVITY

$650,000 Structure to Be Erected on the South Side.

Considerable activity was shown in apartment property during the week, with plans for construction to meet the pressing demand much in evidence. One of the proposed structures is to stand at the northwest corner of Dorchester avenue and Fifty-third street, on a lot 75x160 feet. This building will supply the needs of those who wish to live in small quarters with every convenience at hand. The building will be eight stories and will cost $650,000. It will contain ninety-one apartments of one, two, and three rooms, each of which will be completely furnished. Each suite will have a kitchenette, with a complete set of kitchen utensils.

The main floor will be devoted to a dining room, lobby and parlors, the structure being, in fact, a semi-hotel. It is to be ready for occupancy by May 1, 1920. Rentals are estimated at $125,000. A loan of $475,000 has been negotiated through Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company. John A. Carroll & Bro. will be the renting agents. Eric Hall is the architect.

$50,000 Flat Sale.

Arthur B. Cody and Hiram Cody, as trustees, have sold the new fifteen apartment building at the southwest corner of Lincoln street and Argyle to Hyman Rosenfeld for a reported consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $33,000. The lot is 60x150 feet. Rentals are about $8,000 a year. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the business property at the northeast corner of Potomac and Leavitt streets. Hedberg & Bistor represented both sides.

Henry Veeder, attorney, has sold an eighteen apartment building at the northeast corner of Fifty-fourth street and Prairie avenue to Albert F. Marthe for $48,000 cash. The property was sold clear of incumbrance. The lot is 100 by 170 feet. Thomas H. Kelly & Son acted for Mr. Veeder and Winston & Co. for the purchaser.

Mrs. Jennie A. Lytle has bought an apartment building at 638-640 Sheridan road from Mrs. Katherine Pyne Hurley for $35,000, clear of incumbrance. The sale was negotiated by H. W. Croxton.

Kenwood Deal for $57,500.

A twelve apartment building at the southeast corner of Fifty-third street and Kenwood avenue has been purchased by David Goodman from Alfred Guthman for a reported consideration of $57,500, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000. In part payment Mr. Goodman gave a six apartment building at 5842 Harper avenue, valued at $22,500, subject to an incumbrance of $11,000. W. A. Conran of the Hool Realty company represented both parties.

John A. Olson has sold to William S. Powell a six apartment building at 1250 Hood avenue at a reported price of $35,000. S. P. Phillips of O. Reuter & Co. represented both parties.

Two buildings, containing a total of twenty apartments, which form an "L" around the northeast corner of Bennett avenue and Seventy-third street, have been transferred by the Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company to Franklin C. Browne, subject to an incumbrance of $31,000. Revenue stamps indicate a value of $50,000 for the equity.

Benjamin J. Huttner has purchased from Daniel B. Scully the two high class six apartment buildings located at 5222-24 and 5226-28 Ingleside avenue with a frontage of 52x109 feet to each building; the consideration is reported to be $80,000 with mortgages to the amount of $35,000. The property was taken in for investment purposes to fill out the buyer's holdings.

It is to be in the form of a first mortgage bond issue, underwritten by Greenebaum Sons' Bank and Trust company, bearing 6 per cent interest and maturing serially in from two to ten years. The loan is secured on the Chicago Beach hotels at Hyde Park boulevard and the lake.

The land includes fourteen acres, with a frontage of 752 feet on the boulevard and an average depth of 500 feet. The present improvements consist of a six story structure containing 450 guest rooms. WEEK'S LEASES SHOW BUSINESS PROPERTY ACTIVE Kingsbakers to Pay $350,000 for a 13 Year Holding.

Leases negotiated during the week indicate that business property is in good demand.

Kingsbaker & Co., manufacturers of men's clothing, have purchased from Philipsborn's, Inc., the lease on the seven story fireproof building at the northwest corner of Peoria and Van Buren streets. For the remaining thirteen years of the original twenty year lease, which was given by the Northern Trust company, Kingsbaker & Co. will pay Philipsborn's $350,000, which includes also a substantial bonus to the sellers, it is said.

The structure contains about 90,000 square feet, and was erected about seven years ago. Due to the fact that it contains practically every known means of fire prevention, the building has a reputation of bearing the lowest insurance rate of any like establishment west of the river. To maintain permanent lighting on all four sides the Kingsbaker company purchased from Philipsborn's the vacant 25x120 feet adjoining on the north for $10,000. Kingsbaker & Co. will remove to their new home as soon as the Philipsborns' new building now under construction is completed. The purchase was represented by E. H. Ritzwoller and the seller by M. Philipsborn Jr., the negotiations being carried on through Alex. Friend & Co.

The building will have a sprinkler system and all improvements for the clothing business. It will be put up by the Waldemar Construction company. Dubin & Eisenberg are the architects and engineers.

Willis & Frankenstein have leased for the Windsor-Clifton Hotel company, of which S. Lester is president, the stores at 18 and 20 East Monroe street, located in the Windsor-Clifton Hotel building, Monroe street and Wabash avenue, to the Bedford Shirt company for a term commencing Dec. 1 at a rental of $90,000. United Cigars Lease.

The United Cigar Stores company has leased from Thomas Chamales the store and basement northwest corner Sixty-third street and Cottage Grove for ten years and five months from Dec. 1 at a term rental of $102,000. The lessees will retain one of the newly formed stores for their own use and will sublet the others.

H. B. RILEY URGES NEW TAX LAWS IN CONSTITUTION

Tells State Real Estate Men of Need for Changes.

The necessity for giving proper attention to taxation at the coming constitutional convention was brought to notice in a paper by Harrison B. Riley, president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, which was read at the convention of the Real Estate Association of the State of Illinois. The convention took place in Champaign Friday and Saturday.

In his paper Mr. Riley said:

"It is undeniable that real estate, and, therefore, the home keeper, pays an increasingly unfair amount for the support of the government and the convenience of the people. A lazy indifference and a stupid lack of intelligence in the levy and collection of taxes must be corrected, so that real estate bears only an equal proportion of the expenses of government and of civilization with other classes of property.

80 Per Cent of Revenue.

"Heretofore real estate has furnished over 80 per cent of the revenue needed by the state, the several counties and the unnumbered municipal and quasi-municipal corporations.

"Personal property, which equals in very likely exceeds the value of real estate, has escaped paying any fair proportion of governmental expenses.

"I suggest that the new constitution shall have only two restrictions on the power of the general assembly to levy and collect taxes—viz.: that all taxes shall be equal and uniform.

"The provisions for taxation as special assessment in the new constitution should be so flexible that property and earning capacity can be reached and an income tax used as a substitute for specific taxes upon classes of property difficult to reach or the value of which it is impossible to determine except by an assessive body much too heavy and too dangerous in character to be tolerated.

Concerning Public Service.

"With reference to public service corporations, the constant battles between our governments on the one hand and the corporations on the other are wasteful, dispiriting, and obstructive to progress. The public officeseekers to make an issue of public service is as great as the temptation of operators to show great profits, and between the two the voting and investing public are made confused and distrustful."

Attractive Investment Opportunity

To Acquire 100 to 500 Acres of Commercial Apple Orchard In Bearing in the State of Washington

The PALOUSE CORPORATION is one of the largest growers of Northwestern boxed apples, owning 1,762 acres in commercial bearing in the famous Palouse country, close to Spokane.

Its product is marketed under the famous SKOOKUM Brand.

The 1920 crop is estimated at 250,000 boxes, with an estimated net profit per box of from fifty cents to a dollar.

The Company has decided to reduce the size of its project, and now offers for sale 100 to 500 acres in bearing.

The increase in volume of its crop, beginning next year, makes this step advisable, the enterprise being too large to be efficiently operated under one ownership.

Bearing orchards in Washington, in small tracts, are today earning up to $500 to $1,000 per acre and selling up to $2,500 per acre.

To dispose of this property in small tracts will not accomplish the company's aim, hence the offering is in 100 acre units.

This is an attrarctive project for acquisition by a syndicate or company to be organized to engage in the Orchard Industry.

Our Company will, if desired, purchase an interest from the new owners.

All necessary marketing arrangements for handling the crop, together with modern packing houses, storage facilities and equipment will be included in the purchase.

The Orchard Industry faces five to eight years of unquestioned prosperity and profits. New orchards are now being planted. This one is ready to pay without the usual eight-year development period.

Complete particulars as to terms of payment, price per acre and other data of interest will be forwarded upon request. Address the undersigned.

JAMES R. WILSON, Treasurer.
